AN. MCCCXXVII. 1, 2. Edward III.

AN inquisition now taken in Kent reports, that Thomas de Gardiner held lands in Coges, Somerton, and Feringford in com. Oxon, by the service of paying yearly fifty-two shillings and sixpence for the ward of Dover castle, and that John Gillard of Twyford was his heir, aged twenty-seven years<sup>a</sup>.

John de Handlo knight of Borstall, was now in the wars of Scotland in the retinue of Henry earl of Lancaster; and had this year a summons to parliament as a baron<sup>b</sup>.

When the canons of St. Frideswide in the 19. of Edw. I. had recovered from the king their right of advowson to the church of Oakle, with the chapels of Brill, Borstall, and Adingrave, and had farther obtained licence from Henry bishop of Lincoln, to appropriate the said church and chapels upon the death or cession of the then present incumbent William de Whytington; they prevailed at last with the said rector to make a solemn resignation on the 24th of March, 1326: presentibus discretis viris domino Johanne vicario ecclesie de Wyngchendon suppriori decano de Wodesdon, Wilhelmo de Warmeston, et Johanne Brun, et aliis Lincoln. dioc. testibus ad premissa vocatis specialiter et rogatis. And on the next day, being the eighth cal. of April 1327, the said rural subdean of Wodesdon, by mandate from Henry bishop of Lincoln, inducted the prior and canons of St. Frideswide in the person of John de Abingdon, into the church of Oakle and the chapels annexed; presentibus Wilhelmo de Warmeston, Ricardo le Wardi, et multis aliis<sup>c</sup>. Note, this was no new appropriation, but a return to their formerly usurped tithes, of which they had frequent possession and frequent ejections, by long disputes with the king, and tedious appeals to Rome. Their latest induction had been on St. Lucy's day 1220, in the fifth of Hen. III. when Richard rural dean of Wodesdon performed that office, and certified it by special instrument ending thus; Ego et plures alii viri fide digni de capitulo de Wottesdon in hujus rei testimonium huic scripto sigilla nostra apposuimus<sup>d</sup>.

The king by special charter granted to James le Boteller earl of Ormond in Ireland, the privilege of free warren in his manor of Fretwell, nigh to Burcester in this county<sup>1</sup>. The church of Fretwell had been given to the canons of St. Frideswide in Oxford, by Robert, and confirmed by Ralph Foliot<sup>e</sup>, who died in the sixth of king John<sup>h</sup>. And there being within the said parish a hide of land called Sulthorn hide, the rector of Sulthorn (now Souldern) had claimed the tithes of it; upon which a controversy depending, the prior and canons of St. Frideswide appealed to pope Gregory the Ninth, who delegated the priors of St. John's and St. James, and the dean of Northampton, to examine and determine the cause, who adjudged the right to the priory of St. Frideswide; and required the archdeacon of Oxford, and the rural dean of Heyford, to execute their sentence, and drew up their decree in this form.

In the year MCCXIX. a suit was again commenced on this title by the rector of Souldern: when the prior and canons again appealed to Rome, and the pope delegated the priors of Dunstaple and St. Alban's, and the archdeacon of St. Alban's, to be judges of the cause; who confirmed the former sentence, and obliged Richard then rector of Souldern to take an oath, that he would never make claim or pretence to the tithe of the said land; commanding the ru-

The appropriation of the church of Fretwell was confirmed to the prior and canons of St. Frideswide by the diocesan Robert bishop of Lincoln, in this form.

*Robertus Dei gracia Linc. episcopus universis ecclesie catholice filiis salutem. Donationem quam Robertus Foliot dilectis filiis nostris canonicis regularibus B. There had been a long controversy depending between Sir Edmund de Lodelow rector of the church of Beckley, and the vicar of Oakle, and the appropriators of that church, the prior and convent of St. Frideswide, concerning the tithe of a certain wood called Godstowe wood; which each of the parties asserted to be within the limits of their respective parish: when at last, by a view of the parishioners and neighbouring inhabitants, a return was made upon oath, that the said wood, being within the forest of Bernwood, was for that reason within the bounds of the parish of Oakle, and therefore the said vicar and the appropriators had a right to all tithes and profits thence arising. Which judgment was ratified on the thir-

About this time a controversy arose between the abbey of Osney and the priory of Burcester, upon their portion of tithes in the manor of Ardington, com. Berks ; to compose which difference, a report was made under the hands and seals of the most ancient neighbours, who testified the right and title to belong to the said priory of Burcester, under this form.

This ys a remembraunce that makith mencyon by witnesse of olde men the whech had gadred the tythe parte of the korne of the pryory of Byrsetar of the parsonage in Ardyngton, that is, furst an olde man that is clepid Jon Bufforde of Wantynge, he rennyng x<sup>l</sup>. viii<sup>o</sup>. yerly, he doth say as he wole answere to for God and man that of the acre in the oupersyd of the portwey, that is iclepid Ric Daves ionde, and also forthermore of an half acre of holyn dicke that the pryor of Byrsetar should have al the hool and the abby of Osney non, for as he seith in hys tyme, hys felow that was the servant of the abbottis heyd nothyng. And the next after him Jon Dalfreyman, and by al these tymes they hadden non. And then after that tyme when Walter Richemon on the abbotis side, and the foresaid Jon Bufforde on the priours syde, gedereiden, the foresaid Walter bare alway the two partes of the acre on the south syde, and then come Sir John Bascal and bi hys evedence he fett it out of the abbotis barne and bare it into the parsons barne. Forthermore aftir hym come Jon Pngram dwellynge now at Wlantynge, and he seith as he wole answeze to fore God and man in al hys tyme as in xxvi. yere he remembiz that the abbot of Osney shuld non have of the forescyd acre and a half acre: and thise two men gedern it bi thi toznes. Thence comi another man that be Jon Wilton now dwellyng at Wlantynge, and he gedereid it in Sir Wylliam Welforde tyme, and he seyth as he wole answeze to God and man that in hys tyme that the abbot of Osney shuld non have, and he gedereid it vi. yere, he zennys xvi. yere. And that thys ys trewe that ys to forseyde, all we Jon Bufforde, Jon Pngram, and Jon Wilton, to thys wytyng setten to our sealys, and if need be that they wol not leeve us, we al graunten that yche of us wole bynge syn-glerly by hymself on his syde xii. men to answeze and seye, that as we seyn they wole answeze for to for God<sup>r</sup>.

To the original parchment a label appends, with three seals defaced.

The church of Erdlington, or Ardington, had been given to the priory of Burcester by their founder Gilbert Basset; and some tithes in the said manor were given to the abbey of Oseney, and had been confirmed by this charter of Richard de Camvill.

Sciant presentes et futuri quod ego Ricardus de Camuilla dedi et concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi Deo et ecclesie S. Marie de Osen. et canonicis ibidem Deo servientibus pro salute mea et uxoris mee et filiorum meorum unum mesnagium cum superedificacione in villa mea de Erdinton, scilicet illud mesnagium quod est ante domum David prepositi tenendum de me et heredibus meis in liberam et pu-

AN. MCCCXXX. 4, 5. Edward III.

Sir Richard d'Amory having been summoned to parliament from the twentieth of Edw. II. to this fourth of Edw. III. inclusive, died within this same year<sup>r</sup>; and seems to have been buried in the church of the priory of Burcester, where Leland reports many of this family were interred<sup>s</sup>. He left Margaret his widow, to whom was assigned for dowry the manor of Buckenhall, and lands in Sexynton within the said village<sup>t</sup>: with other certain rents and services in Blechesdon, Godyngton, and Hedyngton, com. Oxon; which Margaret was living in the twenty-third of Edw. III. and was by inquisition then found to hold the said manor of Buckenhall, for the service of one knight's fee<sup>u</sup>. He left Richard his son and heir a minor, who, in the tenth of Edw. III. making proof of his age and doing his homage, had livery of his lands<sup>x</sup>.

There was now a trial in Hilary term in the King's Bench at Westminster, between the prior of St. Frideswide, Oxon, and Sir John Handlo of Borstall, for the manor of Pidington within the parish of Ambrosden: which manor had been given by Malcolm king of Scots and earl of Huntendon to the said priory; but was afterwards detained by Simon the last earl of Northampton and Huntendon, and the alienation had since passed through several hands.

The prior of St. Frideswide, by William de Marston his attorney, now pleaded, that the said manor of Pidington was the right of his church, and that Helias his predecessor was seised of the said manor in the time of Henry III. Sir John de Handlo, by William de Coleshall his attorney, answered, that he rightfully held the said manor, being demised to him for the term of his life by Hugh Despensar sen.

The said prior and canons of St. Frideswide suffered another grievance in these parts, by having the tithe of under-wood within the forest of Bernwood and their parish of Oakley, detained from them by Sir John Maltravers, the king's forester on this side Trent. For redress of this injury they petitioned the king and his parliament held at Winchester in this fourth of Edw. III. upon which the king commanded the keeper of the forest, that he should cause the tithes to be justly paid, as had been done in the time of his progenitors.

John de Eltham, second son of king Edw. II. being in parliament in 2. Edw. III. advanced to the title of earl of Cornwall, had now a grant from his brother of the castle, town, and honour of Walingford, com. Berks, with its members; and of the honour of St. Walerie, com. Oxon<sup>c</sup>; within the first of which honours was included the manor of Burcester, and within the latter the manor of Ambrosden.

Sir Nicholas de la Beche (who from the king soon after obtained the reversion of the manor of Pidington) granted now to Sir John de Sutton (who came in a short time to the actual possession of the said manor of Pidington) and to Isabel his wife, ten marks to be received yearly out of the manor of Watlington, com. Oxon, during the lives of Sir John de Handlo and Sibil the widow of Adam Plokenet. For which, in exchange, the said Sir John de Sutton granted to the said Sir Nicholas and his heirs the manor of Bradfeld, and all his lands and tenements in Bastleden, com. Ess. with the advowson of that church<sup>d</sup>.

Sir John de Molyms, of Stoke-Pogeys in com. Bucks, (who was soon after lord of the manors of Brill and Ludgarshale,) gave now to the archbishop of Canterbury and his successors the advowson of the church of Trengre, in com. Bucks, which he had lately obtained from the king<sup>c</sup>. In this year he was one of those worthy persons, who entered the castle of Nottingham in the night time, and there surprised Roger de Mortimer earl of March, for which action he shortly after had his pardon<sup>f</sup>.

These neighbouring parts were concerned in the privilege granted to Ralph lord Nevill of Raby, who obtained a charter from the king for a market weekly on Tuesday at Aynho, com. Northamp. and a fair upon the eve and day of St. Michael, and two days following<sup>g</sup>. This manor of Aynho came to this Ralph lord Nevill in right of his mother Eufemia, the daughter of Sir John de Clavering, who having had summons to parliament from the 28th of Edw. I. to the 5th of Edw. III. inclusive, departed this life at the said manor of Aynho in the octaves of Epiphany, an. 1332. 6. Edw. III. Whence being carried to the abbey of Langley, (of his ancestor's foundation,) he had sepulture in the quire of that conventual church<sup>h</sup>.

This country was perhaps no less affected with that patent of the king, which granted that a flagon of wine in Oxford should be sold but one halfpenny dearer than in London<sup>i</sup>. But they were most concerned in the honour and the joy for the birth of the king's eldest son Edward at Woodstock, on Friday June the 15th, at ten in the morning, whose nurse was Joan de Oxford, to whom the king afterward gave a pension of ten pounds yearly: the rocker was Maud Plumpton, to whom was given an annual pension of ten marks<sup>k</sup>.

Eubulo le Strange, who had married Alice daughter and heir of Henry Lacy earl of Lincoln, and relict of Thomas earl of Lancaster, did now obtain a grant from the crown, wherein the king remitted all claim to the manors of Colham and Eggemere, in com. Mid. and to the manors of Midlington and Burcester with their appurtenances,

Some have thought it observable, that the most ancient grant whereby some revenue hath been given out of the profits of the county for the better support of the dignity of an earl, is that which was given to Hugh de Aldithley (created earl of Gloucester in parliament the 11th of Edw. III.) by his creation charter; it being in lieu of the third penny of the pleas of the county, which anciently belonged to the earls. So the great Mr. Selden in his Titles of Honour, p. 660, which Sir W. Dugdale cites, and assents to it in his Baronage, tom. 1. p. 751. Had they meant of a reserve made expressly in a charter of creation, that possibly might have been the first instance: but while they speak of such a grant in general, it could not be the first, when this patent was six years before it.

The occasion of this grant to Sir Eubulo and his lady was the death of Roger Mortimer earl of March, hanged at the Elms near London, on the eve of St. Andrew in the year preceding. Upon whose fall, several persons were restored to their lands, and released of those forfeitures imposed on them by that earl. Among others, Sir Eubulo le Strange and Alice his wife had lands restored to them to the yearly value of 1200. marks<sup>n</sup>. The said Sir Eubulo in the parliament convened in Sept. 30. with eleven other knights, was manuprisor or security for Hugh Spencer, son of Hugh Spencer the younger, who, for his great valour in holding out his castle against the queen mother, was allowed to compound for his life, and had now his pardon<sup>o</sup>.

John de Eltham earl of Cornwall, being possessed of the honour of St. Walery, claimed the advowson of the church of Mixbury in the deanery of Burcester, as belonging to the said honour; and in Michaelmas term had a trial upon the right of patronage with the bishop of Rochester. His council pleaded, that while the said honour was in the crown, the king presented to the said church of Mixbury; then Richard earl of Cornwall, and after, Edmund earl of Cornwall, presented to the same their respective clerks. The issue was, that in Easter term the year following the earl was nonsuited, and the right of patronage confirmed to the see of Rochester<sup>p</sup>. Among the rights and privileges of this bishopric taken in the year 1360, there is an account of those churches which belong to the joint presentation of the bishop and the chapter, wherein the chapter has no other right, but only to affix their seal, the bishop nomi-

On Friday after the feast of St. John Baptist, the said master John, son of Robert Clerk, did demise and grant to the said John Phelip and Alice his wife, the capital house of the messuage which he had lately so purchased, to hold for their lives or the life of either of them, for the yearly rent of sixpence, to be paid at the two most usual feasts; and after their death or the death of the longest liver of them, the said house to return to the said Mr. John Clerk and his heirs. This agreement made by mutual indenture in parchment, of which both parts are preserved, and the labels appending, but the seals broke off<sup>s</sup>.

The said Sir John de Handlo held the adjoining manor of Ludgarshale for his life, by the grant of Hugh Despensar sen. late earl of Winchester; but the king seized it as an escheat, and now gave the said manor with its appertenances to Sir John de Molins and his heirs<sup>k</sup>: who having purchased the manors of Datchet and Fulmere, in com. Bucks, from William de Montacute, he obtained the king's confirmation of that grant: having been a special benefactor to the canons of St. Marie-Overie in Southwark, in recompence thereof, by their instrument bearing date the fourth of the cal. of Febr. this year, they made him partaker of all their prayers, and covenanted to mention him in all their masses, vigils, &c. and as soon as notice should be given to them of his death, or the death of Egidia his wife, to inscribe their names in their martyrology, and to make recital of them annually in their chapter, performing the like office for them as for their other benefactors: and that he the said John, his heirs and successors, lords of Stoke, should have precedence in the church of Stoke, and in all processions, as the patrons of respective churches ought to have<sup>l</sup>. In the preceding year he obtained from the king a charter of free warren in all his demesne lands at Agmondesham and Little-Mussenden, in com. Bucks<sup>m</sup>.

this 9th of Edw. III. he now waited on the king in his expedition into Scotland after Midsummer, where, by the fatigues of marching, and the ill accommodation of that country, he ended his life about Michaelmas<sup>n</sup>. His body was brought with honour into England, and buried in the conventual church of Berlings, com. Linc. He left Alice countess of Lincoln his widow, who for the term of her own life was to hold the manors of Burcester and Midlington, which after her death were entailed on the heirs of her husband the said Eubulo, which heir was his brother's son Roger le Strange, son of John le Strange the fifth of Knokyn<sup>o</sup>. By inquisition taken in the county of Dorset, it appears that the said Eubulo le Strange died possessed of the manors of Kingston-Lacy and the borough of Blandford in that county, being part of the inheritance of Alice his wife, held of the king in capite<sup>p</sup>. By another inquisition in the county of Wilts, it was found that he died possessed of one messuage and three carucates of land in Ambresbury, which he held of the earl of Warren<sup>q</sup>. But the fullest inquisition was taken at Westbury, in this form.

The king having intelligence that the French had promised to aid the Scots, he marched into Scotland with a great army, and fortified the castle of Strivelyn, and the town of St. Johnston. At which place John de Eltham earl of Cornwall departed this life "unmarried without issue; by which means the two honours of Walingford and St. Valerie reverted to the king. At the same garrison of St. Johnston, Sir Hugh de Fresnes (by marriage lord of the manors of Burcester and Midlington) died in December by a bloody flux, got by an excessive cold which he took in his hinder parts<sup>x</sup>. Soon after which, Alice his widow, perceiving she had no issue by her four husbands, (if her scandalous owning Richard de St. Martin in elopement from her first husband may be called a marriage,) did by fine and will convey all her grand inheritance and honours which she had by her father and mother, to Henry Plantaginet, brother of her first husband Thomas earl of Lancaster, who was afterward invested in the earldom of Lincoln, and had the reversion of her whole estate, except such parts as had been resettled on her and her husband Eubulo le Strange for life, and after their decease on the heirs of the said Eubulo, of which kind were the manors of Burcester and Midlington<sup>y</sup>.

Tho. Walsingham reports the said Hugh de Fresnes to have so died in Scotland, an. 1334, which must be before his marriage, or his title of earl of Lincoln, which he there gives him : but records of much better authority and all circumstances affix it to this year. This historian is guilty of the same mistake in the death of John de Eltham earl of Cornwall.

Sir John de Molins, lord of the manors of Brill and Ludgarshale, did now obtain licence from the king, to make a castle of his manor house at Aston, in com. Buck. and to impark his woods in Ilmere, with one hundred acres of pasture in Bekkenesfeld, Burnham, and Chippenham ; and to have free warren in Bekkenesfeld, Chalfhant, &c. being now engaged in the wars of Scotland of the retinue of William de Montacute<sup>z</sup>.

Ambrosden, which church was at first endowed with the whole tithes of the parish : and the incumbent, under the title of persona, enjoyed all those profits which religion and law had assigned for the support of those who serve at the altar. It was the avarice and sacrilege of Rome that robbed many churches of this birthright, and by alienating the best part of their maintenance, left the secular clergy to feed on the crumbs that fell from the regulars table. By this injurious corruption of Popery, the inheritance of this church was now divided : not divided into equal portions, but above three parts sequestered from the shepherd to the use of others in sheep's-clothing, to indulge the brethren in luxury and ease. The abuse crept on by these degrees : First, Edmund earl of Cornwall, patron of this church, having founded a college of Bonhommes at Ashrugge, com. Bucks, an. 1284, he endowed his said foundation with the manors of Ambrosden and Cestreton, and the advowson of the said churches, an. 1288. The rector and brethren of the said college, not content with the bare right of presentation, petitioned pope Clement the fifth for an appropriation of the said church of Ambrosden to their convent, which the pope, by letters dated an. 1308, granted to them in reversion after the death or cession of the incumbent rector : he was John de Capella, an Acolyte, inducted an. 1301, who dying or resigning before the year 1334, the bishop of Lincoln, as diocesan, confirmed the appropriation of the church to the said college, excepting some oblations and profits for support of a vicar to be afterwards ordained. In the meantime the Bonhommes had the cure supplied by some indigent secular, who possibly, without any pen-

This ordination of a vicarage deprived the church of three parts in four of its primitive revenues, as the bishop here computed by stating such a proportion in bearing the extraordinary burdens. But there is a just occasion of complaint, that the corruption of after ages has much farther diminished the rights of the vicar, and stript him more naked than this judicial sentence left him. For several of the profits and privileges by this instrument allowed, are now lost or impaired, but no additional advantage has been ever since obtained. First, here is but a rent charge of six shillings eightpence reserved to the impropriators out of the cottage in Blakethorn; whereas they

The vicar of Kenilworth, com. Warw. had only a yearly stipend of 6l. 13s. 4d. per ann. paid by the prior and convent, which be-

Secondly, the vicar (besides sixteen acres of arable land, and two of meadow) was to have common pasturage in all places, where the tenants of Ambrosden and Blackthorn used to have the same liberty of common: whereas upon the enclosure of the lordship of Ambrosden, when in the methods of division some proportionable allowance was made to other commoners, no foot of land was allotted to the vicar, to compensate for his loss of common: and as if that were too small a fraud, the inhabitants of Blackthorn pretend, there is no privilege of common belonging to the vicar's land in that lordship, and deny the tenant that benefit: though this indeed is but a new encroachment, and must not be suffered to pass into custom: it is only owing to the receding easiness of the present tenant, and within few years the interest of joint common was claimed and enjoyed by Mr. Sebastian Marsh, late vicar. Thirdly, all manner of tithes, fruits, and profits, (the tithes of corn and hay excepted,) are here expressly reserved to the perpetual vicar; whereas within the village of Blackthorn, they pretend an exemption from the tithe of furz, and suggest that some portion of land is allotted as an equivalent for such tithes, when indeed no such exchange was ever made, and the tithe of furz is as justly due, as of any product not excepted. Lastly, it is here provided that the appropriators shall for ever pay the procurations of the archdeacon; whereas this, as well as all other burdens, is now thrown upon the

When a distinct vicarage was thus ordained, the rector and brethren of the college of Asherugge presented John de Retford priest, whom the bishop instituted on the same day, and directed him to the official of the archdeacon of Oxford for induction.

This appropriation and consequent ordination of a vicarage were in the same method which generally obtained in these religious frauds. The method was this. The lay patrons of respective churches were sensible, that they were only trustees of presentation, not lords of the tithe and glebe, as of an alienable fee: but when charged with this fiduciary honour, they thought themselves less capable to judge of sufficient clerks, and therefore, out of wisdom and conscience, they devolved the right of patronage to some religious fraternity, presuming they were better judges of men, and had better opportunity to provide such as were fit and worthy to execute this ministerial office. Of this trust committed to them the Religious made their advantage; and being only bare patrons by the law, and by the design of the donor, without any application to the civil courts, they begged and bought licence from the popes and bishops to usurp the estate of which they were but guardians, and to let the whole inheritance be theirs. Though this indeed was such a scandal to religion, such a perverting the charity of patrons, and such an affront to the secular powers, that all our nobility were justly incensed at this grievance; and, an. 1259, made a public remonstrance of it to pope Alexander the fourth, who, in his answer to them, does thus represent their complaints. “ That they and their predecessors, out of respect to the appearing sanctity of religious societies in England, had liberally conferred upon them their right of patronage, that by that means they might have power of choosing fit persons, and presenting them to the bishops, as a more effectual provision for the care of souls, and relief of the poor: whereas they found themselves frustrated in this pious intention, not only by papal provisions, that interrupted the right course of presentation, but chiefly because the Religious, by clandestine and indirect ways, with neglect or contempt of their own bishops, had obtained those churches to their proper use, by concessions from the apostolic see. On which account they thought themselves obliged to resume the patronage of such converted churches, and reunite the advowson to their own demesne, because they saw the good intention of themselves and their predecessors entirely defeated.  “ Religious, and promote the worship of God within the respective “ churches; and therefore if their complaints were true, he was sorry

 “ the apostolical judgment should be deceived, and the sacred in-

It had been happy for the poor divested churches, if the pope had observed this promise of restoring their patrimony to them: or rather it had been more happy, if the barons would have effected the reformation at home, which they vainly petitioned for from Rome: where they had too much interest in the cause, to let it be fairly adjudged; they were bound to continue the practice, though they were ashamed to justify it. And the same pope Alexander the fourth, within two years following, complained of this evil, when he had no resolution to amend it: telling the world, “That the covet“ ous desire of the Religious had by false pretences obtained from “ the see of Rome the appropriation of many parochial churches his letters to the dean and chapter of Lichfield, an. 1280.) does im-pute the contempt of the clergy, and profaneness of the people, to the appropriations made to religious houses, and their extortion from the officiating priests<sup>h</sup>. In the 50th of Edw. III. an. 1376, a petition in parliament did represent, that aliens, by reason of appropriations made to their houses beyond the seas, or to their priories or cells in this kingdom, did so devour the salaries due to parish curates, and so neglect the divine service in every parish, that they did more hurt to holy church, than all the Jews and Saracens in the world<sup>i</sup>. Indeed some of our English bishops were so sensible of the iniquity and shame of this practice, that they dared no longer venture on it without an apology, and confession of their doing ill. For thus within our own diocese, when Oliver bishop of Lincoln appropriated the church of Corby to the nuns of Stanford, com. Linc. an.

 1284. 12. Edw. I. and the fifth of his own pontificate, he was forced to make this acknowledgment, “ That alienations and appropriations “ of parochial churches, by converting the fruits and profits of them “ to the use of religious persons, were absolutely odious to all the “ prelates of the church, and had been forbidden by a late law, “great necessity<sup>k</sup>.” Nay, what deserves much notice and much wonder, some of the monks themselves had a conscience to be sincere and honest, and therefore made a great scruple of taking what they knew to be not their own. For so when Hugh de Leven, made abbot of Meaux in Yorkshire, an. 1339, would have had the church of Esington appropriated to the said abbey, his attempt was for five years ineffectual, because many of his own convent declared against it, and openly protested “to abhor the enormous injuries which “would from thence arise, to be lamented by persons that were yet “unborn<sup>l</sup>.” The founder of the Cistercian order was so conscious of this unfair dealing, that he enjoined his disciples, “according to “the letter of St. Benedict’s rule, to live by the labour of their own “hands, and to leave tithes and oblations to the secular clergy “who served in the diocese<sup>m</sup>.” P. Abelardus, who flourished an. 1140, though himself a monk, confessed this charge of guilt, “That “truly they had usurped those rights and benefits which belonged “to the parochial clergy, and had by indirect means obtained the “revenues of parochial churches, as well in tithes as in oblations<sup>n</sup>.” And Romanus Hay, the Benedictine, when he would prove that monasteries ought not to be translated to the use or endowment of colleges and seminaries, seems to be pinched most with this objection, that “tithes had been so transferred from parochial priests to religious orders, and therefore by the same justice their foundations might “be also transferred from one sacred use to another.” And while he does endeavour to evade this argument, he does confess it a complaint of five hundred years standing against the Cluniac monks,

“ who could not pretend to any just possession of parochial fruits “ and tithes, when by canonical sanctions they belonged not to “ monks, but to secular priests: to those whose office it was to bap“ tize and preach, and to perform the other duties required in a “ cure of souls, to them they were first allotted, that there might be “ no necessity of their being entangled in worldly business, but that “ serving at the altar they might live by the altar. And therefore,” says he, “ why do you usurp, when you ought to enjoy none of these “ things? When you do not perform the work, why should ye take “ the reward of it?” After all, how poorly is the objection answered by this monk, or by the great abbot of his order?<sup>p</sup>

This dividing of the benefice from the office was so great an oppression to the clergy, and so much obstructed the care of souls, that many who had a sober sense of religion were often complaining of this abuse, and advising a regulation of it. To omit very many instances, among other points of reformation, this was recommended by a great cardinal to the council of Constance, an. 1415. “ That
 “ to purge the consciences of the devout Religious, the greatest care “ should be taken, that they did not unjustly usurp the right of bi“ shops, nor of parish priests and churches, whether in tithes or
 “ other ecclesiastical revenues.” Upon this address, that council did decree, that all appropriations made within a certain term of years should be reversed; but with this unhappy reservation, “ un“ less they were made upon just and lawful causes,” which took away the benefit of this pretended reformation. For the monks could easily suggest a "just and lawful cause," to evade the restitution of the church's goods. This right of the parochial incumbent to all tithes seems the judgment of that council of cardinals, who owned the necessity of a reformation, an. 1536. They speak indeed only of pensions reserved by the presenting patrons, but the reason holds more against an alienation of the greater part of tithes, "That the whole profits are annexed to every benefice, as " the soul is united to the body; and so by their inseparable nature belong to him that has the cure, to enable him to support " the dignity of his own office, to bear the expences required in " divine worship, to repair the church and mansion-house, and to " bestow the remainder upon pious uses<sup>1</sup>." The very council of Trent were so ashamed of this violation of parochial rights, that they not only ordained, that a benefice not exceeding the yearly value of one hundred ducats, should not be charged with any pension to be deducted from the maintenance of the incumbent: but that the " ecclesiastical benefices secular, which had the cure of souls, should " not be converted into a simple benefice by impropriation: and in " livings already appropriated, where a fit portion had not been re- " served, or could not be conveniently assigned for endowment of a " vicar, there the whole benefice should be annexed to the cure<sup>2</sup>." And in vicarages before ordained, " if a congruous portion of the " fruits were not allotted to the vicar, an augmentation should be " made within one year after the end of the council<sup>3</sup>. Nay, and all " appropriations made within the last fourteen years should be dis-returned into the Exchequer, where it remaineth unto this day, &c. Fuller, Ch. Hist. cent. xiv. b. 4. p. 113. I believe no such thing.

“solved<sup>u</sup>.” Though had this last order been executed, it had signified no more, than if an old extortioner in his last will had made restitution of all his unlawful gains within the last seven days of his life, when his remaining estate would be still the plentiful rapine of many precedent years.

The time of our English Reformation had been a proper juncture to have amended this corruption among us. And it had been obvious to the wisdom of the nation, at the dissolving of monasteries, to have returned at least these alienated goods to the several churches defrauded of them: but inadvertence, or, more truly, interest obstructed this laudable act of justice. So when abbey-lands were first given to the king, and then disposed to subjects, this title to the patrimony of churches was included and conveyed to them. And indeed the affections and designs of our first reformers were so warm and so different, that it is rather a mercy of Providence most things were done so well, than it is a subject of complaint some things were not done better. We hear that certain of the visitors did petition the king for the reserve of some religious houses to continue for hospitality, and the more convenient education of young persons<sup>x</sup>. And honest bishop Latimer moved that two or three might be left in every county for pious uses<sup>y</sup>. But I think we meet with no proposal for putting a distinction between that part of their endowment which had been lay-fee, and that part thought of restoring them to their proper owners, but got all escheated to the crown, and divided them among his subjects to secure the revolution by their interest. Vid. Carpenter's Jura Cleri. p. 9.

Godfrey Goodman, b'p of Gloucester, gave directions in one draught how impropriations might be recovered to the church, to make it much the richer, and no man a jot the poorer. D. Lloyd, Memoirs, p. 601.

I will not speak now of them, that, being not content with lands and rents, doe catech into their hands spiritual livings, as parsonages, and such like, &c. Bernher's epist. ded. to Latimer's Sermons, publ. 1596.

which was originally church-glebe and tithe: and so letting each return to the old use: the lay-fees to the nobility and gentry, the glebe and tithe to the respective churches. This might have been considered as a very natural equity; but it seems those who “devoured holy things,” had yet no time “to make inquiry.” This omission was soon lamented by some of the impartial friends of our Reformation. Among others there was one plain writer, (who called himself Roderic Mors, but his true name was Henry Brinklow, a merchant of London,) who addressed this complaint to both Houses: Yee that be lords and burgesses of Parliament House, I require of you in the name of my poor brethren that are English men, and members of Christ's body, that yee consider well (as ye will answer before the face of Almighty God in the day of judgement) this abuse and see it amended. When as antichrist of Rome durst openly, without any viscer, walke up and downe throrowout England, his children had not only almost gotten all the best lands of England into their hands, but also the most part of all the best benefices both of personages and vicarages, which were for the most part all impropred to them. . . . It was amisse that monkes should have parsonages in their hands, and deale but the twentieth part thereof to the poore, and preached but once in the yeere to them that paid the tithes of the parsonages. It was amisse that they scarcely among twenty set not one sufficient vicar to preache for the tithes that they receaved. But see now how that was amisse is amended, for all the godly pretense. It is amended even as the diuel amended his damcs legge, (as it is in the proverbe,) when he should have set it right, he brake it quite in pices<sup>z</sup>.

31. Hen. 8. if the clause of discharge in that statute had not been. Upon this I observe further, that all appropriations of abbies that were surrendred between 27. and 28. Hen. VIII. were ipso facto dissolved with the dissolution of the corporation, and were presentable, and might have new incumbents. But as soon as the statute of 31. Hen. 8. came, the appropriations were restored, and given to the king and the incumbents. Hobart's Reports, p. 308.

The reign of Edw. VI. was so subjected to those courtiers who imposed on the nonage of their prince, that no consideration could be then had of these sufferings of the church. The act for giving chantries to the king, an. 1. Edw. VI. cap. 14. lessened the poor remainder of a maintenance to the clergy. This bill was indeed long opposed by archbishop Crammer, as we are told, on these honourable grounds. “The clergy being much impoverished by the sale of the impropriated tithes, that ought in all reason to have been turned into the church, but upon the dissolution of abbeys were all sold among the laity; he saw no probable way remaining for their supply, but to save these endowments till the king were of age, being confident he was so piously disposed, that they should easily persuade him to convert them all to the bettering of the condition of the poor clergy, that were now brought into extreme misery.” But, alas! untimely death prevented all hopes of the king’s pious disposition, and the archbishop’s good intention. And so secular were all designs of the governing men, that through the whole reign there seems but one public act prepared for improving the clergy’s revenue, that was “against all simoniacal pactions, and the reservation of pensions out of benefices,” &c. which act passed both Houses; but upon what reason it is not known, even this bill was not assented to by the king<sup>a</sup>.

Not only Camden, Spelman, Dugdale, Dodsworth, and other undoubted friends of our well constituted church, have condoled this unhappy error of our first reformers: but even Mr. Selden, whose

siastical discipline presented to Q. Elizabeth, an. 1617, under the title of Maintenance of Ministers, those brethren thus declare, “How many churches be there which sometimes were able to have maintained sufficiently and honestly a godly and learned man to teach them the Gosple, which now are scarce able to find opinions have been less favourable, has expressed the same dislike in that very treatise, which betrayed his cool affection to the church and the revenues of it. He there brings in the complaint of the honest author before cited, and does preface it with this his own judgment. “I doubt not but that every good man wishes, that, at “our dissolution of monasteries, both the lands and impropriated “tithes and churches possessed by them, (that is, things sacred to “the service of God, although abused by such as had them,) had “been bestowed rather for the advancement of the church to a bet-

 “no small number) since found such enheritances thence derived to “them, but as Sejus his horse, or the gold of Tholouse<sup>b</sup>.” I shall not here cite the opinion of great and good men, who have imputed the calamity of many estates and families to the first enjoyment of these alienations from the church: nor shall I report the characters ascribed to that prince, who was the actor in that mighty revolution. But I cannot but commend the piety of those gentlemen employed to inter the body of king Charles I. who, taking a view of St. George’s chapel, in Windsor, to find the most fit and honourable place of burial, they declined at first the tomb-house built by cardinal Wolsey, as supposing king Henry VIII. was buried there, “in re-

It must be confessed, the adversaries of our Reformation were in this point the best reformers. An. 1554, an address was made from the Lower House of Convocation to the Upper, wherein they pray, that “ forasmuch as tythes and oblations have been at all times assigned and appointed for the sustentation of ecclesiastical ministers, . . . . . that therefore all impropriations now being in the hands of any lay person or persons, and impropriations made to any secular use . . . . . may be by authority of parliament dissolved, and the churches reduced to such state as they were in before the same impropriations were made<sup>d</sup>.” So that when in the 1. 2. Phil. Mar. cap. 8. there was an “ act for the establishment of all spiritual and ecclesiastical possessions and hereditaments conveyed to the laity ;” the states of this realm founded this convenient law on a supplication of the bishops and superior clergy, who therein “ ingenuously confess, that in the present state of affairs the recovery of their ecclesiastical goods would be difficult and indeed impossible, without breaking the peace of the kingdom, and unity of the church : therefore to sacrifice their own interest to that of the public, they were ready to submit, and to renounce their right<sup>e</sup>.” This concession made the injury to be much less, because the parties concerned (the clergy) released and quitted their own dues, and could no longer complain of their own voluntary deed. Besides, in the dispensation of cardinal Pole, the pope's legate, recited in the said act, there is sufficient intimation given, that this surrendry should extend (as it justly might) to abbey-lands, rather than to appropriated tithes and glebe; and therefore he concludes with this address to the possessors of them. "We exhort, and by the bowels of Jesus Christ beseech all who are concerned, that being not unmindful of their own salvation, they would do this at least, that out of their ecclesiastical goods, especially those which they received on the title of parsonages and appropriated tithes, which had been particularly designed for the support of a standing ministry, they would provide for inferior churches charged with the cure of souls, that the pastors of them, the parsons and vicars, might live conveniently and honourably according to their quality, support their own state and office, laudably discharge their cure of souls, and have ability to bear the several burdens incumbent on them." And within the same statute it is farther enacted, "That to the intent such godly motions and purposes should be advanced, it should be lawful to such as shall be seized of . . . . parsonages, tithes, pensions, &c. to make feoffments, grants, or any other assurances to any spiritual body politic or corporate in this realm, &c." By which it is plain, that though they had not leisure to divide between the lands of the Religious, and the endowment of parish churches; yet they meant to distinguish between them: and to retain to secular uses those estates which had been once secular; but in due time to restore to parochial churches those revenues which had been from the beginning ecclesiastical. pious and just design was more effectually prosecuted 2. 3. Phil. Mar. cap. 4. by an “act for the extinguishment of first fruits, and “disposition of rectories and parsonages impropriate:” wherein, for a leading example to the nobility and gentry, their majesties “did “clearly give over, renounce and extinguish all rectories, parsonages, benefices, glebe-lands, tithes, oblations, &c. from the “feast of St. Michael the archangel last past. . . . * Copy of a letter from the author to his friend the Rev. Mr. Blackwell, rector of Brampton, in Northamptonshire, in answer to some objections of his to this passage.

“Sir,

“I have reason to be very thankful for yours of June 30th, and the more for your kind reproof of a passage in the papers I sent to you: if you had been so near that I could have imparted the sheets before their last revise, I would have readily submitted to your judgment in that or any other clause; but it is now too late to correct it, and therefore I must only think of some arguments to excuse it.—First, I must say, I did not let fall the expression in the reign of the late K. James, but in the present reign, which may argue the less of design or interest in it. Secondly, the supposition of fact is true, that, in the reign of Q. Mary, there was some reformation in that one case of sacrilege, which had stained the government of both her predecessors, and was even a blot to the reign of her next successor. Thirdly, the phrase, “cover the “infirmities of that reign,” is a more tacit accusation of ill government than it is an express apology for it. Fourthly, that the other parts of the period, “almost atone “for the blood of martyrs,” is a very qualified expression; and the “almost atone,” does enough imply, that it is no sufficient atonement for it. Lastly, I meant nothing but honesty and zeal for the church; and if upon those thoughts I were a little warmed into an injudicious phrase or two, let the charity of readers call it only indiscretion, and I will forgive their censure. But, dear Sir, I do not write this to reflect infirmities of that reign, and almost atone for the blood of martyrs. It was on this account, the same king and queen desired to justify their title of Defenders of the Faith, by this zeal in restoring alienated goods to the churches divested of them<sup>s</sup>. Which royal example would have been soon followed by other honourable subjects, as it was indeed by that wise counsellor Sir William Petre, who, before he petitioned pope Paul the fourth for a licence and absolution to purchase the lands of dissolved abbeys, made this solemn resolution, "That he would resign all rectories or appropriated tithes and glebe to their first spiritual uses, and was ready to make immediate restitution for that purpose<sup>h</sup>."

It is great pity, that, upon the accession of queen Elizabeth to the crown, when other errors were happily reformed, this fatal abuse of usurping the appropriated revenues of the church was brought back, and again established by a law: while an. 1. Eliz. cap. 4. in the act for the "restitution of the first-fruits and tenths, and parsonages impropriate," it was ordained and provided, "That all rectories, parsonages, and benefices impropriate, glebe-lands, tithes, oblations, &c. as were in the hands of the late queen Mary," before her act of renunciation, "should be vested, adjudged, &c. in the on the justice of your objection; and, were it not too late, I would agree with you to have the expression "changed" into something of more unexceptionable "commendation." But it is past recovery, and I would only have it said, I meant no harm. However, I gain this advantage by it, to have the greater experience of your free and faithful friendship. Mr. Gibson's dedication, though under my own nose, was really done without my knowledge, otherwise I would have forbid him most chiefly from exposing himself to some censure, and me to some envy, and both perhaps to some derision. I am glad you like the seat of Mr. Coker; some other seats of Sir Wm. Glynne, Sir John Aubrey, Dr. South, &c. are to be soon finished at their own respective charge, two guineas each table. The figure of the church of Burcester, and the seal of that deanery, must be inscribed to you, because of your late relation to that place, though I am very tender of putting you to any expence in these hard times.

“seisin and possession of our sovereign lady queen Elizabeth.” Where, as to public authority, the matter (I think) has ever since rested; for I would gladly be informed whether any one bill has been after that session brought into either House of Parliament, to ordain or project a restitution of impropriated tithes and glebe to parochial churches. When yet the doing of it might be contrived, (without injury to the present owners,) a glory to the church, a strength to the nation, an interest to every parish, and a confirmation to the title of all monastic lands that were lay-fees.

There have indeed been many private examples of this conscientious justice, whose names deserve to be recorded<sup>i</sup>. And no question in ages to come, by the living piety of some, and the dying legacy of others, these alienated tithes and glebe will by degrees be all turned back to their old channel, the maintenance of parish priests. Though it is more to be wished, that public authority should first intervene, and one national act should prevent the tedious charity of particular persons. This I am sure is wanting to complete our Reformation: for this appropriation and infeodation of tithes and glebe, was the mere innovation of popery in the most dark and profligate ages, procured and granted by the worst instruments in that religion, the popes of Rome, and the monks of England. And that, when less errors were corrected, this greater corruption should stand and still flourish, has raised the pity and the indignation of many of our reformed writers. I recommend the testimony of two or three, whose profession of the common law makes them better judges of iniquity, and less to be suspected of partiality to ecclesiastical things and men. The lord Bacon, when he was to consider “of the edification and pacification of the church of England,” gave in this opinion, “That it were to be wished that impropriations were returned to the church, as the most proper and natural endowments: though it seems impossible to proceed to their resumption or redemption, because the restitution of them “ must of necessity pass their hands, in whose hands they are now “ in possession or interest. But in my own opinion and sense, I “ must confesse, (let me speak it with reverence,) that all the parlia-

 “ propriations from the church,) seem to me to stand in a sort ob“ noxious, and obliged to God in conscience to do somewhat for the “ church : to reduce the patrimony thereof to a competency. For “ since they have debarred Christes wife of a great part of her “ dowry, it were reason they made her a competent joynture<sup>k</sup>.” Mr.
 Lambard was one who recovered all our ancient, and understood all our modern laws : his judgment was this ; “ An appropriation is one “ amongst many of those monstrous byrths of covetousness, begotten
 “ by the man of Rome, in the dark night of superstition, and yet “ suffered to live in this day-light of the Gospell, to the great hinder-“ ance of learning, the empoverishment of the ministerie, and the in“ famie of our profession<sup>l</sup>.” Mr. Selden I have before cited on this argument, and he has made other declarations enough express to this matter, as particularly, “ It is a grosse error to make it cleer as “ many do, that if tithes be not due to the priesthood jure divino “ moralit, then appropriated tithes may be still possessed with good “ conscience by laymen . . . . . The many execrations annex to the “ deeds of conveyance of them, and pould forth against such “ as should divert them to profan uses should be thought on ; and “ let them remember who saies, that it is a destruction for a man to “ devoure what is consecrated<sup>m</sup>.” In the Exposition of the Law Terms, of which book the first edition is by the lord Coke ascribed to judge Rastal, appropriations have this comment on them. “ . . . . To “ supply these defects a vicar was devised . . . who should have for “ his labour but a little portion . . . and so it continues to this day,
 “ if not worse ; since not onely friers and nuns, but laymen and secu-

“ lar women are possessed of them, to the great hinderance of learning, impoverishment of the ministry, and infamy of the Gospel and professors thereof<sup>n</sup>. ”

There was a seeming attempt made to redeem this inheritance of the church about the year 1626, when there was a corporation erected of twelve feoffs for the trust of buying in impropriations. A project, of which had the managers been honest, much good and glory might have been expected from it. But they are represented to have been parties of the Puritan faction, and so to have restored no impropriations to the parish church, nor settled them on the incumbent, but only to have set up stipendiary lecturers, and maintained silenced ministers, &c. From a sense of which abuses, and a jealousy of greater, this method was first reflected on by Mr. Peter Heylin, in an Act sermon at St. Mary's in Oxon. July 11, 1630<sup>o</sup>. After which, by the vigilance of bishop Laud, and the prosecution of Mr. Noy, this feoffment was judicially suppressed in the court of Exchequer, by a sentence given Feb. 13, 1633<sup>p</sup>. To take this power out of the hands of those particular men, might possibly be a good and necessary service: but to annul the design in general, seems to have been a great miscarriage. For the abuse not lying in the thing, but the parties concerned; they should not have subverted the whole project, but have committed the trust to more faithful stewards. And no doubt, had there been a new legal corporation of honest able men, of good interest and standing authority, to prosecute the purchase of impropriate tithes, as successive opportunities should offer, and reunite them to the endowment of one fixed incumbent, it would by insensible degrees have had a glorious effect in recovering and settling the patrimony of the church. And had the iniquity of those times allowed it, this was the real design of that great and good archbishop, who, though he “ overthrew that

* A letter from Bishop Williams to Archbishop Laud, with certain queries concerning the endowment of vicarages.

“ Most reverend Father in God, and my very good lord; my duty and service unto your Grace remembred. Being to ride this visitation in person, (if it shall please God to preserve me in any reasonable health,) the rather for the advancing some especial services, which your Grace hath recommended to my care, I beseech your Grace to give me leave to crave your Grace his opinion in some few particulars; if peradventure your Grace hath already spent any thoughts upon them; and not otherwise either to give your Grace any offence, or create unto your Grace any molestation.

“ First, concerning the contribution to Paul’s, if I find my brethren of the clergy, that either have not given at all, or have given nothing to the purpose, willing to contribute annually (tho’ in lesser summes) towards that repaire, whether may I safely runne that way, without any disservice to that great work; or shall I call upon them to present their respects at one entire payment: I do conceive (under reformation) the former way in a poor clergy will be more willingly entertained, and at the last make up a greater produce.

“ Secondly, in that most gracious intention of his majesty, (for the which God Almighty ever bless him in this, and crown him, but after many years, with an accumulation of all happyness in the other life,) to better the poor vicarages of the kingdom with an augmentation of their compositions, which all diocesans are supposed able to effect jure communi, and some of them jure parti- culari, by special pacts and reservations in the compositions themselves; I humbly begge your Grace’s advise in two points, being so cordially addicted to the service, that I would willingly spend the remainder of my life to bring it into any hope of perfection.

“ First, whether your Grace hath not heard from the lawyers grounding themselves upon 32. H. VIII. c. 7. and some other statutes and judgments at common law, that the impropriations now, as they stand in England, to all intents and purposes, (except only the recovery of their tiths,) are translated (as it were) into lay fees and uses, (as the statute terms them,) and so just out of our cognisance in courts ecclesiastical? Howbeit I should conceive the statute cited to aim only at the conveyances and assurances in law of the sued im-propriations, but not any transubstantiating,

“ Paul’s, and then he hoped to buy in two a year at least <sup>s</sup>.” But when this prelate and the whole constitution of our church soon after fell, in their ruin all good designs were buried. Yet I am glad to find, that even that long parliament, which dissolved the church, as it were, of their essence into another nature than they were in the abbot’s or the king’s hands, from whence they were purchased or obtained by the subject. If your Grace have received any notes or directions in this particular, that may be imparted, I will promise to improve them to the best of my poor endeavours for the advancement of the service.

“ The second point is of vicarages endowed upon such rectories as are possessed by colleges, bishops, chapters, prebendaries, and some other particular persons, who have but small rents reserved upon the same, the corpes, and consequently the fatte and the profites being in the hands of the lessees for long terms of lives or years. I humbly crave your Grace’s direction, whence the diocesan shall expect an increase for the vicar’s composition in this case? If he fall upon the lessors, he shall sink many colleges, bishopricks, chapters, and in a manner all the prebends of most churches of the old foundation in this kingdom which are erected upon tithes: if upon the lessee, quere whither in this case he will be denied a prohibition? Also it is very considerable, if it may please your Grace, what shall be done in that other case, (which falls too often in this diocess,) where there is no vicarage endowed at all, but a bare and dry pension, and that of a miserable poor value; such as peradventure the religious house did allow to a member of their own, or to some poor secular priest, that for this service had his chamber and corrody at their covent. Is there any law whereby the diocesan may help in such a case?

“ Another question, but of a meaner alloye, I presume to move unto your Grace; that is, whether your Grace doth conceive the injunctions of the late queen Elizabeth be of any binding, or but only of a teaching and directing force, in the present church of England? I conceive the doubt lieth in this; first, whether they needed not a revival, and then whether they obtained any such from the late king of famous memorie? I do not trouble your Grace with this question for any fancy I have to all of them, but only that I found the lord chancellor, whom I served, much taken with two of their number; the one, that all rectors or persons of one hundred pounds a year and upwards should allow somewhat to maintain a poor scholar in one of the Universities; which that lord allways, and I have sometimes caused the king’s presentees in that nature to doe, giving them the nomination of their own scholars; and the other, that every non-resident, which kept no house at all upon his benefice, should allow the 40th part thereof unto the poor, which is a very small allotment, if we look unto that collop which the antient counsels do cut out, as due unto the poor, from every benefice ecclesiastical.

and dispossessed the clergy, had amidst all their sacrilege this sense of justice, that, when they sequestered those they called delinquents, out of that part of their estate which was impropriated tithe, they made competent additions to very many livings<sup>1</sup>.

“ Lastly, I beg your Grace’s leave, not a complaint, (for it is not of such a moment,) but a representation only of one particular to your Grace. Your Grace knoweth well how things stand between Sir John Lamb and me at this time, though neither of us peradventure will confess himself in an error. I am informed, from good hands, that no inhibitions have used to issue forth heretofore to stay proceedings in acts dispatched by any bishop in person, without first acquainting your Grace his predecessors. And I am sure I have continued thirteen years a bishop, and in all that time I saw but one inhibition, which was deserted presently by the person who procured it. But in the compass of this last year I have been saluted with them sans nombre in matters of no moment or effect. If your Grace will be pleased to take notice thereof, whatsoever your Grace shall determine, shall be acceptable unto me, who am by nature not very unwilling to be rid of businesses. And so craving your Grace’s pardon for this tedious paper, whereunto I expect no answer, but at your Grace his best leisure, I humbly take my leave, and beseeching God to bless your Grace with all happiness, do rest archbishop Laud’s own hand—“ Recep. Julii 17, 1635. Certain queries from my Pd b’p of Lincoln concerning the endowment of vicarages, &c.”

To this letter the Archbishop returned the following answer.

“ Sal. in Xto. My very good Lord,

“ I pray God bless you, and speed you in your visitation, nothing doubting but that your personal presence there will give good satisfaction to your clergy, and be otherwise beneficial to the church. For the particulars contained in your letters, though you are pleased to leave me free from giving any answer till I may have leisure; yet because there is scarce any one of them which I have not in some measure thought on before, I am willing to strain upon my other occasions, and give your Pdship present answer, reserving my fuller answer to farther consideration; and I do the rather gave this answer present, that no opportunity may be lost in this your visitation.

“ But first, concerning the contributions to St. Paul’s church, as I thank your Pdship heartily for the profession of your love and care to that great work, so I give you hereby to understand, that it was projected at the first, and hath been practised since in divers dioceses, that our brethren of the clergy might contribute by annual payments, which will be more ease for

The restoration of monarchy and the church, an. 1660, was a season wherein much might have been done to this effect; especially by bishops and collegiate churches. For though parsonages appropriated to them as bodies corporate could not without express sta-

them, and all one for the work; and, therefore, I pray your l'dship to proceed in that way, being most agreeable also to your own judgment. Only I desire that a book may be kept, and one copy of it sent to the chamber of London, according to which those annual payments may be demanded.

“Secondly, we have all great reason to bless God and his majesty, as your l'dship doth, for his care over the church, and particularly for the bettering of the poor vicarages throughout the kingdom, according as by care and industry it may be effected. And your l'dship is very right, that the several diocesans are supposed able to effect it jure communi; and in some cases, that they have farther power by reservations in the old compositions. Neither doth his majesty intend to proceed any other way than that. Upon this your l'dship is pleased to crave my advice in two points; first, whether the statute of Hen. VIII. which your l'dship mentions, or any other statutes and judgments at the common law do so put these impropriations out of the cognizance of our courts ecclesiastical, as that the bishop may not encrease the vicar's stipend, where he finds just cause, as well as he might have done, when those tythes were in the abbies or the king's hands? To this I have heretofore received different answers from some lawyers of good note; and though they, upon whose judgments I have most relied, were of opinion that these statutes did neither alter the nature of the tithe, (which indeed is impossible for them to doe,) nor vacate the bishop's power quoad hoc; and this was Mr. attorney Noy's judgment with others; yet all my counsel here are of opinion the best way is to have these, last meddled withall. Your second point is, what course shall be held with vicarages endowed, whether an augmentation of them? And if so, whether to be laid upon the lessors, being bishops, colleges, chapters, prebendaries, &c. or upon the lessees? My lord, in this case you do rightly observe, that the lessor's rent is small, and that the lessee goes away with almost all the profit. Therefore, the course thought on is, that the lessors be desired, as leases determine and come within their power by renewing, to make addition to the several vicarages endowed or not endowed, and charge it upon the lessee. And this, upon notice given, takes well; and I, for mine own part, God willing, shall carefully pursue it; and where the leases are in lives, or great number of years, there the ordinary may proceed, and de jure communi lay the augmentation upon the lessee ratably to his profitts above his rent, and with such moderation as he thinks fitt. And so, my lord the b'p of Salisbury did make an augmentation this very last year in the vicarage (as I remember) where Sir Frances Seymour dwells, who shewed himself a very noble friend to the business. The lessees fled to the Common Pleas for help; there the prohibition tute be surrendered up; yet then was the juncture to have made such a statute, when joy and gratitude might have disposed to an universal consent, and when neither episcopal sees, nor collegiate was denied; and so was another prohibition not long before in the King's Bench. So we have gained two presidents for the strengthening of jus commune in the ordinary; and all my counsel are of opinion, that this is the best way to goe on and gather strength. But then I must tell your P'dship, that this augmentation made by the b'p of Sarum, was upon the corps of a prebend; and upon such kind of lessees will be your P'dship's safest beginning; and then we may goe on to the laity after, if the law shall so farr favour us in this very Christian cause. And for the poor stipendiaries, where there are no vicarages endow'd, I am not so certainly informed, what law there is for the diocesan to make encrease. But methinks a paritate rationis, the diocesan should have as much or more power here to preserve a poor churchman in livelyhood, where there is less allowance than any endowment makes. But for this your P'dship, when you come to any such particular, may advise farther, and I shall give you all assistance that I may be able.

“Thirdly, concerning the injunctions of the queen, I doubt they are hardly of a binding force. Most of the best of them are reviv'd in the canons, though I confess there are some omitted of very good consequence; for which omission I could never yet receive any satisfying answer by any of the bishops, which were then of the Convocation House. Yet perhaps this omission is recompenced by the passing of some others, not so fitt for a revivor, and had special reference to these times. For the two which your lordship mentions, I shall give you one and the same answer to both; and truly, my lord, though the counsels of old allow a larger portion to the poor, than that which you mention out of one of those injunctions, yet both for that, and for the allowance to any poor schollars, which is the other, I do conceive, as the chargeableness of the times now are, and the many contributions by subsidies to shipping and otherwise, which the clergy in those ages and places felt not; and the great difference in house-keeping, between the dyet and manner of livinge in those hotter countries, and these of ours, that it will be best, 'till it shall please God better to furnish this church with means, to leave the clergy free masters of their own charity; for certainly as the times now goe, I cannot for my part hold it fitt to impose upon the clergy according to either of those injunctions; and I hope, for the reasons given, your P'dship may be of my opinion.

“For your P'dship's last passage concerning inhibitions, I am sure I have taken greater care than any a'b'p hath done these twice forty years. And particularly, that no inhibition should issue out for acts dispatched by any bishop in person without my knowledge. And I suspended three proctors but this last term about that and such like disorders. And therefore, if your P'dship have received any hard measure that churches would by this means have been impaired in their revenues; because the plentiful fines, which were then brought in, would certainly have purchased an estate equivalent to the portion restored to parish churches. However, at that happy turn of affairs, it was easy and natural for bishops and ecclesiastical corporations, that were endowed with appropriated tithes and glebe, at the first renewing the leases of such appropriations, to have made each vicar the lessee, or at least to have reserved some annual augmentation for his better support. And indeed such charitable acts were in many places done, to the great honour and service of religion. An attempt of this nature was then made for the benefit of this church of Ambrosden, (of which the impropriation belongs to the see of Oxford,) by the right reverend father in God Dr. Robert Skinner, who, at the grant of his first lease, ordered an augmentation of twenty pounds yearly to be paid by the tenant to successive vicars. This clause was inserted in the first draught of indentures, with a full intention of continuing this charitable pension to all future incumbents, as I am most credibly informed by some neighbours, whose memory is yet a witness of it. But before the sealing of the writings, by some collusion of the ill persons concerned * in it, a new copy was drawn and signed, with this article omitted; by which the good bishop and way, it is more than I know, and I shall take the best care I can for prevention hereafter. Besides, at this very present, before I make a release of my visitation of the Arches, I am providing against all inconveniences of inhibitions, as far as I can foresee them. And for Sir John Lamb and his particular, if he hath done any thing toward your P'dship otherwise than just and fair, he deceives my trust, and weakens his own discretion. I shall speak with him about it at my next opportunity. In the mean time I pray God bless your P'dship with health and a good journey; so I leave you to his protection, and rest in hast,

“W. CANT.”

Endorsed with the Archbishop's own hand—“Julii 17, 1635. A copy of my Answer to the Lord B'p of Lincoln concerning the endowment of vicarages, &c.”

* It was chiefly owing to a bribe given by the lessee to the bishop's secretary, his own son; both very unfortunate men.

the poor church were both imposed upon; the pious design of the one was diverted, and the better support of the other was fraudulently stopped. Those who obstructed this generous intention did not much enjoy the private gain proposed by it. But I spare all names, and am unwilling to impute, what I have heard to be the consequence, as a judgment on them. The loss of this opportunity has not yet been recovered; the Disposer of times and seasons may bring it about at his good pleasure. Some worthy examples of this kind have been given by the fathers of our church: among others, I remember the vicarage of Postling in Kent has been this way augmented by William late archbishop of Canterbury, who, about 1688, upon the expiration of a former lease, let the appropriated tithes and glebe at a reserved rent, to the use and benefit of the vicar, by which act of charity that living is augmented from 30<sup>l</sup>. to above 60<sup>l</sup>. per ann.

This digression I have thought not improper in this place: but if my own life and God's good providence continue to me, I design a more distinct "Historical Account of Appropriations," to shew the fundamental error and the consequent mischiefs of them. And therefore I conclude at present with the excellent confession and prayer of an author, who is now a reverend and active prelate of our church. "Our fault is, that at the dissolution of the monasteries, restitution was not made to the parish priests of what the popes had sacrilegiously taken from them. And now that we are upon the utter extirpation of popery, let us not retain this relique of it. And I pray God to inspire and direct his majesty and his two Houses of Parliament, effectually to remove this just, and, for ought I know, only great scandal of our English Reformation<sup>u</sup>."

III. made constable of the Tower of London, did now obtain from the king a grant in fee of the manor of Whitchurch, com. Oxon. and the reversion of two parts of the manor of Pidington, which John de Handlo held for life, and of the third part held for life by Henry de Pembruge. The great controversy for this manor of Pidington between the priory of St. Frideswide and Sir John de Handlo was still depending, and kept so for many years, the methods of law seeming at this time as tedious, as art and interest can ever make them. In the preceding year the king had issued these precepts to the judges and the sheriff to hasten the decision.

Sir John de Handlo holding the manor of Beckley (the head or capital manor of the honour of St. Walery) during his life, William de Montacute, earl of Salisbury, obtained now from the king a grant in fee of the said manor of Beckley, in reversion after the death of Sir John de Handlo; as also a grant, after the death of John de Warren earl of Surrey and Joan his wife, of several manors lately in possession of Henry Lacy earl of Lincoln, together with the castle of Hawardyne and the stewardship of Chester<sup>a</sup>.

Sir Richard Lovel, knight, released to Sir John de Molins and to his heirs all his right to the manor of Brehull, (now Brill,) in com. Buck. and in the manor of Selveston, in com. Northampt. granted by the king to the said Sir John de Molins<sup>b</sup>. This Sir Richard Lovel married Muriell, daughter of earl Douglas in Scotland, and in 9. Edw. III. with the said Muriell, had the custody of the castles of Corff and Purbeck committed to him, and was summoned to parliament among the barons in 22, 23, 24. Edw. III. and died Jan. 31. 25. Edw. III.<sup>c</sup>

Sir John de Molins had now from the king a farther grant in fee of the manor of Hendle, (Henley,) com. Oxon. which Hugh de Audley and Margaret his wife held for term of their lives: as also of the manor of Swyrford, com. Oxon. which Sir John de Handlo held for life<sup>d</sup>: and within this same year obtained a large charter of the return of all writs and precepts, and summonitions of Exchequer, and the execution of them within his manors of Brehul, Stoke-Pogeys, Ditton, Dachet, Fulmere, Ilmere, Adington, Aston-Bernard, Weston-Turvile, and Ludgaresale, with Infangenthef, Outfangenthef, and liberty to erect gallows on any ground within the said manors, and to judge all malefactors within those liberties; and the same privileges within the town and manor of Henley and Swyrford when the reversion should come to him: as also the chattels of felons and fugitives, wayf and stray, &c. And that his tenants should be for ever free from toll and murage, and pannage and pontage. And lastly, free warren in all his demesne lands within the said manors, excepting such lands as were within the bounds of the forest of Bernwode; by charter, dated at Westminster, Octob. the second<sup>e</sup>. Which, in the king's absence, was confirmed by the hand of Edward duke of Cornwall, with additional grant of francplege from all his tenants, and assize of bread and beer; dated at Kenyngton, Nov. the 12th<sup>f</sup>. In which year the said Sir John de Molins was treasurer of the king's chamber, and about the same time received commission to seize upon all the merchants of Lombardy, with their goods, jewels, &c. and to deliver them to the constable of the Tower<sup>g</sup>.

Joan Ysonden of Burcester granted to Emma her daughter and Agnes daughter of the said Emma, one messuage, with curtilages and appertenances, in the village of Burncester, nigh the tenement which Walter le Tailleur and Juliana his wife held for their lives of Robert le Clerk, &c.

Nicholas de la Beche (who had obtained from the king the reversion of the manor of Pidington) had now a grant in fee of the manors of Lekhamsted and Beaumys, in com. Berks. and procured licence to make castles of his houses at De la Beche, Beaumys, and Watlyngton<sup>1</sup>.

Sir John de Molins procured a charter from the king for liberty to hold a court leet, and to have correction for the assize of bread and beer through all his lordships of Brehul, Stoke-Pugeis, Ditton, Datchet, Fulmere, Ilmere, Adlington, Aston-Bernard, Weston-Turville, Lutegareshale, Stivecle, Littlecote, and Swanborn, in com. Buck. Henley and Swyrford, com. Oxon. and Henle, com. Sur. Being now one of the knights of the king's chamber, he obtained a special precept to the lord treasurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer, for the receipt of two hundred twenty pounds ten shillings one penny, as well for the wages due to himself, with his men at arms and archers in the wars of Scotland, as for a recompence of the horses which he had lost in that service. Hugh de Audley earl of Gloucester, lord of the manor of Stratton-Audley, nigh Burcester, was now, among others, appointed to array all the able men of Essex for defence of the sea-coasts against an invasion then feared: and soon after attending the king in France, and being constituted one of the marshals of the English camp, he was in that part of the royal army drawn up for battle at Vironfosse, and led by king Edward himself<sup>p</sup>. To raise money for this expedition, he mortgaged to William Minot, citizen and vintner of London, and to his heirs, the whole manor of Stratton-Audley<sup>q</sup>.

Sir Nicholas de la Beche (who had the reversion of Pidington) was now constable of the Tower of London, when the king coming in great passion from Flanders, (by reason he had been disappointed of those sums on which he depended for carrying on the siege of Tournay,) got to the Tower about midnight, where finding no more than his own children and three servants, he ordered the said constable and several other officers to be committed to divers prisons: but the constable did not long remain under the king's displeasure<sup>r</sup>. In this story, delivered by Tho. Walsingham, he is called Matthew de la Beche, which must be a mistake of the author or editor<sup>s</sup>. This Nicholas married Margery widow of Edmund Bacoun, from whom she held in dowry for her life the manor of Hatfeld-Peverel, in com. Essex<sup>t</sup>.

Sir Roger l'Estrange, banneret, who had the reversion of the manors of Burcester and Midlington, in the precedent year was in the expedition made into Scotland of the retinue of Richard earl of Arundel, and did now under the title of Roger l'Estrange, kinsman and heir of Eubulo l'Estrange, late earl of Lincoln, grant to the abbess and convent of Burnham, the manors of Lolmere and Little-Mussenden, com. Buck. which Robert le Ward and Isabel his wife held during the life of Alice countess of Lincoln<sup>u</sup>. It is this char-

Sir John de Molins, lord of the manor of Brill, and of Ludgare-shall in reversion, was now by the king advanced to the dignity of a banneret, and had a grant of the manor of Wendover, com. Buck. to support him in that honour; with a special charter of many privileges within the said lordships<sup>y</sup>. He now bestowed on the canons of St. Marie-Overey, his advowson of the church of Stoke-Pogeys, com. Buck. But before the end of this year he fell into the king's great displeasure, and being apprehended by William de Montacute, marshal of England, was committed to prison, from whence he made his escape: upon which, the king issued out a precept to apprehend the said Sir John de Molins, and to conduct him to the Tower of London, and to seize all his lands, goods, and chattels within the realm<sup>z</sup>: which were committed to the custody of John Eldred, his offence being reputed no less than rebellion<sup>a</sup>. In the twelfth of Edw. III. he had released to the prior and convent of St. Frideswide in Oxford all claim and title to the advowson of the church of Oakley and the chapels of Brill and Borstall, in this form.

By inquisition taken this year, it appears that Henry bishop of Lincoln had died seized of an assart called Spigornell-Stokking, nigh Pokesley; and that Sir Walter de Pavely, lord of the manor of Wendlebury, nigh Burcester, was his cousin and next heir<sup>i</sup>. The said Sir Walter, in 21. Edw. * Sir John de Handlo of Borstall, lord of Musewell in the parish of Ambrosden, did, for the soul of himself and his wife Maud, give to Queen's college, Oxon. the perpetual advowson of the church of Enham-militis in Hampshire, and ten pounds yearly rent issuing out of the said manor by charter dated on St. Gregory's day<sup>c</sup>. This manor of Enham in 21. Edw. I. was left by Burnell, bishop of Bath and Wells, to his nephew and heir Philip Burnell; and in 22. Edw. I. it passed to his son and heir Edward Burnell, who dying 9. Edw. II. without issue, it came to his sister Maud, then married to this second husband Sir John de Handlo<sup>d</sup>, who held the said manor by the courtesy of England, in right of his said wife<sup>e</sup>.

This Sir John de Handlo having had summons to parliament in 1. and 16. Edw. III.<sup>f</sup> departed this life on Aug. the 5th this year<sup>g</sup>, leaving Edmund de Handlo his grandson, (by Richard his eldest son, who died in his father's life, and Isabel his wife,) his next heir, at this time seven years of age<sup>h</sup>. After his death several inquisitions were taken; one in the county of Essex, wherein the jury found, that the said John de Handlo, knight, held the manors of Borstall, Adyngrave, Oakle, and Mussewell, the remainder to Edmund son of Richard Handlo and Alice his wife: that he held for life the manor of Lutegareshale, com. Buck. the reversion to John de Molyns and his heirs, by grant from the king, who was to hold it as of his manor of Brehull, by the service of two shillings and sixpence yearly<sup>i</sup>. Another inquisition was taken at Oxford, by which it appears, the said Sir John de Handlo, lately deceased, held for life the manor of Chadlington, com. Oxon. from John de Lisle, by the service of one knight's fee: and for the like term of life he held the manor of Shuppenhull, (or Shippenhall,) com. Oxon. from Hugh de la Despenser, by the service of half a knight's fee: as likewise for life twenty messuages and two carucates of land in Hedyngdon, com. Oxon. with the bailiwick of the forests of Shotover and Stowode, which were held in capite from the king, by the service of keeping the said forests. All which did remain to Isabel, then wife of Robert de Hdesle, knight, formerly wife of Richard, son of the said Sir John Handlo. This John de l'Isle, of whom the manor of Chadlington was so held, was the son and heir of Robert l'Isle, knight, (lord of the manor of Heyford-Warine, com. Oxon.) and was twenty-four years of age at his father's death in 16. Edw. III.<sup>k</sup>

The said Sir John de Handlo of Borstall died possessed of the manor of Pidington, within the parish of Ambrosden, which after his death was to pass to Sir Nicholas de la Beeche; but he dying also within this year, the reversion was to John son of John de Sutton, and Isabel his wife, daughter of John de Cherleton, lord of Powys, who did fealty to the king for the said manor of Pidington, Sept. 20. as appears by this record.

Quia compertum est per inquisitionem quod Johannes de Handlo defunctus tenuit die quo obiit ad terminum vite sue de hereditate Nicholai de la Beche manerium de Pydinton cum pertinentiis in com. predicto; et quod post mortem Johannis ad predictum Nicholaum et heredes suos reverti deberet, post decessum ejusdem Johannis, Johanni filio Johannis de Sutton, et Isabelle uxori ejus et heredibus ipsius Johannis filii Johannis remaneret imperpetuum. Rex cepit fidelitatem predicti Johannis filii Johannis de manerio predicto &c. 20. Septemb.<sup>1</sup>*

The foresaid Nicholas de la Beche left surviving his widow Margery, who became the wife of Sir Thomas Ardern, knight. Dugdale by mistake calls her Margery, the daughter and heir of Edmund Bacoun<sup>m</sup>, when she was indeed the relict of the said Edmund, and held in dowry from that her first husband the manor of Hatfeld-Peverell, in com. Essex<sup>n</sup>; and had by the said Edmund two daughters, Margaret, married to William de Kirdeston, and Margery, to Willam de Molins, son and heir of Sir John de Molins, lord of the manors of Brill, Lutegareshale, &c.<sup>o</sup> This Margery, widow of Sir Nicholas de la Beche, was the next ensuing year carried away in a violent manner from her house of Beaumes, nigh Reading, by John de Dalton and his accomplices: in which riot, Michael le Poynings, and Thomas Clerk of Shipton, and others, were killed, and goods and chattels to the value of one thousand pounds were taken away: for which a precept was issued to the sheriffs of Bucks. Oxon. and other counties, to seize into the king's hands all the lands, goods, and chattels of the said Margery; and a like precept to the sheriff of Lancashire, to seize the possessions of the said John de Dalton, dated Apr. 2. the sheriff of Lancashire, to arrest the said John and his accomplices, and commit them to the Tower of London<sup>p</sup>.

The foresaid John de Sutton, to whom the manor of Pidington now descended, was son of Sir John de Sutton, knight, by Margaret his wife, one of the sisters and coheirs of John de Somerie, baron of Dudley, and is the same person whose original deed is produced by Mr. Dugdale, bearing date at Dudley on Monday preceeding the feast of the annunciation, in the 12. of Edw. III. wherein he styles himself, John the son of John de Sutton upon Trent, lord of Dudley. From him descended that potent family of John Dudley, viscount l'Isle, earl of Warwick, and lastly duke of Northumberland, and his sons, Ambrose earl of Warwick, and Robert earl of Leicester<sup>q</sup>.

Sir John de Molins was now restored to the king's favour, and obtained restitution of all his lands; with a royal charter confirming to him the manors of Cokelington, Stoke-Tristre, and Boyford, com. Som. with the advowson of those churches: the manors of Bichen-den and Charlesle-Valence, in com. Buck. with remainder to William his son in general tail, then to John his other son in special tail, and so to his own heirs general; with a release from Edward duke of Cornwall of thirty-three shillings and sixpence yearly rent, for certain lands by him held of the same duke, as of his manor of Bensington, parcel of the honour of Walingford. Likewise a confirmation of that charter granted to him in 10. Edw. III. of the manors of Aston-Bernard and Ilmere, com. Buck. to hold by the service of being keeper of the king's hawks and falcons. As also of the manor of Silveston, com. Northamp. and the manor of Brehull, with liberty to enclose three hundred acres of wood (part of his said manor of Brehull) within the forest of Bernwood. Also of the manor of Lute-gareshale, and licence to impark his woods there, with one hundred acres of land and pasture adjoining, for his better support in the state and degree of banneret. Moreover of the manor of Wendover, com. Buck. and sixty pounds yearly rent from the town of Ailesbury, part of the possessions of John de Fienles and Robert de Fienles, attainted. Also of one messuage, fifty-one acres of land, and one acre of meadow in Market-Overton, com. Rutland, with the fees of Pinkney and Chokes: the moiety of the manor of Gaiton, with the advowson of that church, and of Norton, belonging to the fee of Chokes. With liberty to impark his woods of West-grove and Godardes-grove, belonging to his manor of Henley, com. Sur. with three hundred acres of land, meadow and pasture, contiguous thereto, lying within the bounds of the forest. The same liberty to impark his woods of Sywardeshull and Wynarde, com. Buck. with three hundred acres adjoining: and to fortify his manor houses of Stoke-Pogeys and Ditton, with walls of stone kernelled: confirming also the exchange by him made with the prior of the church of Southwark, for twenty-five acres of land in Stoke-Pogeys, and that his courts, or mansion-houses, in Stoke-Pogeys and Ditton should be exempt from the authority of the marshal of the king's household, or any other his officers. Likewise, that his manor of Dachette should be held of the king by the payment of a rose for all services: with licence to fortify his manor house at Weston-Turville, com. Buck.; and finally, with confirmation of the manors of Adington and Guldene, and patronage of the abbey of Burnham. In the month of September within this year, he was sent, with all the men at arms and archers which he could speedily raise, to Sandwich in Kent, for defence of that port against the power of the French<sup>r</sup>.

When the king in his expedition into France took ship at Southampton about the end of June, among other of the nobility who then attended him were Almaric de S. Amand, lord of the manor of Grendon, John eldest son of Roger l'Estrange, heir to the manors of Burcester and Midlington, John de Sutton, lord of the manor of Pidington, and Sir Richard d'Amory, lord of the manors of Bucknell, Godington, &c. who was in that third and last battalia com-

Before the end of this year, the said Sir Richard d'Amory paid a fine to the king for leave to convey his manors of Godingdon and Hedington, and the hundred of Bolindon, com. Oxon. to the said Sir Otho de Holland <sup>y</sup>.

Sir Richard Lovel, knight, who in the three following years was summoned to parliament among the barons, did now release to the king and his successors all his right and claim to the manor of Brehull, com. Buck. and Selveston, com. Northampt. <sup>z</sup> which were both held by Sir John de Molins, who, as a farther testimony of the king's favour, had now summons to parliament among the barons; and procured a charter for a fair yearly on the eve, day, and morrow after the feast of St. Barnabas, at his manor of Wendover, com. Buck. and a like charter for a yearly fair at Brill, on the eve, day, and morrow after the feast of St. Thomas the martyr <sup>a</sup>.

On February the sixteenth, 21. Edw. III. Sir John de Sutton of Dudley, knight, and Isabel his wife, who held the manor of Pidington, paid a fine to the king for liberty to convey the said manor to John de Peyto to hold for life <sup>b</sup>.

The manors of Burcester and Midlington are here falsely returned to be of the inheritance of Henry earl of Lancaster, son and heir of Henry earl of Lancaster, who died 19. Edw. III. brother of Thomas earl of Lancaster, first husband of the said Alice. He did indeed enjoy many lands of the great inheritance of Lacy, by virtue of a surrender and entail made by Henry Lacy earl of Lincoln, father of the said Alice, and by a grant of king Edward I. and for this reason, in the year following, the king added to this Henry earl of Lancaster the title and dignity of earl of Lincoln, granting him the annual receipt of twenty pounds from the sheriff of the county in lieu of the third penny, as Thomas earl of Lancaster his uncle had before him<sup>h</sup>.

But it is certain, that on her second marriage with Ebulo l'Estrange without the king's licence, to make her peace, she surrendered up a great part of that large estate, to have a less share confirmed to her: and at that time the manors of Midlington and Burcester were settled by the king on the said Ebulo l'Estrange and Alice his wife, and the heirs of the said Ebulo. So that now upon the death of the countess, Sir Roger l'Estrange of Knokyn was found cousin and next heir of the said Ebulo, and inherited the manors of Burcester and Midlington; for which he did his fealty to the king on November the 29th, as appears from this following writ.

By another inquisition taken in these parts, it appears that Isabel, the relict of Henry de Ferrers, held the manor of Heth with its appertenances, and that William, son of Henry de Ferrers, was son and heir of the said Isabel, (now deceased,) and eighteen years of age. And that the foresaid Henry de Ferrers, and Isabel his wife, held the manor of Stoke super Tyrne, with twenty acres of waste, as in right of the said Isabel, of which they had infeoffed Robert de Say<sup>o</sup>.

of Merton, adjoining to Ambrosden, did now covet and desire the profits of it; and having purchased the king's licence for appropriation, they addressed themselves to the diocesan, the bishop of Lincoln; and in their petition represented some plausible reasons why their revenues should be so augmented: as, because their monastery standing near to the highway was more frequented and burdened by strangers and travellers: that they had been engaged in many suits and trials in courts ecclesiastical and civil, by which they had contracted many and great debts: that a late raging pestilence had much diminished and detained their old rents and profits: that their house, the offices, and other buildings, were much decayed, and they unable to repair or support them: and therefore humbly begged that the parish church of Merton being taxed only at seventeen marks and ten shillings, might be appropriated and for ever annexed to their convent. To which request the bishop assented, and ordained, that such appropriation should commence upon the death or cession of John de Wanse, the present rector; reserving for a perpetual vicar the yearly pension of ten marks; and the sum of twenty shillings yearly to the said bishop and his successors, to compensate for the profits that would otherwise accrue to the see of Lincoln in the successive vacancies of the said church. AN. MCCCLX. 34, 35. Edward III.

In the great treaty of peace began at the end of April at Bretigne, near Chartres, between the crowns of England and France, among the English commissioners were Sir Richard le Vache of Bigenhull in Burcester, and Sir Miles Stapleton lord of the manor of Middleton; which latter in 30. Edw. III. when Philip, brother to the king of Navarre, came into England to obtain help for the recovery of his lands in Normandy, being an expert soldier, was sent over with him. Whereupon they passed through that country with two thousand men, took and burnt several towns and strong holds, till they came within nine leagues of Paris; and before their return compelled the French unto a truce for one whole year. And having served in these wars with great fidelity and courage, in this year he obtained a grant for an annuity of one hundred pounds, to be paid out of the king's exchequer, at Michaelmas and Easter, by even portions: as also licence to found a perpetual chantry, consisting of one warden and two priests, in honour of the Holy Trinity, within the parochial church of Ingham, to celebrate divine service there, for the good estate of himself and Joan his wife, daughter and heir to Oliver de Ingham, and widow of Roger l'Estrange, during this life: and afterwards for the health of their souls, and all the souls of the faithful deceased. Unto which chantry he gave the advowson of the church of Ingham, and the fifth part of the manor of Stalhamhalle<sup>f</sup>.

In the absence of the king and his four elder sons in France, the French ships had done such mischief on our coasts, and their invasions were so much feared, that orders were given for all laymen between the age of sixteen and sixty to be arrayed for public service, and the stoutest of them to be sent to the Cinque-Ports, to join with the admirals for defence of the kingdom. The archbishops and bishops through their respective dioceses granted indulgences to all those who went to sea against the common enemy, with particular privilege to choose their own confessor. The bishops also themselves, the abbots and priors, rectors, vicars, chaplains, and all men of the church, were to be ready on the land, to defend their country against a descent from foreigners; and all persons beneficed, who could not serve in person, were bound to maintain one in their stead, able for the war; all to be in readiness, whenever the French should land<sup>g</sup>, and so (if possible) to repulse their invading foes.

The king granted to John Chaundos the manor of Wodepiry, com. Oxon. for the usual service<sup>h</sup>. And Simon, son of Walter de Wodeham, in the county of Surrey, released to Nicholas de Loveyn, knight, and Margery his wife, all his right in the manors of Staunton St. John, Barton, and Lageham, com. Oxon; from which family of Loveyn the possessions passed to that of Saint-Clare; of whom Sir Philip Saint-Clare, knight, died possessed of the manor of Staunton, as demesne of the king in capite, 10. Hen. IV. and left John his son and heir a minor in ward to the king<sup>i</sup>.

The vicarage of Ambrosden being now vacant, the rector and brethren of the convent of Ashrugge presented Roger de Stoke, who was admitted in May, as appears by this record.

AN. MCCCCLXXVII. 51. Edward III. 1. Richard II.

The king, a little before his death, granted to John de Beverley, his armour-bearer or esquire, and Amicia his wife, the liberty of free warren within their manor of Bucknell, com. Oxon.<sup>y</sup>

King Edward III. departed this life on June 21. to whom succeeded his grandson Richard, eldest son of Edward the black prince.

The new king, in the first year of his reign, granted to Sir John de Worth, lord of the manor of Bigenhull, and his heirs for ever, the privilege of a market on Friday every week, and one yearly fair, to be held for three days, the eve, day, and morrow after the feast of St. James the apostle, at his said manor of Bigenhull, a small village, now called Burcester-Kings-End; in the street and green whereof the fair (formerly of great note) is to this day yearly kept near the house of John Coker, gent. lord of the manor, to whom it belongs.

The ancient name of Bigenhull remains in Bignell farm, a single house in the lordship of Burcester-Kings-End, which, by the ruins about it, (part whereof are an old ruined church or chapel,) seems to have been (as tradition speaks it) the seat of the lord of the manor. It is now a farm-house, belonging to the daughters and coheirs of Mr. Samuel Lee, and hath been for some time in the occupation of John Willson and his son.

Adjoining to Burcester-King's-End, on the east side thereof, lies another town in the same parish, called Burcester-Market-End. In this town a market is kept weekly on Friday, which might occasion the addition of Market-End thereunto. This market is of great resort, and good vend for all country commodities, especially all sorts of cattle, which make the hair-market in the Sheep-street there.

These two towns tradition will have to have been formerly two distinct parishes also, till they became united upon the building of the new church; a fair church, conveniently seated between the two towns, which seems to have been built in the reign of Henry IV. or

Henry V. To support the tradition of two parishes, I find no better authority than the ruins beforementioned of the church or chapel near Bignell-farm in Burcester-Kings-End, and of a church in Burcester-Market-End, near the hermitage, at the north end of the Sheep-street, long since also demolished. I rather believe that Bigenhull was only a distinct manor like Wrechwike, within the precincts of Burcester, having a chapel subordinate to the mother-church, granted as a privilege to the lord of the manor.

An inquisition was now made in these parts, on occasion of the late death of Sir Richard d'Amory, by which it appeared, that the said Sir Richard held the manor of Hedingdon, and the hundreds of Bolendon and North-gate, Oxford, with their appertenance, by the gift of John Chaundos, knight, during the life of the said Richard, whose heirs were found to be Elizabeth Chaundos and Allanore, sisters of the said Sir John, which Allanore was married to Roger Colyng<sup>2</sup>. This Sir John Chaundos was one of the greatest soldiers of his age, who, in 33. of Edw. III. for his many eminent services at the battle of Poitiers, and in other wars of France, was retained by the king to serve him in the office of vice-chamberlain during his life, and had a pension of one hundred pounds per annum paid out of the Exchequer; and among other lands and profits, he now obtained the said manor of Hedingdon, and the two hundreds of Bolendon and North-gate, which coming formerly to Hugh de Plessets in right of Isabel his wife, he the said Hugh, in consideration of two hundred pounds, &c. conveyed them to king Edward I. in the 33d of his reign.

The prior and canons of St. Frideswide, Oxford, had enjoyed a right of common for all their cattle within the manor of Hedingdon, and in the whole forest of Stowode; which right being denied or dis-

of Edw. III. and where his ancestor Warine de l'Isle, in the tenth of Edw. III. had obtained a charter of free warren, with liberty to enclose one hundred acres of wood, with forty acres of waste, to make a park. He left issue by Margaret his wife daughter of William Pipard, Margaret his daughter and heir, then wife of Thomas lord Berkley, twenty-two years of age<sup>n</sup>.

Sir Roger l'Estrange, baron of Knokyn, having been engaged in the expedition made into Brittany, in the 3d of Ric. II. died this year, Aug. the 26th, being then seized of the manors of Midlington and Burcester, com. Oxon. with the patronage of the priory of Burcester, the manor of Colham, com. Mid. Halton, com. Linc. Middleton, com. Cantab. Shenston, in com. Staff. Ellesmere, with the hamlets of Culmure and Hampton, as also the manors of Strange-Nesse and Kynton, with the castle and lordship of Knokyn, in com. Salop. He left by Aliva his wife, surviving, John his son and heir twenty-six years of age<sup>n</sup>.

Upon the first Saturday in August, a court-baron was held for the manor of Wrechwyke, in Burcester, wherein, after the accounts were given for homage, pannage, and other profits to the lord, a by-law was made, to reinforce all former orders for the regulation of hunting, under the penalty of two shillings to every offender. And whereas it was found, upon inquisition, that the tenants' bees had been much disturbed by the huntsmen, it was provided, that no such farther molestation should be given, under the penalty of forty pence for every such trespass. And Robert Puff and John Cups were appointed keepers of the game within the liberties of Wrechwike<sup>p</sup>.

Philip lord Burnel died the 22d of Edw. I. and left Edward son and heir, who died in the ninth of Edw. II. whereby the inheritance came to Mand daughter of Philip, who was first wife of John Lovel, and then the second wife of Sir John Handlo of Borstall, who had by her a son called Nicholas, who doing his homage in the 22d of Edw. III. had livery of his mother's lands; and assuming her surname

Richard Monteyn, vicar of the church of Ambrosden, in walking over to officiate at the chapel of Musewell, within the precincts of his parish of Ambrosden, had trespassed by leaving the common path, and making a new way, beyond the separate pasture of the lord of the manor called Musewell-field, up to the said chapel. Upon which, Robert James, esquire, lord of the said manor, prosecuted him for the said trespass in the court of the Marshalsea of the king's household at Oxford; where, upon preferring the bill, the said vicar confessed the action, and agreed to allow the yearly sum of six shillings and eightpence for the term of five years, to the said Robert James, esquire, for the liberty and benefit of a reasonable foot-way from his church of Ambrosden to the said chapel of Musewell, by this indenture.

*Hac indentura facta inter Robertum James de Walingford ex parte una, et Ricardum Monteyn vicarium ecclesie de Ambrosden ex parte altera testatur, quod cum prædictus Ricardus vicarius ecclesie prædictæ apud Musewell in com. The vicars of Ambresdon, by reason of that slender maintenance left to them by the appropriators at Asherugge, were forced to be of the number of those Chop-Churches, against whom some late constitutions had been made in this diocese. For the new vicar, John Stonton, upon less than one year's experience, contrived to leave the place, and made another exchange with Robert Wykeham, vicar of Chesham, nigh Woburn, in com. Buck. Upon which compact, the said Robert Wykeham was presented by the rector and brethren of Asherugge; and by proxy of Edward Upton, clerk, was instituted in the said vicarage of Ambresdon, at Lydington, on the twelfth of October, 1402, with instructions to the archdeacon, or his official, to induct him.

*Pridie idus Julii, anno Dom. millesimo quadragentesimo secundo, incipit annus reverendi in Christo patris et domini domini Henrici Dei gratia Lincoln. episcopi consecrationis ejusdem. In quo Robertus Wykeham capellanus præsentatus per fratrem Johannem rectorem domus de Asherugge et ejusdem loci conventum ad vicariam perpetuam ecclesiæ parochialis de Ambresdon per resignationem dom. AN. MCCCCIV. 5, 6. Henry IV.

By an inquisition taken within the county of Bucks. it was found, that Richard de la Pole, lately deceased, held the manor of Mersli, adjoining to Ambrosden, with its appertenances, from the king in capite by knight's service; and that Thomas de la Pole, brother of the said Richard, was his next heir, and had livery of the said manor<sup>q</sup>.

Pope Innocent the seventh, upon petition of the prioress and nuns of Henwode, com. Warwic. gave them his bull to confirm the appropriation of the church of Charlton upon Otmoor, of which the advowson had been given to them by king Richard II. and ratified by the present king Henry IV.

*Innocentius episcopus servus servorum Dei dilectis in Christo filiabus priorissæ et conventui monasterii de Hynwode per priorissam soliti gubernari, ordinis sancti Benedicti Lichfeldensis dioc. salutem, &c. Digna exauditione vota personarum humilium maxime divinis laudibus sacræque religionis observantiæ apostolico nos convenit favore prosequi, et ipsarum necessitatibus occurrere provisionis gratia congruentis. John Gybbes of Watlington released and quit claimed to William, son of Robert Parentyn of Bromham, com. Bedf. all right and claim in a certain tenement in Burcester, nigh the church-yard, opposite to the priory gate; by which situation it is evident, that the new parish church was before this time removed from Sheep-street to the place where it now stands; unless we can suppose, that the cæmiterium parochiale mentioned in this charter was a public burying place distinct from the old church, upon which ground the new church might be after built.

In Trinity term there was a trial in the King's Bench for the manor of Midlington, which was then adjudged and confirmed to Sir Richard l'Estrange, who proved his title by descent from Roger brother of Eubulo the husband of Alice de Lacy<sup>k</sup>.

It is a duty of justice to retract an error committed under the year MCCCLXXVII. 51. Edw. III. 1. Ric. II. where it is said, The king granted to Sir John de Worthe the privilege of a market on Friday every week, &c. which mistake is owing to the abstract made by Mr. Dodsworth; but in truth, though the present market be now kept on Friday, yet the day allotted by that first grant was Monday, as is evident from this transcript out of the records of the Tower, which is since obtained and repositied in the hands of Mr. Coker.

son or one of them being seised or estated in the said rectory and parsonage impropriate of the parish church of Burcester alias Bisseter as also of the manors or hamletts and demesnes to the said priory belonging and having lately by casuall or other means as patrons to the said vicaridge gotten into their hande and custodie or into the hande and custodie of one of them or of some other person or persons to their use as well the said writing or graunt made by the prior and covent aforesaid as also divers other antient writings escripts and miniments testifying the graunting and payment of the tythes aforesaid and of right belonging to the complainant had and did by colour thereof not only by themselves refuse to pay to the said complainant any tyth at all for or out of the said mannor or hamlett of Wretchweeke but had also required their leassees and tenants at will or otherwise of the said premises to keep in and deny the payment of any tythes at all to the complainant who was lawfully presented instituted and inducted to the said vicaridge neither would they the said defendants or either of them yeild to allow or permitt the complainant to have any wood within the priors wood aforesaid or any hay out of the demesnes of the said mannor of Burcester neither would they pay or suffer their farmors to pay the tythes of wool and lambe of 400 sheep depasturing in the common fields of Burcester which had allwaies before tyme out of mind byn used and accustomed to be paid to the vicar of Burcester for the time being neither would they nor either of them discharge the complainant of the burdens first fruits and duties belonging to the said vicaridge as other their predecessors were accustomed to doe. And the said complainant furthermore sheweth that whereas also the said mannor or hamlett of Wretchweeke had been heretofore well manured and inhabited with at least thirty several tenents or householders, freeholders coppieholders and leaseholders whose small tiths yearly would at this day be worth unto the vicar of the said vicaridge one hundred marks at the least The said mannor or hamlett was now depopulated and the same was come wholie to the hands and possession of them the said defendants who notwithstanding their privity to the payment of tythes and the long enjoyment thereof in manner aforesaid would not admitt the complainant to have any tythes or profits at all out of the same nor discharge any duties chargable upon the said vicaridge being so rated in the king's books and being denied and kept from his tythes and other the cheifest profitts incident and belonging to his vicaridge as aforesaid and having no ordinary means of remedy by the common or ecclesiasticall laws of the realm thro want of the writing aforesaid to recover or gett the tythes and profits aforesaid and the arrerage thereof having been unpaid since the tyme of his coming to the said vicaridge should be disabled of any means of maintenance and inforced to give over his cure and charge of the parish committed unto him to his great greife and no little hinderance unless the accustomed favour of this Court were in equity extended to the said complainant therein as by the same bill remaining of record in this Court at large it doth and may appear Unto which bill the said defendants Sir Michaell and Sir Richard

equum unum de prioratu : et oblationes suas scilicet unum denarium de corpore præsentis, et unum denarium pro sponsalibus, et unum denarium

Blount made their joint and severall answers And by the same first the said Sir Michaell for himself said that he did not intermeddle with the possession of any of the lands in the bill mentioned or other parts of them but said that the same lands were in the possession of the other defendant Sir Richard Blount or his assigne by demise and conveyance from him the said Sir Michaell And he further for himself said he did not know of any such writing of composition as in the bill was mentioned neither had he or any other to his use by his knowledge or privity gotten into their hands either such writing of composition or any other writings escripts or miniments testifying the graunting or payment of the said tythes And the other defendant Sir Richard Blount for himself said that he was rightfull owner in possession of the same lands and premises and that he and his farmors or tenants had the use and occupation of the same lands at the time of exhibiting the said bill of complaint and so did still continue And the said Sir Richard Blount likewise denied that he did ever see or know of the said writing of composition mentioned to be made of the tythes by the prior and covent aforesaid otherwise then by a pretended copy thereof shewed by the complainant. And the said Sir Richard Blount farther said that the said prior (before the dissolution of the said priory) and all his predecessors priors of the said priorie before that time held the same lands and premisses in the said bill mentioned in their own hands as the said defendant had byn informed and held the same discharged of tithes and freed from the payment of all manner of tythes whatsoever And the said defendant said moreover that the said prior soe being of the premises seised the same prior and covent surrendered them into the hands of king Henry the Eighth by force whereof the said king was thereof seised in his demesne as of fee in the right of his crowne of England And that after the same surrender and dissolution of the same priory the same priory and lands by means thereof being come to the hande of the said king were by his highness letters patents under the great seal of England bearing date about the two and thirtieth year of his reign to one Roger Moore esq. and his heirs and so from the said Roger Moor the inheritance of the scite of the said priory lands and premises by due course of law (as he the defendant took it) lawfully came and were vested by mean descent and conveyance in him and he being in possession thereof accordingly did retain the tiths of the same premises as he and all those whose estate he had therein since the dissolution of the said monastery had before done and as he took it he might lawfully doe the same being by the statute made in the one and thirtieth year of the said king Henry the Eighth to be held discharged and without payment of tiths in such sort as the said prior at the time of the dissolution aforesaid did or ought to doe And touching the depopulation of the said mannor of Wretchewicke mentioned in the complainants bill the said defendants thereunto said that there never was any such tenants or depopulating of the said hamlett in his time since the dissolution of the said priory but if any such conversion were from village to pasture (as the complainant pretendeth) the same was done (as he the defendent had been informed) many years since and the conversion thereof was no prejudice to the complainant for the lands being freed of payment of tiths before the conversion thereof could not now make the same chargeable with the payment of tythes And the said defendant furthermore denies that he or any other by his means has any such writing of composition or any other evidence or writing which did prove the payment of the said tythes or which did concerne the same or belong to the complainant as by the same were remaining of recorde in this Court more at large it doth and may appear Whereunto the said complainant replied and the partyes thereupon being at full and perfect issue witnesses were examined by commission issuing out of this Court between them, and publication being thereof had and granted a day for the hearing ordering and adjudgeing of the said cause was by this Court appointed At which day (being the xviiith of April in the sixth year of the Kings Majesties reign that now is) upon the hearing of the matter in the presence of the council learned on both parts for and touching the tythes demaunded by the complainants bill It was then ordered that a case should be made and agreed upon by the council on both partes, upon a composition then shewed forth in the Court by the complainant and upon the truth of the matter appearing in the book And if the council could not agree upon the said case, then they were to attend Sir John Tyndall knight one of the masters of this Court who should agree or set down the same case which being set down should be delivered to the Lord Chancellor of England, to the end his lordship might give his opinion and order in the cause as should be meet, who made report that he found it nothing needfull to have any case reported for the composition doth so plainly set it forth that the Court may easily conceive it upon the reading thereof And for his part conceived that according to that composition the tythes and other duties ought in all equitie to be paid at this day. The tenor of which said composition followeth in these words Universis Xti fidelibus ad quos presentes hæ Indentat. perveniunt sive hoc præsens scriptum indentat. pervenit, Edmundus prior prioratus S'tæ Edburgæ Burcestr. ordinis S'ti Augusti. And whereas afterwards upon opening of the matter unto this Court the xxviiith day of May last and upon the reading of the said composition whereby the complainant claimed the tythes in question it appeared plainly unto this Court that the complainant ought to have tythes of all the lauds in question lying in the common feilds uninclosed but the principal question between the parties was for the tythes of the inclosed grounds supposed by the defendant to be excepted in the said composition which this Court thought not fit then to determine of

but did order that the complainant should deliver unto the said Lord Chancellor a breif of the words of the said composition and of the exception therein and of the records taken upon the survey of the priors lands and the defendant was also to set down what the said inclosed grounds were and what quantity they contained and how long since they had been inclosed and what and how many of them were in the priors hands and in tenants hands at the time of the dissolution and deliver the same also to his Lordship who would then be pleased to consider of the same breif or notes and confer with the said Sir John Tyndall and some other of the masters of this Court learned in the civil law and then give such further order in the cause as should be meet and that in the mean time the said defendants should pay unto the complainant all the hay and wood and the arrears thereof according to the said composition and also all the tythes coming and renewing out of the lands lying in the said common feilds uninclosed and all other tythes which were not questionable between the parties And whereas afterwards upon opening of the matter unto this Court on the xiiiith day of February last past it appeared by the composition that the said Sir Richard Blounte ought to pay the tithes of his mills woods furses orchards tith hemp in the feild and his small tiths and discharging the complainants vicaridge of all things chargeable upon the same It was thereupon then ordered by this Court that the said defendant should from thenceforth pay unto the said complainant the said particular tiths as they should fall out together with the arrearage thereof at some reasonable rate and should also repay to the complainant the money by him disbursed for his first fruits tents proxes and synodes and such like and discharge his said vicaridge of all charges wherewith the same is charged according to the said composition And as touching the tiths of the closes which were questionable between the parties It was then thought meet by this Court to the end the complainant might have the defendents good will that the defendent should have and enjoy the said closes and give the complainant a yearly sum of money after a ratable proportion for the tithes of them And to that end the parties or some of them were to attend the said Sir John Tyndall to mediate and set down what the same sum or consideration of the same should be And where also the said Sir John Tyndall afterwards on the xviiiith day of the said month of February made report unto this Court under his hands that concerning soe much as was referd unto him by the said order he was of opinion that these should be yearly paid from thenceforth unto the complainant for the tiths renewing out of the inclosed grounds in question during the time he should continue vicar there the sum of xx<sup>l</sup>. at the feast of the Annunciation of the blessed Virgin Mary and St. Michael the archangel by caven portions and that the said defendant should also permit and suffer the said complainant during the said time quietly and peaceably to take all the profits of a little close called the Dorehouse close and the profits of doves breeding in the said dorehouse there and of a little pightell adjoyning to the said close as by the same report remaining with the register of this Court may plainly and at large appear And whereas the defendents council did afterwards on this instant fourth day of May alledge that the defendent did agree to pay all the said tiths and duties decreed and also the xx<sup>l</sup>. yearly allotted by the said Sir John Tyndall but could not suffer the complainant to enjoy the said dorehouse close and dorehouse with the commodities thereto belonging nor the said pightell for that the said defendent had let out the same formerly by lease and the report of Sir John Tyndall was made in their absence forasmuch as it was thereupon informed by the complainants council that the complainant in respect of the said closes was content to take but only xx<sup>l</sup>. yearly for the tithes of all his closes being by the yearly rent worth nigh 600<sup>l</sup>. It is therefore this present term of Easter that is to say on Thursday the fourth day of May in the year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord James by the grace of God King of England Scotland France and Ireland defender of the faith &c. the seaventh, and of Scotland the two and fortieth By the right honourable Thomas lord Ellesmere Lord Chancellor of England and the high court of Chancery ordred adjudged and decreed that the said decree and report of the said Sir John Tyndall shall stand in force and the complainant shall have the present possession of the said doreclose dorehouse and little pightell and that a suppna be awarded against the tenants to whom the lease thereof is supposed to be made by the defendent to the end they may shew what fine they paid to the defendent for their leases of the said closes that thereupon the defendent may be ordered to repay the same again And whereas it is alledged by the complainant that the defendents tenants of his closes to defraud the complainant of his tythe of lambs and calves which he should have of them in the common fields have alwayes a little before the said lambs

William Welgrave exchanged his church of North-Kilworth, in com. Leicest. for the rectory of Wendlebury, near Burcester, com. Oxon. to which he was presented by the honourable Joan Chedwind, widow, on November the 23d, in the room of Roger Saunder, who had been admitted to the said church on presentation of the said patroness the 24th of September 1402. The advowson was annexed to the manor, which had lately belonged to the family of Pavely, knights, of whom Sir Robert de Pavely presented Geffery de Pavely, admitted on the sixth of the Ides of February 1339, the

A memorable accident now happened relating to Richard l'Estrange, baron of Knokyn, lord of the manor of Burcester, whose wife Constance contended with the wife of Sir John Trussel of Warmington, in Cheshire, for precedency of place in the church of St. Dunstan in the east, London: upon which disturbance, the two husbands and all their retinue engaged in the quarrel; and within the body of the church some were killed and many wounded. For which profane riot several of the delinquents were committed, and the church suspended from the celebration of any divine office. By process in the Court Christian, the lord Strange and his lady were adjudged to be the criminal parties, and had this solemn penance imposed upon them by the exemplary prelate Henry Chicheley archbishop of Canterbury. The lord Strange walked bare-headed with a wax taper lighted in his hand, and his lady bare-footed from the church of St. Paul's to that of St. Dunstan's, which being rehallowed, the lady with her own hands filled all the church vessels with water, and offered to the altar an ornament of the value of ten pounds, and the lord a piece of silver to the value of five pounds. A great example of the good discipline of the church, and of the obedience of these noble persons<sup>y</sup>.

AN. MCCCCXVIII. 6. Henry I.

Sir Edmund de la Pole (great uncle to Michael earl of Suffolk, slain in the late battle of Agincourt, and buried at Ewelme, com. Oxon. 1415.) died this year, having had issue, by Elizabeth de Handlo his wife, Elizabeth married to Sir Ingelram Bruyn, and Catharine wife of Robert James, esquire. By an inquisition taken after his death, it was found, that he held in the county of Bucks by the law of England after the death of Elizabeth his late wife, as in right of her the said Elizabeth, the manor of Borstall, by the serjeanty of keeping the forest of Bernwode, and of paying the rent of sixty shillings for all services; and that he was possessed of three carucates of land in capite in Hedingdon, com. Oxon. by the service of keeping the forests of Shotover and Stowood; and that Walter de la Pole was his son and heir. But the lordship of Borstall, and large estate which came by his wife, passed to Catharine his daughter, wife of Robert James, esquire, who had before held the said manor and custody of the forest, as tenant to his said father-in-law<sup>b</sup>.

John Rowland vicar of the church of Ambrosden, being dissatisfied with his late remove, made a new exchange of benefices with William Brode, rector of Dorsington in the said diocese of Worcester, to which church he was presented by Alice Drayton domina de Dorsington, the patroness. And the said William Brode, on presentation of the rector and convent of Ashrugge, was instituted in the church of Ambrosden by Philip bishop of Lincoln, at his castle of Sleaford, on the two and twentieth day of February<sup>i</sup>.

Michael James, rector of Wendlebury nigh Burcester, resigned his church; to which the patroness Joan Chetwind presented Nicholas de Billington, who was admitted at Sleaford on the ninth day of July<sup>k</sup>.

John Wormenhale, alias Olyver, vicar of the church of Oakle, com. Buck. quit claimed to Robert Potter of Borstall his right to an annual pension of thirteen pence, issuing from a certain messuage, with curtilage, and half an acre of arable land, called Bernard's-place, in Borstall. *Dat. apud Borstall die Veneris in festo S. The inhabitants of Pidington, within the parish of Ambrosden, thinking their hamlet too remote from the parish church, had procured a chapel to be erected within their own village, with a mansion-house allotted for a capellane, to be provided and maintained by the successive vicars. But this method being found a grievance to the inhabitants, and a burden to the vicar, had occasioned some difference between them, which was now composed by the joint consent of the patron, the vicar, and the people, with confirmation of the diocesan. By virtue of this agreement, the village of Pidington was now divided from Ambrosden, and invested with distinct parochial rights: the inhabitants were entrusted with the free choice of a capellane, who, at first admission, was to pay due obedience to each successive vicar, for a token that the said chapel did depend on the parish church of Ambrosden. And the vicar did release and quit claim all right and title to all tithe and other profits arising from the said village, excepting the reserve of twenty shillings in money, and one quarter of wheat, to be yearly paid and delivered by the said inhabitants.

And here, because this agreement was of great consequence, and made the fundamental charter for the parochial rights of Pidington; but chiefly because the dignity and liberties of a mother church, and the institution and dependance of chapels and their capellanes, have been by no author within my knowledge expressly stated; I shall therefore here add some notes and strictures on the preceding record, that may serve to raise the curiosity of a reader, and invite him to more elaborate inquiries into an obscure and useful subject.

Ricardus permissione divina ecclesiæ Lincoln. servus humilis, &c. This active prelate, Richard Fleming, was born at Croston in Yorkshire, in the same house which was the old seat of Mr. Lister, an. 1650. In honour and grateful respect of this place of his birth, he removed the parish church from a low and moist situation, to the distance of half a mile upon a rising hill, where he raised and adorned it all at his own charges, and over the porch fixed his paternal arms cut in stone, viz. argent three bars azure, in chief three lozenges gules, in fess point a mullet of five points sable<sup>p</sup>. He was a member of University college, Oxon. and junior proctor of the University for the year 1407, at which time he was canon of York. At first a warm assessor of Wickliff and his doctrines; but by degrees drawn off, and by preferment made a zealot for the other side. He left Oxford for several benefices in the north, and among others the rectory of Boston in Lincolnshire. By the favour of Henry V. he was promoted to the see of Lincoln anno 1420. He was sent to the council of Sienna anno 1423, where, before pope Martin the Fifth, he made an elegant speech in defence of his country, and became so great a favourite of his holiness, that in the next year, 1424, he was by him nominated to the vacant see of York: but the dean and chapter of that church, in contempt of the papal authority, elected John Kemp, bishop of London: upon which bishop Fleming returned to his see of Lincoln, and anno 1427. began the foundation of Lincoln college, in Oxford, for a seminary of divines, to oppose the obtaining tenets of Wickliff and his followers: but before he could fully accomplish this generous design, he died at Lincoln anno 1431<sup>q</sup>.

Robertum rectorem domus de Asherugge et Johannem Outrede vicarium perpetuum, &c. Note, here is the triple league or joint consent of the diocesan, the patron, and the incumbent, whose suffrages were all required, if the church were full, to authorize an alteration of this kind. In a synod at London, convened by Anselm, archbishop of Canterbury, in 3. Hen. I. the fifteenth constitution provides Ne nova capella fiat sine consensu episcopi, &c.<sup>r</sup> So when an oratory or chapel was allowed at the grange of the abbey of Waverley, in Netham, within the parish of Aultun, com. Southamp. A. D. 1250, it was done by the permission and consent of William de Raley bishop of Winchester, diocesan and patron, and Peter de Ryeval, rector of the church of Aultun<sup>s</sup>. So when the chapel of St. James, at Borstall, within the parish of Oakley, was constituted, anno 1418, the ordination of it was by authority of Philip bishop of Lincoln, diocesan, de consensu et assensu prioris et conventus S. Frideswidæ Oxon. who were the proprietors and patrons, cum voluntate et assensu vicarii ejusdem loci†. And if the lord of any manor or inhabitants presumed to erect a chapel without such due permission and assent, such act was neither just nor valid. Therefore, when a chapel was founded at Watcumb within the parish of Watlington, com. Oxon. by the lord of that manor, for the greater conveniency of his family and tenants, the abbot and canons of Oseney, who were patrons of the parish church, entered a protestation against it; and anno 1182. appealed to Richard archbishop of Canterbury, and from him soon after to pope Urban the Third, who sent over a commission to the abbots of Abingdon and Missenden, and the prior of Kenelworth, who, upon inquiry and judicial process, dissolved the said chapel, because illegally built, without consent of the parties concerned‡.

Capella S. Nicholai confessoris in villula sive hamletta de Pedington. As to the first institution of parishes in England, many of our writers have ascribed it to archbishop Honorius about the year 636, wherein they build all on the authority of archbishop Parker; but Mr. Selden seems rightly to understand the expression, provinciam suam in parochias divisit, of dividing his province into new dioceses; and this sense is justified by the author of the Defence of Pluralities. The like distinction of parishes, which now obtains, could never be the model of Honorius, nor the work of any one age. Some rural churches there were, and some limits prescribed for the rights and profits of them. But the reduction of the whole country into the same formal limitations was gradually advanced, the result of many generations. However, at the first foundation of parochial churches, (owing sometimes to the sole piety of the bishop, but generally to the lord of the manor,) they were but few, and consequently at a great distance : so as the number of parishes depending on that of churches, the parochial bounds were at first much larger, and by degrees contracted. For as the country grew more populous, and persons more devout, several other churches were founded within the extent of the former ; and then a new parochial circuit was allotted in proportion to the new church, and the manor or estate of the founder of it. Thus certainly began the increase of parishes, when one too large and diffuse for the resort of all inhabitants to the one church was by the addition of some one or more new churches cantoned into more limited divisions. This was such an abatement to the revenue of the old churches, that complaint was made of it in the time of Edward the Confessor. “ Now,” say they, “ there be “ three or four churches, where in former time there was but one,

 “ and so the tithes and profits of the priests are much diminished <sup>x</sup>.” When by long use and custom parochial bounds were fixed and settled, many of the parishes were still so large, that some of the remote hamlets found it very inconvenient to be at so great a distance from the church ; and therefore, for the relief and ease of such inhabitants, this new method was practised of building private oratories or chapels* in any such remote hamlet, in which a capellane was sometime endowed by the lord of the manor, or some other benefactor, but generally maintained by a stipend from the parish priest, to whom all the rights and dues were entirely preserved. John Peckham archbishop of Canterbury, anno 1280, mentions this as the popular reason why chapels were allowed in the larger parishes, Capellæ parochianis ipsis ex gratia sunt concessæ, quia ad matricem ecclesiam pro importunitate viarum et temporum et distantie longitudine accedere sæpissime nequeunt ullo modo : nec infirmis periclitantibus commode provideri<sup>y</sup>.

* The way of coming into our churches was anciently at the west door, that men might see the altar and all the church before them ; the other doors were but posterns. Selden’s Table Talk.

Ecclesiæ parochialis de Ambrosden. The parish church of Ambrosden standing above two miles distant from some of the inhabited parts, had two chapels erected within the precincts of it, one at Musewell, and the other at Pidington: that at Musewell was built and dedicated to the Holy Cross, by Ralph, a hermit, with consent of Wido de Ryhale and Joan his wife, who endowed it with two acres of glebe, and the tithe of their whole demesne in Musewell, with free pasnage for hogs, and common pasturage, and some other liberties; after which the said chapel so endowed was given by Joan de Pedington, relict of the said Wido, to the abbey of Missenden, com. Buck. and confirmed to them by Simon de Gerardmulin, second husband of the said Joan, and again ratified by Aubrey earl of Damarun, lord of the manor of Pidington<sup>z</sup>; by virtue of which donation, the said abbot and canons of Missenden received the profits of endowment, and maintained a stipendiary priest to officiate in the said chapel or hermitage of Musewell, which was not by this means parochial, but dependant on the church of Ambrosden, to which all ecclesiastical dues were paid, excepting the foresaid portion of endowment. The other chapel of Pidington was built most likely by the joint contribution of the inhabitants, and had no endowment fixed: but a resident capellane or curate did there officiate, who was maintained by a pecuniary stipend of about five marks annually, received from the perpetual vicar of Ambrosden, or more probably from the joint contributions of the vicar and the inhabitants. For so John archbishop of Canterbury did ordain in the year 1280, that fit capellanes should be provided for the chapels of Tadyngton, Langedon, Basselowe, subordinate to the mother church of Bauquell, in the diocese of Litchfield: for whose support an equal contribution should be made by the chapter of Lichfield, who had the appropriation of the mother church, and the inhabitants of each respective hamlet, of which both parties were to allow at least two marks and a half to make up the accustomed salary of five marks<sup>a</sup>.

It is true, sometimes the whole burden lay only on the vicar, as appears from an agreement made in the conventual church of St. Frideswide, in Oxford, on April the 22d, 1447, between Edmund Rede, esquire, lord of the village of Standelf, and Henry Ferfote, vicar of the church of Pyrton, that whereas the said vicar was bound to maintain a capellane to officiate three days in a week, Sunday, Wednesday, Friday, in the chapel of Standelf, depending on the mother church of Pyrton, the said village being then left desolate of inhabitants, the said Edmund Rede did consent, that, for greater ease of the vicar, he should only there officiate by himself or a curate one day in a week; but whenever the village should be again fully inhabited, then the vicar should be reobliged to his former duty<sup>b</sup>. But this burden was never imposed wholly on the vicar, unless by some special covenant and particular consideration. And it so happened in this last case, when, at the first institution of the chapel of Standelf, the prior and convent of Norton, com. Oxon. appropriators of the church of Pyrton, did covenant to find at their own charge a resident capellane to officiate in the said chapel, which charge those religious men threw upon the vicar<sup>c</sup>.

A mother church was the more honourable for being branched out into one or more subordinate chapels: and therefore a church with a chapel within the precincts of it was sometime called plebania, and thus described, Plebania est aliud genus beneficii, et majus quam rectoria, habet sub se capellas, et dignitatem esse putant interpretes<sup>d</sup>. Therefore by law there was a greater regard had to mother churches than to chapels, as a greater to abbeys and religious houses than to parish churches: the penalty for violation of them being proportioned to their dignity: as appears from those they call King Edward's Laws, renewed by the Conqueror; in the first part of which, providing for the refuge and protection of such as should fly to these places of sanctuary, it is ordained, that whoever should lay violent hands on him who had fled to such sanctuary, if it were an abbey or religious house, the offender should pay one hundred shillings; if a parochial mother church, twenty shillings; if a chapel, ten shillings<sup>c</sup>.

Presbiterum in eadem villula ad ipsorum inhabitantium proprium arbitrium eligendum et nominandum, &c. Before this new agreement, it is certain the inhabitants had no right to the election or nomination of a capellane; but he was either arbitrarily appointed by the vicar, or by him nominated to the rector and convent of Asherugge, whose approbation did admit him to the said employ, or perhaps nominated by the good men of Asherugge (as patrons) to the vicar, and by him presented to the ordinary. The custom herein was different: sometimes a capellane was to be presented by the patron of the church to the vicar, and by him to the archdeacon, who was then obliged to admit him: so the practice obtained in the chapel of Ascote, subordinate to the mother church of Sappewick, where Jeffery de Langley, knight, patron of the said parish church, covenanted that he and his heirs should present a successive capellane, to serve in that chapel, to the vicar of Sappewick, who should present the same person to the archdeacon of Glastonbury<sup>f</sup>. At other times the lord of the manor did present a fit person to the appropriators, who, without delay, were to give admission to the person so presented. Thus Edmund Rede, esquire, lord of the manor of Borstall, had agreed in the year 1449, that he and his heirs should nominate a priest to officiate in the chapel of Borstall to the prior of St. Frideswide, which convent held the appropriation of the mother church of Oakley; and the prior, without demur, (if there was no canonical incapacity,) was to admit of such nomination<sup>g</sup>. So, as the privilege by compact now given to the inhabitants of Pidington was a new and perhaps an unprecedented power, which though they still retain and practice, yet has it already created some evils, and may in time occasion much greater mischief. Of which consequences the exemplary bishop Fell was so sensible, that, upon the last vacancy of that chapel, his lordship was not easily prevailed on to accept of the popular election, and seemed to assert his power and resolution to reform that practice.

Sacramenta et sacramentalia ministrabit &c. et cadavera inhabitantium in capella et cœmiterio de novo dedicatis sepeliet, &c. These privileges of administering the sacraments, (especially that of baptism,) and the office of burial, were the proper rights and jurisdiction, that made it no longer a depending chapel of ease, but a separate parochial chapel. For the liberties of baptism and sepulture were the true distinct parochial rights. And if any new oratory had acquired and enjoyed this immunity, then it differed not from a parish church, but (says Mr. Selden) might be styled capella parochialis. And till the year 1300, in all trials of the rights of particular churches, if it could be proved that any chapel had a custom for free baptism and burial, such place was adjudged to be a parochial church. Hence, at the first erection of these chapels, while they were designed to continue in subjection to the mother church, express care was taken at the ordination of them, that there should be no allowance of font or bells, or any thing that might be to the prejudice of the old church<sup>b</sup>. So in 10. Hen. III. when Baldwyn de Vere erected a chapel at Adinton with consent of the abbot of Croyland, patron, and the rector of the parish church, a form of constitution was made by the diocesan, with this clause, Quod infra capellam vel extra nec baptisterium nec campani, nec aliquid adhibeatur, per quod prejudicium fieri poterit matri ecclesie<sup>i</sup>. So when a chapel was desired by Robert de Haghham, clerk in his court or seat of Haghham, within the parish of Hamelhamsted, in the archdeaconry of Huntingdon, by consent of Richard earl of Cornwall, patron, and Silvian de Oreste, rector of the parish church : bishop Grosthead in the fifth of his pontificate gave commission for it, with this proviso, ut sit sine fontibus et campana<sup>k</sup>. Again, when master Robert Lutterell desired a chapel within his liberty of St. Peter's, in Stanford, for the benefit of students, John de Dalderby bishop of Lincoln, in his fourth year, authorized the doing of it on this condition : Ita tamen quod nec fons baptismalis nec campanile erigantur, nec processio, aut actus cujusvis solennitatis<sup>l</sup>. Therefore, when any subordinate chapel did assume the liberty of burial, it was alway judged an usurpation on the rights of the mother church, to which the dead bodies of all inhabitants ought to be duly brought, and there alone interred. Of which a clear precedent remains in the case of the neighbouring church of Burcester, and her subordinate chapel of Stratton-Audley, in the third of Henry VI. when the capellane of Stratton-Audley, at the instigation of those inhabitants, presumed to bury two dead corpses in the said chapel, in contempt of the mother church of Burcester, to which they ought to have been carried for Christian burial. Upon this violation of parochial rights, the prior and canons of Burcester, who were patrons and appropriators of the said church, made their complaint, and preferred a suit against the inhabitants of Stratton ; and the prior in person went to London, to prosecute and solicit in the cause, which was at last referred to the cognizance of the bishop of Worcester, who came to Burcester as a delegated judge, and held there his court ; where, after due hearing and examining the matter, the bishop determined in favour of the prior, and seems to have punished the inhabitants of Stratton-Audley for their illegal offence<sup>m</sup>. Accordingly, before this act of composition, no doubt the inhabitants of Pidington brought all their dead to the parish church of Ambrosden, which, besides the common equity and custom, is sufficiently implied in the clause that now gives them a new right of burying* at home, in their chapel, and the yard of it, jam tandem de novo rite canonice et legitime dedicatis, because not before consecrated to performance of the office of burial, nor to the celebration of any sacraments. Which privilege being now first granted made it a free parochial chapel; as may be farther instanced from the chapel of Dorton subtus Bernwode, in com. Buck. when first separated from the mother church of Chilton, at which time William Fitz-Pagan, lord of the manor, and Roese his wife, granted to the said chapel two acres of demesne, beside one virgate of land and a messuage which his father had before given; in consideration whereof the abbot of Notteley, to whom the parish church belonged, granted to the said chapel plenarium servitium, et sacerdotem residentem in villa, et sepulturam in cœmeterio capellæ, which made it parochial<sup>n</sup>.

* In the county of Hereford was an old custom at funerals to hire poor people, who were to take upon them all the sinns of the party deceased, and were called sin-eaters. One of them I remember liv'd in a cottage on Rosse high-way. The manner was thus: when the corps was brought out of the hous, and laid on the biere, a loaf of bread was delivered to the sinne eater over the corps, as allso a mazar bowle (a gossips bowl of maple) full of beer, which he was to drink up, and six pence in mony, in consideration whereof he took upon him ipso facto all the sinns of the defunct, and freed him or her from walking after they were dead. In North Wales the sinne eaters are frequently made use of; but there, instead of a bowl of beer, they have a bowl of milk. This custom was by some people observed even in the strictest time of the presbyterian government. As at Dyndar, volens nolens the parson of the parish, the relations of a woman deceased there had this ceremony punctually performed according to her will. The like was done in the city of Hereford in those times, where a woman kept, many years before her death, a mazar bowl for the sinne-eater; and in other places in this county, as allso at Brecon, at Llangors, where Mr. Gwin the minister, about 1640, could not hinder this superstition. Methinks doles to poor people, with mony at funerals, have some resemblance of the sinne-eating. Doles at funerals were continued at gentlemen's funerals in the west of England till the civil warrs; and so in Germany, at rich men's funerals, doles are in use, and to every one a quart of strong and good beer. Aubrey of Gentilisme, MS.

For if any doubt arose whether a village were within the bounds of such a parish, no argument could more directly prove the affirmative, than evidence given, that the inhabitants of that village did bury their dead in the church-yard of the said parish°. As to the original of burying-places, many writers have observed, that, at the first erection of churches, no part of the adjacent ground was allotted for interment of the dead, but some place for this purpose was appointed at a farther distance. Especially in cities and populous towns, where, agreeably to the old Roman law of the twelve tables, Hominem mortuum intra urbem ne sepelito neve urito, the place of inhumation was without the walls, first indefinitely by the way-side, then in some peculiar enclosure assigned to that use. Therefore the Roman pontifical, among infinite other inventions, is in this matter convinced of lying stories, that it makes pope Marcellus, under the tyrant Maxentius, appoint twenty-five churches in Rome to bury martyrs in, when at that time the laws and customs forbade all burial within the city. Hence the Augustine monastery was built without the walls of Canterbury, (as Ethelbert and Augustin in both their charters intimate<sup>p</sup>,) that it might be a dormitory to them and their successors the kings and archbishops for ever. This practice of remoter burial continued to the age of Gregory the Great, when the monks and priests beginning to offer for souls departed, procured leave, for their greater ease and profit, that a liberty of sepulture might be in churches, or in places adjoining to them. This mercenary reason is betrayed by pope Gregory himself, while he allows, that when the parties deceasing are not burdened with heavy sins, it may be then a benefit to them to be buried in churches, because their friends and relations, as often as they come to these sacred places, seeing their graves, may remember them, and pray to God for them<sup>q</sup>. After this, Cuthbert archbishop of Canterbury brought over from Rome this practice into England about 750, from which time they date the original of church-yards in this island<sup>r</sup>. This was a sufficient argument of the learned Sir Henry Spelman, to prove an inscription at Glastonbury to be a later forgery, because, it pretends, Dominus ecclesiam ipsam cum cœmeterio dedicarat, whereas there was no cemetery in England till above seven hundred years after the date of that fiction<sup>s</sup>. The practice of burying within the churches did indeed (though more rarely) obtain before the use of church-yards, but was by authority restrained, when church-yards were frequent and appropriated to that use. For among those canons which seem made before Edward the confessor, the ninth bears this title, De non sepeliendo in ecclesiis, and begins with a confession, that such a custom had prevailed, but must be now reformed, and no such liberty allowed for the future, unless the person be a priest or some holy man, who, by the merits of his past life, might deserve such a peculiar favour. However, at first, it was the nave only, or body of the church, that was permitted to be a repository of the dead, and chiefly under arches by the side of the walls. Lanfranc, archbishop of Canterbury, seems to have been the first who brought up the practice of vaults in chancels, and under the very altars, when he had rebuilt the church of Canterbury about the year 1075. The profit of the ground to the priests and monks, and their arts of turning graves into shrines, and receiving a present for every visit, encouraged them to make thus bold with the church of God. Baldwin, the great civilian, severely condemns this indecent liberty, and questions whether he shall call it a superstition or an impudent ambition<sup>t</sup>. Some of the lay members of that communion were sensible that this custom did not so well agree with the reverence due to those holy places, and therefore took care by their last will to express their resolution against it. This was part of the testament of Sir Thomas Latymer of Braibroke, com. Northampt. dated 13th September 1401. I Thomas Latimere of Braybroke a fals knyght to God, &c. my wrecchyd body to be buried, where that ever I dye, in the next chirche-gerd God vouchsafe, and naut in the chirche; but in the utterist corner, as he that ys unworthi to lye therein, save the merci of God<sup>u</sup>. Since our Reformation, many good persons have made a scruple of it. The pious Dr. Joseph Hall, bishop of Norwich, provided thus by his last will: “ My body I leave to be interred without any funeral pomp, at the discretion of my executors, with this only monition, that I do not hold God’s house a meet repository for the greatest saints.” Dr. William Bedle, bishop of Kilmore in Ireland, ordered his interment to be in the church-yard of Kilmore<sup>x</sup>. Dr. Isaac Barrow, bishop of St. Asaph, who died June 24, 1680, appointed his body to be laid, not within the cathedral church, which he had generously repaired and endowed, but in the church-yard, near the entrance of the west-door of the church. Dr. Edward Rainbow, late bishop of Carlisle, before his death, anno 1684, bequeathed his body to be buried in Dalston church-yard, and to have a plain stone laid over his grave<sup>y</sup>. And the conscientious judge, Sir Matthew Hale, would be interred in the church-yard of Alderley, com. Gloucester, because he did not much approve of burying in churches, and used to say, the churches were for the living, and church-yards for the dead<sup>z</sup>. The like care was taken by archbishop Sancroft, whose example will command the imitation of some other good and pious persons.

In signum quod eadem capella a dicta ecclesia parochiali dependet. At first there were very many signs of the dependance of chapels on the mother church: of which the prime and most effectual was the payment of tithes and offerings, and all profits whatsoever, to the incumbent of the mother church. And therefore, when such chapels were first allowed, a particular reserve was always made, that such a new foundation should be no prejudice to the parish priest and church. The constitutions of Egbert archbishop of York, anno 750, do take care that churches of ancient institution should not be deprived of tithes or any other rights, by giving or allotting any part to new oratories<sup>a</sup>. In a council under king Ethelred, by the advice of his two archbishops, Alpheg and Wulstan, it was provided, Ne ecclesie antiquitus constitute decimis vel aliis possessionibus privarentur, ita ut novis oratoriis tribuantur<sup>b</sup>. Which very words are found in an elder council of Mentz, and in the imperial capitularies<sup>c</sup>. And by the laws of king Edgar, made about 970, it was ordained that every man should pay his tithes to the Ealsan Mynstre, to the elder, or the mother church<sup>d</sup>: only, if a thane or lord should have within his own fee a church, with a burial-place, (i. e. a parochial chapel,) he might give the third part of his tithes to it; but if it had no privilege of burial, (i. e. if it were a bare appendant chapel,) then the lord was to maintain the priest out of his nine parts, i. e. purely at his own charge, without laying any part of the burden on the priest of the parish church<sup>e</sup>. Therefore, when king John, in a letter to the pope, insisted on the building of new churches, as a common liberty of the baronage of England, the pope in his answer assents to it, but salvo jure to the mother church, Laicis quidem principibus id licere nullatenus denegamus, dummodo diocesani episcopi eis suffragetur assensus, et per novam structuram veterum ecclesiarum justitia non ledatur. Thus, in the reign of the same prince, when Hubert archbishop of Canterbury, anno 1200, in pursuance of a decree of the Lateran council, gave licence to the leprous to have a chapel or burial-place to themselves, he interposed this caution, Caveant tamen ut injuriosi veteribus ecclesiis non existant, quod enim eis pro pietate conceditur ad aliorum injuriam nolumus redundare<sup>f</sup>. So in the chapel of lepers at Bradley, com. Wilt. of which the parish church was appropriated to the abbot and regular canons of Nutley, com. Buck, Joceline bishop of Sarum would not proceed to dedicate the said chapel, before he had provided, Ne quid in injuriam vel detrimentum matricis ecclesie de Bradleia ageretur<sup>g</sup>. When a chapel or a gild was to be dedicated to St. John, in the village of Baston, com. Linc. anno 1451, no licence could be granted for the consecration of it, but upon good assurance it should be no prejudice to the abbot and convent of Croyland, the appropriators, and should be rather to the benefit and advantage of the vicar *, Non redundabit in eorum prejudicium sive gravamen, sed potius in futuris temporibus magnum emolumentum sive commodum per hoc ibidem ipsorum vicario deveniet et accrescet<sup>h</sup>. When Hugh de Plessets had a chapel allowed him at his court or manor-house of Cudelinton, now Kidlington, com. Oxon. in the compact made on this account between the said Hugh, baron of Hokenorton, and the abbot and convent of Oseney, who were patrons of the parish church, it was conditioned, that the capellane should not pretend to any parochial dues or jurisdiction, but all should be adjusted, sine prejudicio matricis ecclesie<sup>i</sup>.

Another mark of dependance on the mother church was this: The inhabitants of the village which was thus accommodated with a chapel, were upon some festivals to repair to the mother church, as an expression of duty and obedience to it: this practice was enjoined by the thirty-first canon of the council of Agatha, and recommended by a decree of Gratian, and obtained as a custom in this kingdom. Hence in the fourth year of king Richard II. the inhabitants of the two hamlets of Devetan and Bordesley, in respect of the danger by floods, especially in winter time, and their great distance from the mother church of Aston, in com. Warwic. procured licence for building a chapel within their own village, provided that the said inhabitants should repair to the said mother church† of Aston, on Easter-day, Christmas-day, All-hallows, and the day of the dedication of the said church<sup>h</sup>. So the hospital brethren at Ospringe, in Kent, had a chapel and liberty of sepulture allowed to them; but were obliged to go to the mother church of Feversham on the chief festivals *, Ecclesiam memoratam de Feversham in præcipuis anni festivitibus frequentabunt<sup>1</sup>. Nay, when chapels were first allowed to our colleges in Oxford, it was generally provided that such liberty should be no prejudice to the parish church, and that the scholars of every such house should frequent the said parochial church † in the greater solemnities of the year<sup>m</sup>. Which custom does still prevail at Lincoln college, where the rector and fellows on Michaelmas day go in their respective habits to the church of St. Michael, and on the day of All-Saints to the church of All-hallows. Accordingly it seems to have been the practice of the inhabitants of Pidington, even long after their separation from the parish of Ambrosden, to visit frequently this mother church, though at ordinary times they had the offices of religion at their own chapel. And this not so much a voluntary act, as a necessary duty, which they were obliged to pay in respect and obedience to their ancient mother. For this reason they seem to have had a particular part of the church allotted for their reception; which part does still bear their name, though it has now lost their company. For the range of pews in the south isle are yet called the Pidington seats; which could not be so named because they were the place for the people of Pidington before they had a chapel erected at their own hamlet, because those seats are much later built: and indeed before the age of our reformation, no seats were allowed, nor any different apartment in a church assigned to distinct inhabitants; but the whole nave or body of the church was common, and the whole assembly, in the more becoming postures of kneeling or standing, were promiscuous and intermixed.

Nor did the inhabitants of any village so privileged with a chapel barely visit the mother church, and join in the divine service; but as a farther sign of subjection, they made their oblations, and paid some accustomed dues at those solemn seasons. This was sometimes done upon every one of the three greater festivals of Christmas, Easter, and Whitsunday. Thus, when the prior and convent of Norton, com. Oxon. granted to Ralph de Colnby a chapel at his manor of Standelfe, in the parish of Pyrton, com. Oxon. it was agreed, Ut omnes parochiani prædictæ villæ venient ad suam matrem ecclesiam de Pyrton cum elemosinis suis et oblationibus quibuscunque his festivis diebus per annum, scilicet, ad Nutale, ad Paschu, ad Pentecosten<sup>n</sup>. Sometimes those offerings were made only on the day of the dedication of the mother church: thus an hospital of poor priests founded within the parish of St. Margaret, in Canterbury, had a chapel allowed to them; but this obligation was laid upon them, that upon the greater festivals they should duly resort to the mother church, as all other parishioners ought to do, and in festo sanctæ Margaretæ super altare ipsius ecclesiæ in signum juris parochiani duos cereos trium librarum offerri facient, vel octodecim denarios<sup>o</sup>. At other times and places, these solemn oblations were made only at Whitsuntide, and this chiefly in cathedral and conventual churches, where, among all parish churches that were appropriated to them, or of their patronage, the priests and people came in solemn procession within the week of Pentecost, and brought their usual offerings. Thus the priests and parishioners of those churches, that so depended on the abbey of St. Augustin, in Canterbury, came in procession to the church of that monastery in Whitsun-week, Cum oblationibus et cæteris devotionibus secundum consuetudinem observatam in ecclesiis matricibus dicti regni<sup>p</sup>. We may fairly presume, that this old custom gave birth and name to the Pentecostals, or Whitsun contributions, that were allotted to the bishops, and are still paid in some few dioceses<sup>9</sup>. Perhaps the annual sum of six shillings and eightpence, now constantly paid by the churchwardens of Pidington to those of Ambrosden, had hence the first original: for that this yearly acknowledgment did arise from custom, and not from the first compact of division, does appear from the no mention made of it in the precedent form of agreement. It is true, the inhabitants of Pidington have a tradition, that this money is paid by them for repair of the bells at Ambrosden, and as a consideration for their liberty of ringing at all times. But this could never be the first design of this pension, nor was it formerly so expended; for in the old ledger or church-book of Ambrosden, under the year 1552, 6. Edw. VI. there is this memorandum entered, Receyved Pedyngton rent by Champson, and paid to the plummers for the reparations of the church, and xxix<sup>s</sup>. more paid, &c. which is proof enough, that the payment of one mark from Pidington was not appropriated to the use of the bells, but might be employed at discretion to any direct service of the church. All the ground for their tradition can be only this, that, when the inhabitants of Pidington came to bring such annual offerings to the church of Ambrosden, they rang the bells as a part of that solemnity; and when instead of making their personal oblations they compounded for six shillings and eightpence, they might continue the custom of ringing, when they lost that of offering, and so might imagine they paid for the use of those bells, which they have now no more right to claim, than the inhabitants of any other parish. Though I rather believe this settled contribution was indeed owing to another cause, namely this: the inhabitants of a village wherein a new chapel was erected were still bound to be equally assessed with all other parishioners toward the repair and support of the mother church. And sometimes this obligation was to continue by express covenant even after their chapel was made parochial. So when the chapel of Borstall was dedicated anno 1418, it was agreed, that all expences toward the building, repairing, and providing all necessities for the mother church of Oakley, should be proportionably raised on the lands and tenements as well of those who inhabited in Borstall, as of those who dwelt at Oakley<sup>r</sup>. By virtue of such practice, the inhabitants of Pidington might be obliged to bear an equal share with all other inhabitants of Ambrosden toward the maintenance* of the mother church, till they might at last compound for the yearly sum of vi<sup>l</sup>. viii<sup>d</sup>. to prevent the trouble of accounts. Most certainly in that age the uses of the church required much greater supplies than in the present time; as may be easily presumed, if we can have the curiosity to look over this account of the ornaments or implements of churches, in those days of ignorance, when toys and baubles were a great part of religion. *Invenitur in missali ecclesie parochialis de Warnburn in com. hamlets and distant villages of a large parish made one of their annual processions to the parochial church with flags and streamers, and other ensigns of joy and triumph. This custom might possibly after the Conquest be introduced by the Normans; for among the ecclesiastical constitutions made in Normandy, anno Domini 1080, it is decreed, that once in a year, about Pentecost, the priests and chapellanes should come with their people in a full procession to the mother church, and for every house should offer on the altar a wax taper to enlighten the church, or something of like value<sup>t</sup>. In these tumultuous processions the patron of the church, if there present, had a right to carry the chief flag or the first colours<sup>u</sup>. So when Sir John de Molins, lord of the manor, and patron of the church of Stoke-Pogeis, com. Buck. had been a special benefactor to the canons of St. Mary Overy, in Southwark, they did in requital 9. Edw. III. grant several favours to him* and his lady; and farther obliged themselves to do him this justice, that the said John, his heirs and successors, lords of Stoke, should have precedence in the church of Stoke, and in all processions, as the patrons thereof ought to have<sup>x</sup>. And in the patron's absence, the disputes for precedence did often create such quarrels, that bishop Grossthead, in this diocese, gave special instructions to prevent this mischief; commanding that rectors of churches and parish priests should not suffer their people in the annual visitation of their mother church, to contend for precedence of place, because fighting and killing did often thence ensue<sup>y</sup>. This procession with flags and streamers made such a military figure, that in the hedges and woods betwixt Haulton and Farnham, com. Sur. the bearers were taken for a troop of armed men, when in Ro-

Oxon. to her husband Thomas earl of Lancaster, was taken by force from Cane-ford, com. Dorset. and carried to John earl of Warren then at his castle of Rigate, in Surry<sup>z</sup>. While the attendants that guarded her fled at this appearance, supposing it a well armed party that came to rescue her; but were soon sensible of the mistake, and found them only the streamers and banners of priests and people going in procession. We may see much of the legal dependance of a chapel* on the mother church, in the case of Hilton versus Paul, one an inhabitant of the ancient parish of Hinkley, the other of the village of Stoke-golding, in 3. Edw. I.<sup>a</sup>

Quilibet presbyter ad dictam capellam nominandus, &c. in suo primo adventu vicario ejusdem ecclesiæ de Ambrosden obedientiam debitam faciet. This due obedience was required as the truest sign of subordination. Thus in cells that were subjected to greater houses of religion, obedience was to be paid as from the members to the head<sup>b</sup>. And when monasteries gave or assigned their appropriated churches to a secular priest, or to a body of religious, they required an oath of fidelity and obedience, of which the form is to be seen, as sworn to the abbot of St. Augustin<sup>c</sup>. So was the capellane or curate of a chapel to be bound by an oath of due reverence and obedience to the rector or vicar of the mother church. This act of submission was appointed by a constitution of Robert Winchelsey archbishop of Canterbury. Capellani ad celebrandum in quacunq; ecclesia nostre provincie receptis debet injungi in virtute obedientie, &c. Item presbyteros hujusmodi juramento volumus astringi, quod rectoribus vel vicariis et presidentibus ecclesiarum seu capellarum in quibus celebra- verint, non detrahent, sed quod eis humiliter parebunt, et debitam reverentiam facient et impendent<sup>d</sup>. Which oath of obedience was this, “ That to the parochial church and the rector and vicar of it, they “ would do no manner of hurt or prejudice in their oblations, portions, and all accustomed dues ; but as much as lay in their power, “ would defend and secure them in all respects : that they would by “ no means raise, uphold, or any way abett, any grudges, quarrels, “ difference, or contention, between the said rector or vicar and his “ parishioners ; but as far as in them lay, would promote and maintain peace and charity between them.” And it was ordained, that all stipendiary priests and capellanes should make such oath before the rector or vicar or their deputy, on the first Sunday or festival after their admission : and should not presume to celebrate divine service before such oath was actually taken, (at least if the rector or vicar did insist upon it,) on penalty of incurring irregularity, and such other punishments as the canons did inflict on all that violated the constitutions of holy church. And if the foresaid capellanes after such oath taken, should be convicted of the breach of it, or if suspected, should not be able to purge themselves, that then they should be turned out, and proceeded against as perjured persons. It is farther advised, that the rectors and vicars debent benigne recipere, ought courteously to receive, or rather favourably to interpret, such oaths ; and to keep in their churches a copy of the premises<sup>e</sup>. The practice of that age was agreeable to this constitution* : when the prior and convent of Daventre, com. Northamp. patrons of the church of Preston, gave licence to Hugh de Capes to erect a chapel in his manor within that parish, they articulated for an oath of the capellane to the vicar of Preston, Salvo juramento cujuslibet capellani in prædicta capella divina celebraturi successive super fidelitate observanda in omnibus suprascriptis matriæ ecclesie de Preston, et vicario ibidem celebranti†. And if any capellane renounced this obedience, and presumed to act in contempt of the mother church, and the incumbent of it, a judicial process was formed against him, of which the issue was to eject and to suspend him. Thus when Robert de Lisures, capellane of Ascote, within the parish of Sappewick, stood in defiance of the abbot and convent of Glastonbury, to whom the church of Sappewick, com. Dorset. was appropriated, and refused to pay the usual reserve of four marks to that mother church; an appeal was made to the pope, who delegated the abbot and prior of Hide to examine and determine the cause, upon which the said prior, in person, and Walter de Derneford, deputed by the abbot, sat as judges, and condemned the said capellane to the loss of his cure, and to perpetual silence, in the year 1246; which sentence was confirmed by pope Innocent the Fourth by special bull, dated on the twelfth of the calends of July 1248‡. Thus stood the case, no doubt, in right and fact, between the vicar of Ambrosden and the capellane of Pidington: for the obedientia debita must imply such subjection and fidelity, as the laws of the church and the custom of the age did then require, which was the solemn oath before delivered, and the strict observation of it. It is true, this deference to the mother church and sworn submission to the vicar of Ambrosden have been for some time intermitted; a fault to be imputed to the negligence of vicars, and the confusion of times. For the obligation does still remain in full force and virtue, since it was made by such “canons, constitutions, and ordinances, as be not contrariant nor repugnant to the laws, statutes, or customs of the realm, nor to the damage or hurt of the king’s prerogative royal, and therefore are to be now still used and executed<sup>h</sup>.” If the parochial chapel of Pidington become vacant in my time, I think myself obliged to insist on this acknowledgment from the succeeding capellane; and I heartily recommend to my successors the same just regard to their own duty and the honour of their church. Or if we cannot oblige the capellane to an express oath, yet we ought to require his appearance in the mother church, there solemnly to make some written, or at least some verbal declaration to the same import, as the ancient oath provided. The inhabitants of Pidington may as well detain from the vicar of Ambrosden their covenanted dues of twenty shillings and one quarter of wheat, as the capellane can refuse this due obedience: the same contract did establish both, and the same justice will recover both.

Inhabitantes de Pidington vicario et successoribus viginti solidos per æquales portiones, &c. When a chapel was made parochial, one of the remaining signs of dependance on the mother church was generally some stated pension* to the rector or vicar of it. Thus when the chapel of Ascote† was divided from the church of Sappewick, a pension of four marks was reserved to the proprietaries of the old church<sup>i</sup>. So at the consecration of a parochial chapel at Borstall, within the parish of Oakley, com. Buck. dedicated to St. James, Nov. 2, anno 1418, it was done with reserve of honour to the mother church, and a yearly pension of one shilling to the vicar of Oakley, Reservato semper honore ecclesiæ parochiali de Oakle, et duodecim denariis in festo S. Michaelis singulis annis imperpetuum solvendis vicario ibidem<sup>k</sup>. There be in many other places some small annuities paid from one church and parish to another, which could arise only from some agreement of this kind, when at first the parish that pays was divided from the parish that receives the pension: though the memory of such division be lost, and no other token remaining of it. This most probably was the occasion of the yearly rent of six shillings and eightpence, paid from the church of Wendlebury to the adjoining church of Chesterton, which, at the ordination of the vicarage of Chesterton, anno 1403, was reserved to the benefit of the vicar, Item habebit vicarius pencionem unnuam vi. sol. viii. den. de ecclesia de Wendlebury ecclesie de Chesterton predicta debitam ab antiquo<sup>1</sup>. Which I presume to be a fair argument, that Wendlebury was at first a chapel to the mother church of Chesterton. Such pension was paid sometimes by the capellane, sometimes by the lord of the manor, but often by all the inhabitants, according as each party was most interested in founding of the chapel, or procuring it to be made parochial. However the capellane was bound to take care of the just payment of such pension from whatever hands it came, by virtue of his customary oath, and by express authority of a constitution of Othobon, anno 1268, 52. Hen. III. Præcipimus ut capellani ministrantes in capellis, quæ salvo jure matricis ecclesiæ sunt concessæ, universas oblationes et cætera quæ ipsis non recipientibus ad ecclesiam matricem pervenire deberent, ipsius ecclesiæ rectori sine difficultate restituant, &c. Si quis autem restituere contempserit, suspensionis vinculo, quousque restituerit, se noverit innodatum<sup>m</sup>. And upon any neglect or contempt of this duty, the ecclesiastical powers were always forward to vindicate the rights of the suffering church, and to punish the offenders. Thus for one instance, Simon, bishop of Worcester, in the reign of Henry I. had consecrated the chapel of the Holy Sepulchre, in Warwick, within the parish of All-Saints, and a place for burial of the canons, provided the said mother church of All-Saints should suffer no loss or diminution in tithes, burials, offerings, confessions, or other customary dues; and for farther acknowledgment and honour, there should be paid to the mother church thirty pence yearly on the festival of All-Saints, on which, as the day of dedication, the prior of St. Sepulchre, or his representative, should come in person to the said mother church, &c. But in the reign of Hen. II. Ralph, prior of the said house, renounced the dependance of his chapel on the said mother church, and pretended a claim to all parochial rights : of which complaint was made to Thomas Becket, archbishop of Canterbury and legate of the apostolic see, who certified the information to W. archdeacon of Worcester, and required him to examine the truth : and if he found the grievance to be as represented, he should then restore all the rights to the mother church, and should anathematize the unrepenting parishioners, who had detained the profits of the mother church, and transferred themselves to another, contrary to the decree of the bishop, and against all ecclesiastical use and practice <sup>n</sup>.

Et unum quarterium frumenti ad festum Omnium Sanctorum. One quarter, or eight bushels, (formerly summa, now a seam,) of bread corn or wheat. This reserve of such a measure of corn seems derived from the old custom of paying to the parish church a quantity of corn, as the first-fruits for the seeds of the earth, called Cýpic-ŕceaz, i. e. church-scot. The laws of king Ina ordained, that this church-scot should be paid at the feast of St. Martin, on penalty of forty shillings, and restoring twelve times the quantity so detained <sup>o</sup>. This church tribute Fleta interprets certam mensuram bladi tritici <sup>p</sup>. And Mr. Lambart thus expounds it, Fut une certain mesure de blé batu que chescune homme devoit en temps de Briton et des Engles porter a leur eglise le jour S. Martin. When king Canute was returning from Rome, anno 1031, he sent a letter to the whole nation of England, wherein he recommends to them, that before his arrival, they would discharge all those dues which by ancient laws were owing to the church ; and, after others, he concludes with these first-fruits of corn to be paid on the feast of St. Martins, Et in festivitate sancti Martini primitiæ seminum ad ecclesiam sub cuius parochia quisque degit, quæ Anglice Kyrkesset nominatur <sup>q</sup>. The feast of All-Saints, November 1, and of St. Martin, November 11, were the times appointed for the payment of such dues as arose from the fruits of the earth. In the laws or canons of king Edgar, the assignation of time is given, Priests are to instruct the people when to pay their dues to God; common tithes and plough-money within fifteen days after Easter; tithe of young cattle, or the breed of all living creatures, before Whitsuntide; tithe of the fruits of the earth before the feast of All-Saints; the Rome-scot on the festival of St. Peter ad vincula; and the church-sceat at St. Martin's mass<sup>r</sup>. When the Saxon language grew obsolete, this term of Cýpic-ŕceat seems turned by the Normans into aver-corn, of which the quantity was left at first undetermined; but to avoid dispute, was afterwards reduced to a certain measure. So some of the inhabitants of Minstre, in the isle of Thanet, paid to the abbot and convent of St. Augustin's, in Canterbury, (who had the church of Minstre appropriated to them,) a yearly service called aver-corn, by uncertain measure; but it was agreed anno 1263, to fix upon the quantity of two bushels and a half<sup>s</sup>. But all such composition for corn was generally made for delivery on All-Saints day. So the five seams of wheat, paid out of the manor of Heyford-Warine to the priory of Burcester, had this time allotted; Reddendo tamen eas singulis annis prefatis canonicis ad festum Omnium Sanctorum<sup>t</sup>. Had the pension of twenty shillings in money been commuted for a set proportionable quantity of corn, it had been of greater benefit to the succeeding vicars of Ambrosden. In the third of Henry VI. within three years of this composition, wheat was sold at four shillings the quarter<sup>u</sup>: so as the exchange of this pension of xx<sup>s</sup>. into an equivalent portion of corn, had stated the quantity of five quarters; which would sometimes now amount to ten pounds instead of one. For the mischief of a dead and unimproved allowance in money, there is a good instance cited in a charter to the church of Peterborough, by Walter de S. Edmundo, about 1240. where the abbot does grant for God's sake, and in respect to peace, that instead of the assize for corn, which the Celerarius paid him out of Belasise, he would hereafter accept of an equivalent in money, viz. for twenty-eight quarter and one schepe of wheat he should receive four pounds thirteen shillings and ninepence; by which computation each quarter was then valued at about three shillings and threepence. Had the abbey continued, what an unhappy bargain had it proved by this time, when the rent must have kept standing at four pounds thirteen shillings and ninepence; whereas the present value of the corn would have been seldom less than fifty pounds<sup>x</sup>. Such like prejudice was done to the church of Sulthorn, (now Souldern,) com. Oxon. the rector whereof used to receive from the abbot and convent of Oseney one acre of bread corn growing on their demesne of *Mixbury, and fourpence from their demesne of Fulewell, till about the latter end of Henry III. Robert de Hay, rector of that church, agreed to receive one hundred shillings from the said abbey, to purchase to himself and successors the annual rent of five shillings in full compensation for the said acre of corn<sup>y</sup>. So when Maud de Chesny had given to the prior and canons of Burcester five quarters of bread corn out of her manor of Heyford, (now Heyford-Warine,) com. Oxon. to be delivered yearly to them, on condition they should find hosts or consecrated bread at the said church of Heyford. When this manor and church were conveyed to New College, Oxon. Thomas Banbury prior of Burcester, and his convent, did in the second of Henry VIII. anno 1486, release the said rent charge of corn, for the consideration of six shillings and eightpence yearly in money<sup>2</sup>. Which by this time would have borne no greater proportion to that quantity of wheat, than one does to thirty. When parish churches were first appropriated to houses of religion, they were supplied by secular priests, who were stipendiary curates, with the salary of five, or at best but ten marks: and when by the ordination of vicarages this stipend was exchanged into a standing portion of tithe and glebe, and manse, such endowment was generally proportioned to the pecuniary rate of five or ten marks; so as the alteration at that time was no benefit to the priest, only as it bettered his title, and made him a perpetual vicar, instead of an arbitrary curate. But consider, if the portion of the vicar had been allotted in such a certain sum of money, what mendicants must our country vicars now have been: whereas the assignation being made in improveable land and tithe, by this means the value of money abating, and the rate of land and commodities advancing, some vicarages, which at the first ordination had no greater endowment than what was equivalent to five marks, do now afford the maintenance of fifty pounds per annum. Hence the memory of Sir Thomas Smith is highly to be honoured, for promoting the act in 18. Eliz. whereby it was provided, that a third part of the rent upon leases made by colleges, should be reserved in corn, payable either in kind or money, after the rate of the best prices in Oxford or Cambridge markets, on the next market day before Michaelmas and Lady-day. This worthy knight is said to have been engaged in this service by the advice of Mr. Henry Robinson, soon after provost of Queen's college, Oxon. and from that station advanced to the see of Carlisle. And tradition goes, that this bill passed the houses, before they were sensible of the good consequences of it. We know, in the latter times of our confusion, a project was carried on of destroying the ancient right of tithes, and converting that pious maintenance of the clergy into settled portions of money. How fatal this innovation would in time have proved is ingeniously urged by two reverend and learned writers<sup>a</sup>. We have had some benefices in England altered into such method by decrees in Chancery, with a certain sum in money allotted for a compensation of all tithes: this may seem an ease, and perhaps an advantage upon the first establishment of it; but unless the incumbent be invested with a power of revocation, and, as the reason alters, can re-assume his right of tithing, I am sure, in an age or two, the successors will suffer extremely by such a bargain. For a living now of one hundred pounds per ann. in composition money, will, in a future generation, by this stinted revenue, not exceed another living, that is not at present of half the value in glebe and tithe. And it will then too late appear, that the predecessor who complied with such a change did not consult the interest of the church, and that such a decree did not become a court of equity. It is very obvious to consider, that nothing has been a more unjust diminution of small tithes, than the custom of a rate in money, instead of the tithable thing in kind; though such rate, no doubt, when first imposed, was equivalent to the thing commuted for it, when now they bear a small or no proportion. As for instance, in one of the old Saxon laws confirmed by the Conqueror<sup>b</sup>, it is provided, that if a man have one or two colts, he shall pay for the fall of each one penny, and the like for calves: which was a very just proportion when the best colt or calf was not valued above tenpence; but the iniquity is, that this custom does still obtain in many parishes; and the like minute consideration for wool and lambs; where, for custom sake, the trifle must be taken, without allowance for the much advanced value of them. By which means the modus decimandi is a growing injury, and calls for a relief by law, when it shall please the wisdom and the justice of our governors. Those eight men of quality and learning, who were appointed at the beginning of our Reformation to collect such ecclesiastical canons as ought to remain in force, freely declared their judgment, that these customs ought to be abrogated. And the learned Mr. Cowell has professed the same opinion, that it is reasonable to take away all such customs, as do lessen the tenth part due to the church of God<sup>c</sup>.

Ad mansum vicarii prædicti solvent et liberabunt. The money and corn are to be brought and delivered at the manse of the vicar, i. e. the vicarage-honse. This covenant obtains, and is the present custom: but not with that free livery and exemption from all cost and trouble, which the reason of the contract, and the words of it do imply. For now the inhabitants of Pidington pretend to claim an entertainment from the vicar at the time of bringing in the corn, and presume to come with the number of five or six men and horses, (when two would be sufficient,) and expect to be received with that plenty and freedom, as must prove a great burden to the poorly endowed vicar, and must be uneasy to any sober serious man. It is certain there was no such condition inserted in this original agreement; and therefore can be only an abuse crept in by the confidence of such guests, and by the mistaken hospitality of some cheerful vicars: who, by running themselves into such needless and unjust expence, did in effect purchase their own dues. This very corruption was expressly condemned by one constitution in a synod at Winchester, anno 1308<sup>d</sup>, and another made by Richard bishop of Durham, anno 1312<sup>e</sup>; both which declare, that all ecclesiastical dues are to be voluntarily and unconditionally paid, and therefore censure those parishioners who expect feasts and bribes from the priests, before they would pay their tithes. If the vicars who began this mode of hospitality could have confined it to their own pleasure, or only to their own time, they might have gone away with the character of great and generous spirits, while posterity had not suffered. But when it is delivered down for a standing rule to those vicars, who have neither the gay humour, nor perhaps the good ability, of the first authors of such a sociable practice; those men have much to answer for, who entailed such a burden on their successors; or rather we their successors are less to be excused, if we comply with a pretended custom, which there wants nothing but a blunt courage to break and reform. At least, if the vicar should continue the favour and courtesy of inviting the bearers of the corn to the civilities of his house and table; yet they should be first sensible, it was an arbitrary invitation, not a necessary reception of them. And the church-wardens or their deputies should come only in their own persons, and not bring a train of attendants, to abuse the kindness, and oppress the family of their entertainer. Before the parochial clergy paid their procurations in a fixed rate of money, they were obliged to receive and entertain the archdeacon and his retinue in his visitation of their churches. But for fear the archdeacon and such visitors should trespass on the rural priests by too great a number of attendants; therefore, by a decree in the first council of Lateran, by a canon in a synod held at London, by a bull of pope Clestine, and by other constitutions, care was taken to redress this grievance, by retrenching the retinue of the archdeacon, and limiting the number of five, or at most of seven men and horses. The reason holds much better in the present case: that if the church-wardens of Pidington expect to be civilly received, they should come with a moderate and stated number, and not bring a quarter of wheat, the burden of two horses, under the guard of five or six. For if it be left to their pleasure of choosing their own companions, they may still augment the crew, according to their own want of prudence, and according to every vicar's want of frugality. And so by degrees, instead of coming in duty to bring provision to the vicar; they may come in a sort of procession, and devour more than they bring with them; when it will be high time to forgive them their corn rent, rather than pay so dear for the carriage of it.

Capella sancti Nicholai de Pidington. I have met with no records

nor tradition that assign the time when this chapel of Pidington was first erected. We may conclude it was raised after the building of the present church of Ambrosden; for it seems made after the model of that fabric; the forms are so adequate, that the relation might be easily discovered, and the daughter be known by resemblance of the mother. Whenever the chapel was first built, I believe it was not duly consecrated till ten years before this composition, anno 1418, 6. Hen. V. when William Sokton, suffragan bishop within the see of Lincoln, consecrated the chapel of Saint James, in Borstall, on the second of November<sup>f</sup>, and nigh the same time might perform the same office for this neighbouring chapel of Pidington; which seems to be clearly enough implied by this expression in the present instrument, In eadem capella et ejus cœmiterio jam tandem de novo rite canonice et legitime dedicatis: which dedication anew can be referred to no great distance of time. It was dedicated to St. Nicholas, a saint who was the special favourite* of the Dominicans: the house of that order in Oxford had their chapel dedicated to the same patron<sup>g</sup>, anno 1262. And we find their church at Bologne, and convent at Paris commended to the same protector. The festival of this saint was observed on December 6. and on the Sunday following the inhabitants of Pidington do still celebrate the wake or anniversary of upon St. Nicholas daie. Upon this day rather than any other, because it is singularly noted of this bishop, (as St. Paul said of his Timothy,) that he had known the scriptures of a child. The reason is more expressly set down in the English festival—while he lay in his cradle, he fasted Wednesday and Fryday; these daies he would suck but onse of the day. Therefore children do him worship before all other saints. Gregory’s Remains, p. 114.

* The school boys in the west still religiously observe St. Nicholas day, Decemb. 6. He was the patron of the school boies. The ‘episcopus choristarum’ was a chorister bishop, chosen by his fellow children

the dedication. Thus the age and institution of this chapel are better preserved than the same memorials of the mother church. For though we conjecture the present church of Ambrosden to have been built in the latter end of the reign of king Edw. I. yet we have no records that ascertain the date of it. This defect in the history of parochial churches was complained of by one who would have missed nothing that a diligent search could have found. "We are not only," says he, "without all knowledge when our churches were first founded and endowed; but very much to seek touching many of their presentations and institutions within the compass of time, in which we are sure such there were<sup>h</sup>." It is probable, that at the first consecration of the church of Ambrosden, the picture of the tutelary saint, or some inscription of the name, and time of dedication, was an ornament of some wall or pillar in it. For in the first form of consecrating churches in England, which we meet with, at a synod held at Celchyth, under Wulfred archbishop of Canterbury, anno 816, it is ordained, that when a church is built it shall be consecrated by the proper diocesan, who shall take care that the saint * to whom it is dedicated, be pictured on the wall, or on a tablet, or on the altar<sup>i</sup>. And a late antiquary had an old transcript of a decree made by Robert de Winchelsea archbishop of Canterbury, (who died anno 1313.) and confirmed by Walter Reynolds, his immediate successor, whereby the parishioners through that whole province were commanded to provide, that the image of that saint to whose memory the church was dedicated should be carefully preserved in the

* It was customary for the parishioners to pray to the saint of their own church. Mr. Aubrey, in his Gentilisme, MS. tells this story. Old Simon Brunsdon, of Winterborn Basset in Wilts, had been parish clerk there in the reign of queen Mary, and was afterwards heywerd of the town; he was wont in the summer time to leave his oxen in the field and goe to church and pray to St. Katherine, the tutelar saint of the church; and when he returned, if any of his herd were stung with the gad-fly, and run away, he would run after them and cry out, Pray good S. north wall, about five foot from the ground, there was a small square tablet of brass, with a Latin inscription in old characters, telling the time when the church was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. So in some former age, no doubt, the saint of the church of Ambrosden (quisquis fuit ille Deorum) was known, and worshipped by those who worshipped they knew not what. But at present, we have no other notice of the guardian saint, but what arises from the annual wake, or feast of dedication, observed on the first Sunday after the nativity of the Virgin Mary, September 8, which our people call the latter Lady-day. From whence we may fairly infer, that the church of Ambrosden was dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

The *wake (or customary festival for the dedication of churches) does signify the same as vigil, or eve. The reason of the name is best given from an old MS. legend of St. John Baptist. And ye shall understond and know how the evyns were first found in old tyme. In the beginning of holi chirche it was so that the pepull cam to the chirche with candellys brennyng, and woulu wake and coome with light toward night to the chirche in their devociouns: and after they fell to lecherie and songs, and daunces, harping, piping, and also to glottony and sinne, and so tourned the holiness to cursydnes. Wherefore holy faders ordained the pepull to leve that waking, and to fast the evyn. But hit is called vigilia, that is waking in English, and it is called the evyn, for at evyn they were wont to come to chirche<sup>1</sup>. It was in imitation of the primitive ἀγάπαι, or love feasts, that such public assemblies, accompanied † with friendly entertainments, were first held upon each return of the day of * consecration, though not in the body of churches, yet in the church-yards and most nearly adjoining places. This practice was established in England by pope Gregory the Great, who, in an epistle to Melitus the abbot, gives injunctions to be delivered to Austin the monk, a missionary to England, among which he does allow that the solemn anniversary of dedication should be celebrated in those churches which were made out of heathen temples, with religious feasts kept in sheds or arbores, made up with branches and boughs of trees round the said church<sup>m</sup>. But as the love feasts held in the place of worship were soon liable to such great disorders, that they were not only condemned at Corinth by St. Paul, but prohibited to be kept in the house of God by the twentieth canon of the council of Laodicea, and the thirtieth of the third council of Carthage; so, from a sense of the same inconveniences, this custom did not long continue of feasting in the churches or church-yards; but strangers and inhabitants paid their devotion of prayers and offerings in the church, and then adjourned their eating and drinking to the more proper place of public and private houses. The institution of these church

* In the old time, when they were to build churches, they watched and prayed all night on the vigil of the dedication, and took that point of the horizon, where the sun arose, for the east, which is the reason of that great variation of the posture of churches as to the due east. So that except those that are dedicated about the equinoxes, few are true. From this hint, I have made trial of some churches, and have found the length of the church to point to that part of the horizon, where the sun rises on the day of that saint to whom it is dedicated. As for example, at Hothfield in Kent, (the seat of my singular good lord Nicholas E. of Thanet,) the church is dedicated to St. Margaret, (a saint of great veneration in Kent, there being very many churches dedicated to her,) where I observed and found, that the line of the church answers to the sun rising on St. Margaret's day, 20th July, when the sun's amplitude by the globe is about 30 degrees from the east. I did make this observation precisely on the day of the vernal equinox, 1673, at sun setting. This church is old; in the east window is the coat Badlesmere, whose daughter and heir Mannors married. encænias, or wakes, was, no question, on good and laudable designs : as, first, thankfully to commemorate their bounty and munificence who had founded and endowed the church ; next, to incite others to the like generous acts of piety ; and chiefly to maintain a Christian spirit of unity and charity, by such sociable and friendly meetings : and therefore care was taken to keep up the laudable custom. The laws of Edward the Confessor give peace and protection in all parishes during the solemnity of the day of dedication, and the same privilege to all that were going to or returning from such solemnity<sup>n</sup>. In a council held at Oxford, anno 1222, it was ordained, that among other festivals should be observed the day of dedication of every church within the proper parish. And in a synod under archbishop Islip, (who was promoted to the see of Canterbury, anno 1349.) the dedication feast is mentioned with particular respect. This solemnity was at first celebrated on the very day of dedication, as it annually returned. But the bishops did sometimes give authority for transposing the observation to some other day, and especially to Sunday, whereon the people could best attend the devotions and rites intended in this ceremony. Thus the parishioners of Bishops-Wilton, in Yorkshire, complaining to archbishop Kemp, that their wake-day, on the 15th of September, was inconvenient to be kept on a week-day, because it fell in the middle of their harvest ; he therefore transferred it to the Sunday following, by an instrument<sup>o</sup> dated at Bishops-Thorp, 22d September, 1441. So also at Tadcaster, in Yorkshire, the church's festival being on the 28th of August, it was in the year 1314 assigned to be kept on the Sunday next ensuing the feast of the decollation of St. John Baptist<sup>p</sup>. Nay, at last, this convenience of Sunday above the week days, was the reason of attempting an universal change. For among the injunctions of king Henry VIII. anno 1536, it was ordered, that the dedication of churches should in all places be celebrated on the first Sunday of the month * October for ever<sup>q</sup>. Yet this order was not enforced, or not obeyed: but, however, most of those jubilees are now celebrated near the time of Michaelmas, when a vacation from the labours of harvest and the plough does afford the best opportunity for visits and sports: so at Pidington and other places in this county. This transposing of the day has left it more difficult to know the saint to whose protection the church was committed. There be only these grounds of safe conjecture. Such wakes as are observed on the first or second Sunday after † Michaelmas-day, in these we may doubt a translation of time by virtue of the said injunction of Henry VIII. or by a prevailing custom of postponing such solemnity to the end of harvest: and in such cases the saint may be lost, unless some other way preserved. But as to those wakes which are precedent to Michaelmas, or distant from that time; these we may believe have continued in their primitive relation to their proper saint, and no farther removed than to

† It was a remark of Sir W. Dugdale, in some discourse with Mr. Aubrey, that most churches dedicated to St. Michael, either stood on high ground, or els had a very high tower; as at St. Michael's church, Cornhill; St. Michael's Mount, in Cornwall. The chaple on Glastenbury Torre is dedicated to St. Michael, &c.

the immediate Sunday following. For wherever these Sunday wakes are guided by a foregoing festival, we may be justly satisfied, the church was dedicated to the saint of that day. It is a rational and just opinion of Sir Henry Spelman, that fairs were first occasioned by the resort of people to that place, for solemnizing some festival, and especially the feast of the church's dedication. And hence he thinks it easy to conjecture to what saint the church had been commended by the fair-day<sup>r</sup>. Indeed pope Gregory the Great, in one of his homilies, alludes to this as a popular and familiar custom, Certe sicubi populus nundinas celebraret, si ad alicujus ecclesiæ dedicationem denuntiata solennitate concurreret, festinaremus omnes simul inveniri, &c.<sup>s</sup> Where he plainly intimates, that a fair arises from a conflux of people on the * wake, or dedication day. In most of the towns and parishes in England, (except where the privilege of new fairs has been in later times obtained,) the old stationary fairs, whether by custom or by an ancient charter, depend upon the saint of the church. Thus the primitive fair in Oxford was on the day of St. Frideswide, because it was the dedication day of the chief conventual church<sup>t</sup>. Thus the translation of Becket's body was on the seventh of July, and his passion on the twenty-ninth of September, which days being soon celebrated at Canterbury for festivals, and days of dedication of altars and chapels to that martyr, it occasioned two fairs in that city annually on those days<sup>u</sup>. On the said seventh of July there is a fair at Bromhill, near Brandon-Ferry, in Norfolk, and another at West-acre, about four miles distant from Swafham,

* It is very remarkable, that in Holland the dedication of a church being called kerk-misse, or kermisse, i. e. the church-mass, or solemn service on the day of the church's consecration, all fairs are there called kerkboth called Becket's fair : and in both places there are old ruinous chapels which were dedicated to that supposed saint. Instances of this nature are too numerous to recite, and too obvious to need a proof. I only add, that at Burcester the wake is observed on the Sunday next following the festival of St. James, and a fair is there kept on the said festival, and on the two days immediately before and after, which is a good argument (though other authorities be wanting) that the old parish church of Burcester was dedicated to St. James, as the new church might possibly be to St. Edburg, the patroness of the adjoining convent. For I make no doubt, but there had been a customary fair at Burcester, or Bigenhull, on the same feast of St. James, long before king Richard II. gave a charter for it ; such charters being often a confirmation rather than a new grant, and were chiefly obtained to confer a property on some particular person of the profits of the fair, which were before in common, and therefore subject to great disputes. So king Richard gave a charter for a fair to be holden eight days in Peterborough, beginning on the feast of St. Peter, on which day a fair had been kept by immemorial custom, because the church had been dedicated to that saint<sup>x</sup>. To confirm the original of fairs from the dedication of churches, it is observable, that, on this account, fairs were generally kept in church-yards, and even in the churches ; till the indecency and scandal were so great, as to want a reformation. In the year 1230, 14. Hen. III. among the inquiries to be made at a visitation by all archdeacons within this diocese of Lincoln, the 25th and 26th were to discover and regulate this abuse<sup>y</sup>. Soon after this, king Henry III. by express mandate forbid the keeping of Northampton fair in the church or church-yard of All-Saints, in that town<sup>z</sup>. Whereupon Rob. Grosthead, the good bishop of Lincoln, sent positive instructions through his whole diocese, “ prohibiting all fairs to be kept in such “ sacred places, pursuant to the king's example, who had made the “like reformation at Northampton<sup>a</sup>.” This duty he recommended in letters to his several archdeacons, and then sent a copy of the instructions to all rectors and vicars of churches within his diocese<sup>b</sup>. Yet this corruption did long after that time prevail. For in a comment on the Ten Commandments by way of dialogue between Dives and Pauper, printed at London, anno 1493, we find a zealous complaint of this profane custom<sup>c</sup>. Dives—What saiest thou of them that hold markets and feyrs in holy chyrch and in sanctuary? Pauper—Both the byer and the seller and men of holy chyrch that maintain them or suffer them when they might lett it been accursed. . . . . They make Goddes house a den of theyeves; for commonly in such feyrs and markets wheresoever it be holden, ther ben many theyeves mychers and cut-purse. Dives—And I dread me that full often by such feyrs Goddes house is made a tavern of gluttons, and a bordel of lychours. For the merchants and chapmen kepe there with theym their wives and lemans both night and day. And what if the prelates and the curates of the place take monys of the chapmen for the place that they stand in by covenants, &c. It was likewise to this relation of fairs to the wakes, or days of dedication, that an old custom crept in of keeping some fairs upon the very Sundays, because the dedication feasts fell on those days, till this abuse, like the other, was thought fit to be restrained: as particularly in these parts, the fairs and markets kept on Sundays at Walingford, Bereamsted, and Brackle, were altered to week-days by special writs from the king, in 2. Hen. III.<sup>d</sup> Thus were the anniversaries of a church’s dedication celebrated in populous towns with an accustomed fair; and in the most private parishes with feasting and a great concourse of people. And as there have been many gifts and legacies to universities and colleges, for the commemorating of founders’ and benefactors’ days; so were some donations made to churches purely for this pious use of more solemnly celebrating the wake, or dedication feast.

Thus Walter de St. Edmund, abbot of Burg, did, about the year 1240, give the sum of forty shillings per ann. for making more plentiful provision in that convent on the day of their church's consecration<sup>c</sup>.

This laudable custom of wakes prevailed for many ages, till the nice Puritans began to exclaim against it as a remnant of popery. And by degrees the precise humour grew so popular, that, at the summer assizes held at Exeter, an. 1627, the lord chief baron Walter and baron Denham made an order for suppression of all wakes. And a like order was made by judge Richardson for the county of Somerset, an. 1631. But on bishop Laud's complaint of this innovating humour, the king commanded the last order to be reversed, which judge Richardson refusing to do, an account was required from the bishop of Bath and Wells, how the said feast days, church ales, wakes, and revels, were for the most part celebrated and observed in his diocese. On the receipt of these instructions, the bishop sent for and advised with seventy-two of the most orthodox and able of his clergy, who certified under their hands, that on these feast days (which generally fell on Sundays) the service of God was more solemnly performed, and the church much better frequented both in the forenoon and afternoon, than on any other Sunday in the year; that the people very much desired the continuance of them; that the ministers did in most places do the like for these reasons, viz. for preserving the memorial of the dedication of their several churches, for civilizing the people, for composing differences by the mediation and meeting of friends, for increase of love and unity by these feasts of charity; for relief and comfort of the poor, &c. On the return of this certificate, judge Richardson was again cited to the council table, and peremptorily commanded to reverse his former order. After which it was thought fit to reinforce the declaration of king James, when perhaps this was the only good reason assigned for that unnecessary and unhappy licence of sports, &c

“ We do ratifie and publish this our blessed father’s decree, the rather because of late in some counties of our kingdom we find, that under pretence of taking away abuses, there hath been a general forbidding not only of ordinary meetings, but of the feasts of the dedication of churches, commonly called wakes.” However, by such a popular prejudice against wakes, and by the intermission of them in the late confusions, they are now discontinued in many counties, especially in the east and some western parts of England, but are commonly observed in the north, and in these midland parts.

William de la Pole, earl of Suffolk, baron of Hokenorton, &c. in consideration of his many services formerly performed, and the good services of Alice his wife, obtained a grant to himself and the said Alice, and the issue male of their two bodies, (in case Humphrey duke of Gloucester should happen to die without issue of his body,) of the name, title, and honour of earl of Pembroke, and (for the better support of the same honour) of the castle and lordship of Kilguran, and commots of Estrelaw, Treyne, and Seyn-Clare, as also of the lordship of Landstephan, all in Wales; to hold to himself and the said Alice, and the issue male of their two bodies; but for lack of such issue to revert to the crown<sup>z</sup>.

On some dispute relating to the manor of Brehull, and the advowson of the church of Oakle, com. Buck. a reference was made to a verdict of a jury returned in the latter end of the reign of Edw. III. which is good authority for the conveyance of the said manor, and the title of the said advowson.

William de la Pole earl of Suffolk, baron of Hokenorton, lord of the manors of Ewelme, com. Oxon. and Mersham, com. sceptre, with a dove on the head of it, upon the coronation day of the king's heirs and successors; as also another sceptre of ivory, with a golden dove on the head thereof, upon the day of the coronation of the then queen, and all successive queens of England. And being now great steward of the king's household, he was sent in November into Sicily, as proxy of king Henry, to perform the solemnity of marriage with the said Margaret, and espoused her honourably in the church of St. Martin, at Tours, in Turin. And in consideration of this voyage, and the great expences of it, he obtained a grant, that in case he should depart this life leaving his heir in minority, Alice his wife, with his executors, should have the wardship and marriage of his heir<sup>d</sup>.

Nigh this time a register was made of the tenths of all ecclesiastical revenues, spiritual and temporal, within the archdeaconry of Oxon. bearing this title. Registrum de decimis domini regis tam spiritualibus quam temporalibus infra archidiaconatum Oxon. existentibus. Where the valuation and tenths of the vicarage and impropriation of Ambrosden are thus recorded.

Forty marks was the standing valuation of the benefice of Ambrosden, as taxed before the impropriation of it, anno 1291, 19. Edw. I. The proportion of the parsonage to the vicarage is here computed 14<sup>l</sup>. 11<sup>s</sup>. 2<sup>d</sup>. q. to 10<sup>l</sup>. but the inequality is now at least much more unjust, even above three parts to one. This estimation of the vicarage at 10<sup>l</sup>. was in 26. Hen. VIII. advanced to the taxation of 11<sup>l</sup>.

17<sup>s</sup>. a higher rate than is fixed to some benefices of more than double the value. But this at the time of reformation was a new abuse put upon the poor vicars, that instead of obtaining a restitution of what the monks had plundered from their parish churches, they were with strange oppression taxed for the very profits that had been stolen, and were still detained from them. For in this new valuation of Hen. VIII. vicarages were computed, as if the greater tithes were included with them : so as the first-fruits and tenths fell as heavy on the vicar, as if he had been rector of the same church. Though this was an injustice so apparent, that it could never have been established into a law, if the nobility and gentry had not thought they were themselves more likely to be appropriators than vicars of a church.

As at the time of taxation under king Edw. I. so the church of Ambrosden did still continue within the deanery of *Cudesdon ; but at the erection of a new see at Oxford, or near that time, it was transferred where now fixed, to the deanery of Burcester. The dean of which place had a seal of his office, which was found among the ruins of the adjoining fort of Allchester, of which a double impression in wax is to be found before and after the Manuscript History of Allchester, of which the figure is a pelican standing on a font, or other pedestal, opening her breast with her bill, and feeding a brood of young ones with her own blood ; as tradition goes of that indulgent bird : the form of the seal (agreeable with the most ancient) is oblong oval ; and round the margin, nigh the extremity of the circumference, is this inscription, S. Decani Berencestric. Under the impress the author of the said manuscript has put this note ; “ The “ inscription of this seal is, Sigillum Decani Berencestric, shewing it

Burcester moſt certainly had never any cathedral dignity, but is ſtill the head of a rural deanery. Not to trace the original inſtitution and juriſdiction of rural deans beyond our own church and nation, we find this practice to have obtained among our Saxon anceſtors. For in one of the laws aſcribed to Edward the Confefſor, it is provided, that of eight pounds penalty for breach of the king’s peace, the king ſhall have one hundred ſhillings, the earl of the county fifty ſhillings, * Decanus autem epiſcopi in cujus decanatu pax fracta fuerit reliquos decem†, which words can be applied only to the office of rural deans, according to the reſpective diſtricts which they had in the parts of every dioceſe. As no precise time can be determined, when this office firſt began, ſo neither have any writers aſſigned the cauſe or reaſon of its inſtitution, which I think to be this. In the external policy of the Chriſtian church, ſeveral eccleſiaſtic offices of dignity and power were modelled by the examples of places and perſons in the civil government. It was ſo in the primitive ages through the eaſt and weſtern empires, where (as if the church by this compliment courted the favour and protection of the ſtate) the titles and preeminence of patriarchs, primates, metropolitans, and ſome other dignitaries, took the riſe and foundation from the temporal powers, that is, from their different exerciſe of government in cities and countries. The office of rural deans was undoubtedly owing to the ſame emulation of following the methods and forms of civil government ; and therefore, as in this northern kingdom, for the better

* Under the Saxon government, becauſe there could be no breach of the king’s peace, but it muſt alſo break the peace and unity of the church, the biſhop or dean in whoſe deanery the peace was broken, had in ſome caſes 10<sup>s</sup>. for his part of the mulct or fine, as appears in the laws of Edward the Confefſor. conservation of peace, and the more easy administration of justice, every hundred was divided into ten districts or tithings; each tithing made up of ten friborgs, each friborg of ten families; and in every such tithing * Statuerunt justituarios super quosque decem friborgos, quos decanos possumus appellare, Anglice vero Tienhepos, i. e. caput de decem ‡; which justices, or civil deans, were to examine and determine all lesser causes between villages and neighbours; to levy the fines or emendations according to legal forfeitures; to compose all occasional differences, and prescribe the measures of satisfaction: and for this purpose to keep their stated meetings for complaint and inquiry; but to refer all greater or more criminal causes to the superior justices, or those who had † jurisdiction over the whole hundred<sup>h</sup>. So in compliance with this secular method, the spiritual governors, the bishops, divided each diocese into deaneries or tithings, each of which was the district of ten parishes or churches; and over every such district they appointed a dean, who should in like manner reconcile the differences of Christian neighbours; and receive complaints, and inquire into grievances, and impose the lesser censures of the church: and for this purpose to hold their solemn chapters, and preside in them, and judicially determine all matters of less concern; but to refer the cognizance of all greater causes, and suffer appeals to the superior courts of Christianity, and so on, to the supreme ecclesiastical judicature. These deans were constituted over such a number of churches within a large city, and were then called decani urbani<sup>1</sup> and vicani; or else over the like extent of country churches, and were then strictly called decani rurales. And indeed, the tithing-men in the state, and the rural deans in the church, had the extent of their jurisdiction and the exercise of it so much alike, that the one could be no less than a transcript of the other. And therefore it is farther observable, that we meet with no such offices as rural deans in Italy or Spain; but I think only in England, France, and Germany, or those northern parts, where the like custom in civil policy prevailed. And as hundreds and tithings kept their name, when they bare no longer a strict relation to the number of villages or people; so likewise the rural deaneries continued, when they lost their first allusion to ten parishes or churches, and the district of them was contracted or enlarged at the pleasure of the bishop. Though some deaneries do still retain the primitive allotment of ten churches, especially in Wales, where the most ancient usages continue: in the diocese of St. Asaph, the deaneries of Broni-field and Yale, and of Kidwen; in Bangor diocese, the deaneries of Llin and of Llivon; in the diocese of Landaff, the deanery of Usk; in that of St. David's, the deanery of Emlin, have the precise number of ten parish churches. And several other deaneries, that upon their new division were made up of two conjoined, or three contracted into two or one, do now contain the number of fifteen, twenty, or thirty churches, according to the division so made. As for instance, the present deanery of Burcester is made up of thirty-one parish churches: of which the one church of Ambrosden being excepted, as before the Reformation being in the deanery of Codesdon, the remaining thirty do expressly answer the three distinct deaneries of Curtlington, Islip, and Burcester, of which the two former were annexed to the latter.

* Ed. Conf. L. L. 32. saith that there were justices over every ten freeborghs, called deans or tienheofod, (that is, head of ten,) which among their neighbours in townes compounded matters of trespasses done in pastures, meadows, corn, and other strifes arising among them. But the greater matters (saith he) were referred to superior justices appointed over ten of them, whom we call centurions, ceentenaries, or hundredors, because they judged over an 100 freeborghs. ib.

‡ Leges Edw. Confess. 32. de centurionibus.

† The lords of the hundred by the laws of Hen. 1. c. 8. were to hold their courts twelve times in the year, i. e. once a month; especially a full appearance was required twice a year. So the deans had their synods.

The like office of deans began very early in the greater monasteries, especially in those of the Benedictine order<sup>k</sup>; where the whole *convent was divided into decuries, in which the dean or tenth person did preside over the other nine; took an account of all their manual operations<sup>l</sup>; suffered none to leave their station, or omit their particular duty without express leave; visited their cells or dormitories every night; attended them at table, to keep order and decorum at their meals; guided their conscience; directed their studies, and observed their conversation; and for this purpose held frequent chapters, wherein they took public cognizance of all irregular practices; and imposed some lesser penances, but submitted all their proceedings to the abbot or prelate, to whom they were accountable for their power, and the abuses of it<sup>m</sup>. And in the larger houses, where the numbers amounted to several decuries, the senior dean had a special preeminence<sup>n</sup>, and had sometimes the care of all the other devolved upon him alone. And therefore the institution of cathedral deans was certainly owing to this practice. When in episcopal sees the bishops dispersed the body of their clergy by affixing them to parochial cures, they reserved a college of priests or secular canons for their counsel and assistance, and for the constant celebration of divine offices in the mother or cathedral church; where the tenth person had an inspecting and presiding power, till the senior or principal dean swallowed up the office of all the inferior, and in subordination to the bishop was head or governor of the whole society. His office, as described in the churches of Litchfield and

* The writer of Kentigern's life saith, that in his monastery at St. Asaph, he had 365 monks for divine service; which no man will literally understand, that knows the place. Perhaps the meaning might be, that beside those thirty bishops which Patrick ordained for the bishops sees, he also ordained as many suffragans, as there were rural deaneries, in each of which there were eight or nine parish priests, taking one deanery with another. If St. Patrick would so far consult the eas of the bishops or the people's convenience, he might doe it without altering the species of the church government. B'p of St. Asaph's Hist. Account of Ch. St. Paul's, was to have authority over all the canons, presbyters, and vicars; to give possession to them when instituted by the bishop; to inspect their discharge of the cure of souls; to convene chapters, and preside in them; there to hear and determine proper causes; and to visit all churches once in three years within the limits of their jurisdiction<sup>o</sup>. The men of this dignity were called archipresbyteri, because they had a superintendence or primacy over all their college of canonical priests; and were likewise called decani Christianitatis, because their chapters were courts of Christianity, or ecclesiastical judicatures, wherein they censured their offending brethren, and maintained the discipline of the church within their own precincts. But now both these titles of archpresbyter and dean of Christianity were equally and indeed more commonly attributed to the urban or rural deans. And therefore it is a disingenuous reflection made<sup>p</sup> (by a late publisher of many useful tracts) on the learned and noble Du Fresne, for confounding in his glossary the dean of Christianity and the rural dean; whereas this wise reflector would have the dean of Christianity to signify no other office but the dean of a cathedral church; though he seems to advance this notion only for an opportunity (which he might have more justly taken in another place) of commending Dr. John Tillotson, then dean of Canterbury, "who was worthily to be called a dean of Christianity, because no man in that age taught Christianity more happily than he did." I would forgive him the wit and sense of this allusion, if the whole fancy were not built upon a most false supposition. For first, this editor has delivered his judgment by way of note or explication to an epistle of bishop Grosthead, wherein he complains to the itinerant justices, that they had highly injured H. decanum Christianitatis Lincoln. which person our annotator would have to be Henry de Lexinton, then dean, after bishop of Lincoln. An apparent mistake; for this Robert de Lexinton, justice, made his last itinerant circuit<sup>q</sup> an. 1246. 26. Hen. III. at which time not this Henry, but one William, was dean of Lincoln, and seems to have so continued during the whole contest between the bishop and the chapter, which was not determined till the year 1250<sup>r</sup>. Besides, the bishop's letter states the case of the dean's forbidding the justices to try sanguinary causes upon the Sunday, and for this affront to have been turned out of his house, and the doors shut up; with such other circumstances as could not so well agree to the cathedral dean, but to the city dean, whose office it was to preserve ecclesiastical discipline under the bishop within the city, as the rural deans did in the country. But, what alone is a demonstration, if Henry de Lexinton, dean of Lincoln, were here meant, then he suffered all this barbarous usage from his own brother; for this Henry was the younger brother of the said Robert de Lexinton, justice, by whose interest he was advanced to the deanery; and after the death of his elder brother John, 41. Hen. III. did succeed to the whole estate of his two brothers<sup>s</sup>. So as our editor plainly mistakes the matter of fact, and offers at a comment to destroy the text, by imagining the bishop to mean Henry de Lexinton by H. dean of Christianity; when the history will by no means agree to that person; but must refer to some other officer, who was not dean of the church, but dean in the city: and therefore the editor, in his following notes, should have retracted this error, as he has done that other, of calling the monks of Canterbury, Augustine Benedictines<sup>t</sup>. Secondly, the editor founds his own judgment of the identity of cathedral dean and dean of Christianity, on the sole authority of Mr. Somner<sup>u</sup>; wherein he commits another absolute mistake in delivering the judgment of that learned antiquary; who does no way assert that the dean of Christianity in Canterbury, and the dean of the cathedral in Canterbury, were both one office. Mr. Somner knew it had been ridiculous to have hit upon such a notion. For within the time he mentions, there was no such dignity or style as a dean in the collegiate church of Canterbury, (excepting the bishop of London, who by his place was dean of the see of Cant.) Indeed, while there was a body of secular canons before and at the conquest, the president of them had the title of dean. But when archbishop Lanfranc introduced regular monks, their governor was a prior. Canonici cathedrales præpositum suum decanum vocabant, quem nos post adventum Lanfranci priorem appellamus<sup>x</sup>. How could Mr. Somner be guilty of such ignorance, as to mean a cathedral dean of Canterbury, when there was no such name or office in being. He had before said, that rural deans were the same with archipresbyteri vicani or rurales, set to oversee a certain number of parishes, &c. and after some discourse of rural deans in general, he comes to him whom he calls our particular dean, by whom he expressly understands an ecclesiastical dean within the city before the Reformation, not the modern cathedral dean. And he observes this officer wrote and styled himself decanus Christi (it should be Christianitatis) civitatis Cant. where his titular relation to the city does plainly enough exclude his immediate dependance on the cathedral or priory: and it was for this reason the treasurer of the church appealed to him to excommunicate the citizens who detained their rent, because the inhabitants of the city were under his proper jurisdiction, and not in subjection to the prior. And therefore, thirdly, the editor begins to be less confident of Mr. Somner's judgment; and observes, that in his glossary to the Decem Scriptores, he seems to have changed his opinion. True, in his excellent glossary he does more than seem to make the dean of Christianity a rural or an urban, not a cathedral dean; but it is no change of opinion, for he had said nothing to the contrary in any other of his writings. Nay, the person styled Decanus Christianitatis, upon which he glosses, as occurring in the chronicle of William Thorn, is there expressly distinguished from the prior of the church of Canterbury, and called Decanus Christianitatis ejusdem civitatis, for a plain declaration, that his authority obtained within the city, not within the precincts of the church. After all, this editor refers the reader, barely as Mr. Somner had referred him, to Roverius's History of St. John's Monastery at Rhemes. Whereas if he had consulted that book, he must have found, that the learned author does expressly distinguish the deans of Christianity from the cathedral dean<sup>y</sup>, and seems to imply, that the latter had never the office or appellation of the former; but that deans of Christianity were altogether those archpresbyters who were set over the parochial clergy and people within such a district, either in cities or in country villages. Though I rather believe, that father Rovier is almost as much in one extreme as Mr. Brown is in another. The truth seems to be this. As the style of dean of Christianity was by no means appropriated to the cathedral deans, so it might perhaps be sometimes ascribed to them, yet not in reference to their own cathedral church, but with relation to the city or country churches which the canons held as prebends, or the whole body as appropriations. For as in larger monasteries we meet with those officers who bore the dignity and name of * deans of Christianity of their respective houses, because it was their duty to inspect those monks who had the care of parish churches, and for that purpose to keep chapters and courts, and exercise a discipline within the parishes so subjected to their convent; so likewise the cathedral deans might have the same authority over those churches which were annexed as prebends to their canons; and therefore, though in respect of their cathedral church they were simply called archpresbyters or deans, yet in the other respect of being visitors of the churches to which their own canons were entitled, by virtue of this jurisdiction so far in common with the urban, rural, and conventual deans, they might be styled on this account (as the others all were) decani Christianitatis. It was by virtue of such practice, that secular deans and chapters (like the regular monks and canons) pretended an exemption of their own parish churches from the jurisdiction of the bishop. It was on this false title the dean and canons of Lincoln denied to bishop Grosthead the power of visitation within their prebendary churches; and when he prosecuted them for this contempt, they sued a prohibition in the king's court, and forced the good bishop to appeal to the pope, and take a long journey to him; where the power of visitation was adjudged to the bishop, and in like case to all diocesans<sup>z</sup>.

The antiquity of these deans of Christianity was much greater, and their office more honourable, than that of archdeacons, who were at first employed by the bishops in more servile duties, and always in subservience to the urban or rural deans, to whom they were as much inferior, as their order of deacon * was to that of priest. But the archdeacons, by the advantage of a personal attendance on the bishop, were by him intrusted to examine and report some causes, and by degrees were commissioned to visit the remoter parts of the diocese, and so to exercise some other judicial power; till under the bishop's favour and protection they † encroached upon the rights and jurisdiction of the deans, getting first an ascendant, and at last, by prescription, a superiority of office<sup>a</sup>. Rural deans, at the beginning of their institution, were elected by the clergy of their own district; and when confirmed by the bishop, were not to be ejected without the joint consent of their own presbyters<sup>b</sup>. But in latter times they were delegated and removed by the bishop's sole power, and were called his adjutors and ministers<sup>c</sup>. Nay at last, they became such dependants on their former servants, that they were nominated in some divisions by the archdeacon, and had a delegation of his power, revocable at pleasure. And this precarious title made them to be called temporary deans, in distinction from the perpetual deans of cathedral and collegiate churches<sup>d</sup>. But they were often unwilling to be divested of their office; and for this reason a constitution of Otho, the pope's legate, anno 1236, did oblige them to a quiet cession of their place, and a delivery of their public seal, when thereto required, readily and without delay<sup>e</sup>. Upon which John de Athon in his glossary, complains of the ill observance of this duty of submission; and says, the rural deans pretended to a right of possession against the will and command of their superiors, because they grew fat upon extortions, and sucking the blood of the poor. When perhaps the truer reason of their refusal was a sense of the invasion of their ancient rights, and their innovated subjection to the archdeacon's growing power. Before this declining state, they were sometime made a sort of chorepiscopi, or rural bishops, being commissioned by the diocesan to exercise episcopal jurisdiction, for the profits whereof they paid an annual rent; but as the primitive

But without episcopal rights, their proper office gave them sufficient authority and figure in the church. They held their capitula, or chapters, made up of all the instituted clergy, or their curates as proxies of them, and the dean as president or prolocutor. These were convened either upon more frequent and ordinary occasions, or at more solemn seasons for the greater and more weighty affairs. Those of the former sort were held at first every three weeks<sup>g</sup>, in imitation of the Courts Baron, which run generally in this form, De tribus septimanis in tres septimanas; but afterward they were most commonly held once a month at the beginning of it, and were for this reason called kalendæ, or monthly meetings<sup>h</sup>. But their more solemn and principal chapters were assembled once a quarter, in which there was to be a more full house, and matters of greater import were to be here alone transacted<sup>i</sup>. All rectors and vicars, or their capellanes, were bound to attend these chapters, and to bring information of all irregularities committed in their respective parishes<sup>k</sup>. If the deans were by sickness or urgent business detained from their appearing and presiding in such conventions, they had power to constitute their subdeans or vicegerents. The place of holding these chapters was at first in any one church within the district, where the minister of the place was to procure for, i. e. to entertain the dean and his immediate officers. But because in parishes that were small and unfrequented, there was no fit accommodation to be had for so great a concourse of people; and because the deans brought a retinue that were a burden and grievance to the entertainer; therefore, in a council at London, under archbishop Stratford, anno 1342, it was ordained, that such chapters should not be held in any obscure village, where it was difficult to get provision; but in the larger and more eminent parishes, where the company could be best accommodated. And all the officials and servants of the dean were to have their charges defrayed by their master, without burden to the clergy<sup>1</sup>. To secure the attendance of all the parochial clergy * at these chapters, within one year after their admission to their benefices, they took an oath to the dean salvis juribus capituli, to bind themselves to due reverence and obedience, and to come to the yearly chapters, and at all other times, when upon urgent cause the dean should call them together, and to bear

This had been observed in the Puritan's Defence of the Admonition. 8vo. 1601. p. 419. The dean, prebendaries, and canons have certain parochial churches exempted from the bishops, within their exempt and peculiar jurisdictions—nay, which is more, in Cheshire, Lancashire, Yorkshire, Richmondshire, and other northern parts, there be many whole deanries exempted from the bishop's jurisdiction, wherein the deans and their substitutes have not only the probate of wills, and granting of administrations, but also the cognisance of ecclesiastical crimes, with power to use the ecclesiastical censures. part of the public expences : nor were they admitted to sit in chapter before their taking such oath<sup>m</sup>. In these stated chapters, they were to publish the decrees of provincial and episcopal synods, and all their ecclesiastical laws and canons, and to enforce the execution of them. And particularly in their four quarterly chapters, they were to take care that the constitution of Othobon, the pope's legate in England, anno 1260, against priests keeping of concubines, should be recited distinctly and openly before the whole chapter, all laymen being first excluded<sup>n</sup>; who were allowed to be present during the agitation of such matters as were of common and general concern, but were to be shut out at the proclaiming any orders, or denouncing any censures that related to the clergy : a wise method to preserve the reputation of that sacred function. These were their courts of Christianity, where complaints and informations were exhibited of all offenders against the laws and discipline of the church : and upon examination and proof of any less irregularities, they were to admonish the parties, and exhort them to repentance and amendment ; while for the guilt of any greater crime, or for contempt of the court, they had power to suspend any laymen from the sacraments, and clergymen from the execution of their offices, but might not proceed to any greater punishment<sup>o</sup>. In any personal suit, they were to stop all process, upon the parties' offer of composition, or their consent to stand to the arbitration of friends<sup>p</sup>. They had at first the probate of wills, and the decision of all testamentary causes, till the archdeacons broke in upon this privilege, and assumed it to themselves : for which Mr. Somner cites an injunction of the archdeacon to all rural deans in the diocese of Canterbury<sup>q</sup>. They had likewise the cognizance of all matrimonial causes, and matters of divorce ; till in the council at Oxford, under Stephen Langton, archbishop of Canterbury, it was ordained, that no suit of divorce should be determined but by the bishop or his deputy; and no sort of matrimonial cause should be any longer examined by rural deans, but by archdeacons with great diligence, or by their discreet officials<sup>r</sup>. Yet the explanatory constitution of Otho on the same subject, anno 1236, does grant that these deans might still by privilege or custom claim the same authority<sup>s</sup>; though the gloss indeed destroys the text, by pretending the word decani means cathedral, not rural deans; which is no doubt contrary to the sense of that constitution, and the signification of the word when it stands alone in all other canons and prescripts. But it is apparent, that the glossator, John de Athon, canon of a cathedral church, was a professed enemy to rural deans; and in several of his notes slurs over the dignity and authority of this office. The same partial humour runs through the glosses of William Lyndwood, official of the court of Canterbury, who visibly strains the sense of some terms and expressions, in prejudice to the rural deans; and does in one place roundly condemn them all for men unlearned and ignorant of the law<sup>t</sup>. The reason of this is obvious. The rural deans were for the most part plain and honest divines, not much skilled in the subtilties of the civil or the canon law; but were not the less capable of such office and jurisdiction as depended on known custom and the rules of equity. But by degrees, when the methods of ecclesiastical justice corrupted into a greater art and mystery, then began the canonists to pretend themselves the only fit ministers in all courts of Christianity; and under this character insinuated themselves* into the favour and counsel of the bishops, and so obtained the new titles of archdeacons, officials, and chancellors; and then run down the rural deans for men of ignorance and incapacity, that they might the more easily invade all the powers and profits of their office. This seems the less strange, because the like humour does still prevail among our professors and students of the civil and ecclesiastical law, who can think none but themselves qualified for any office that relates to the judicial authority of the church. So that if a divine be made chancellor or official in a bishop's or archdeacon's court, they believe it no less than an usurpation of their right. Whereas, though greater rewards and honours be justly due to that noble and useful profession; yet those judicial offices are perhaps more agreeable to the function and abilities of many clergymen, who would preserve the discipline, and dispense the justice of the church, with more regard to equity, and more honour to religion. But to return: the rural deans, in their chapter or court of Christianity, had not only the probate of wills, but, as ordinaries of the place, they had cognizance of all other matters that were appendant thereto; as the confirmation of executors, the designation of administrators, the receipt of inventories, the disposition of legacies, the distribution of intestate's goods, &c.<sup>11</sup> They had likewise a great share in the trials* for the right of advowson, and the possession of benefices, while, by orders from a superior judge, they were to make inquisition into the darrein presentment, or last turn of presentation: and by the verdict of such inquest could prejudice the present incumbent, and give possession to a new clerk, till the abuse of this power occasioned a regulation of it in the council at Lambeth, an. 1281, where it was provided, that no dean should make any inquisition in the business of presentation, unless in a full chapter of that district to which the church belongs, to which the present possessor should be legally summoned, with such due notice, that he might have time to apply himself to counsel, and be sufficiently provided to defend his cause. And if the deans should make any other clandestine and false inquisition, they should satisfy the possessor in all damages sustained by such practice, and the intruder should be perpetually excluded from such benefice, and be suspended from all other ecclesiastical benefice for three years<sup>x</sup>. In these conventions of the dean and clergy, (which were called chapters, consistories, calends, synods, and sessions,) a solemn publication was to be made of what cases were especially reserved to the diocesan, and what to the apostolic see, that no inferior court might presume to meddle beyond the just bounds of their own authority<sup>y</sup>. And finally, all the parochial clergy were here to communicate the state of their own churches; and to give information of all delinquents, and to report the behaviour of all penitents within their parish, and how every one submitted to his penance and satisfaction, that the right courses might be taken for his admittance into the bosom of the church<sup>z</sup>. But in short, rural deans and chapters were altered their primitive constitution, and then by degrees dissolved them. For though the archdeacons were not very forward to pay this attendance upon rural chapters, and therefore thought themselves well enough excused, if they appeared in them twice a year; and very rarely observed this constitution, quia lucrum pecuniarium eis inde non applicatur, i. e. because they got no money by it<sup>b</sup>; yet their appearance gave them such a presiding place and authority, that they perfectly eclipsed the rural deans, and discouraged them from the customary convening of chapters, wherein they had sat once as judges, but now as ciphers. And as a farther grievance, when the archdeacons could not personally preside in these chapters, they sent their officials to represent them, who claimed the same preference above the rural deans, who by degrees absented from those courts, in which they saw themselves degraded; and left them to the sole management of those who had thus usurped a precedence in them. So as in the beginning of king Edw. I. John de Athon declares, that the rural chapters were generally kept by the officials of archdeacons, and more seldom by the rural deans. By such means these ancient chapters became obsolete and abrogated; while, so far as they were courts of Christianity, they resolved themselves into one standing ecclesiastical court in every archdeaconry; and so far as they were conventions of the parochial clergy, they passed into solemn visitations, in which the clergy of every deanery should assemble once or twice a year; but rather cited as delinquents, than admitted as judges and coassessors: an honour and privilege, which remained no longer than they were an ecclesiastical corporation of rural dean and chapter.

The rural deans, as distinct and separate from their chapter, had a great trust reposed in them, and very considerable power in preserving the peace, and asserting the discipline of the church. They were to have a general inspection and superintendence over all the inhabitants of every village within their district; where, if any Christians lived in any open and scandalous sin, the dean was to reprove their offence, and admonish them to repent, as they would answer it to God and the church. And if any laymen should despise such correction and admonition of the dean, they should be kept from setting their feet within the doors of the church, till they should submit themselves to his reproof and wholesome advice<sup>c</sup>. And if any laymen stood accused of incontinence, or other grievous crime, in any spiritual court, the deans, for their wisdom and fidelity, were intrusted to take their purgation<sup>d</sup>; that is, to let the suspected persons clear themselves, either by their own oath, or the oath of credible compurgators, so to vindicate their innocence, and stop the prosecution. And no doubt the like custom obtained in the case of the laity, as it was especially provided for the clergy, that no purgation should be taken out of the deanery wherein the party lived<sup>e</sup>. But if any person lying under a defamation upon a third admonition should refuse to make confession and satisfaction, then their purgation should be proposed to them, which should not be deferred for the consideration of any money paid or promised, but should be dispatched on the first solemn day after it was prepared, on penalty of the dean being suspended from his office<sup>f</sup>. But the more especial duty of the rural deans was to inspect and censure the manners of their clergy, Presbyterorum qui per minores titulos habitant vitam jugi circumspeditione, &c.<sup>g</sup> And in order to this, they were to solicit them to a due execution of their office, and a just regard to their function; to admonish them of all scandals and offences; to warn them against all cohabiting with wives or concubines; to forbid them an appearance at any indecent sports and plays; to press upon them the observation of canonical hours; to remind them of being strict in their clerical habit and tonsure, &c.<sup>h</sup> And upon their default or offence in any such matter, to certify the bishop, by whom they were appointed to watch and to inform with diligence and singular courage. But at last, all this supervising care seemed to devolve entirely upon the archdeacons, who on this account were dignified with the title of the vicars, the curators, the privy counsellors, and the eyes of the bishop<sup>i</sup>; who by this time had got a distinction, that though the archpresbyter or dean was major ordine, yet the archdeacon was major dignitate<sup>k</sup>. “ Buckden, Nov. 3, 1699.

“ Reverend Sir,

“ I have received great satisfaction in perusing your book of Parochial Antiquities, and particularly in that part where you discourse of rural deans, which might be usefull officers in this diocese of Lincoln, especially in the present condition it is in, where none of the six archdeacons reside in their archdeaconries; by reason of which I want necessary information, and the people usefull admonition and correction, of which I have been sensible ever since I took this great charge upon me; therefore it has been much in my thoughts to restore the office of rural deans; which may supply the deficiency of the archdeacons, who (as you rightly affirm) have incroached upon their office. But I foresee many difficulties in it; in one of which I doubt not but you may help me out, which is a forme of commission. It is probable that you who are so very well versed in that subject may have seen some forms; if you have, I desire you would transmit one or more (if they vary) to me hither by the hand of my worthy friend Mr. Ostley, who knows how to send to me; in which you will much oblige your affectionate friend,

“ JA. LINCOLNE.”

“ To the Right Reverend Father James

“ Lord Bishop of Lincoln.

“ My Lord,

“ I esteem it a particular honour to receive a letter from your lordship on a subject so important to the government of the church. The time which Mr. Ostley prescribes for conveyance of an answer will not allow me to recollect many thoughts of the matter, nor to run over some confused notes, which I have lying by me.

“ I bless God for moving your lordship to restore such an antient and most usefull custom of the church, as that of rural deans; and I doe not question but your wise example, and the visible good effects of it, will soon dispose your R. R. brethren to the same laudable practise, than which nothing would more recover the fatal decaies of eccles. discipline, or more reinforce the true spirit of religion.

“ What your lordship is now pleased to enquire for, is a form of commission, of which I doubt I have took notice of none that can be any fit precedent. As farr as the rural deans, for the more immediate influence on their clergy, were appointed to be their confessors and penitentiaries, because they were presumed to have the character of men of sufficient lite-my present thoughts can reach, I beleive the rural deans were long appointed by the diocesan without any formal commission in scriptis, and invested in the office by delivery of the common seal, which at the death of each dean was returned to the bishop, or committed into custody by his order, to be given to a successor at the bishop's nomination. The truest light into this matter would arise from knowing the institution and observances of the antient court of Arches. For though it has not been observed, yet I am very confident the dean of Arches was at first no more than the urban dean in London, or the dean of Xtianity, who had under his peculiar district the churches exempt from the diocesan, and under the archbishop's immediate jurisdiction. And though his authority afterward encreased by references, appeals, &c. yet at the beginning he was no more than any other rural or urban dean, and was commonly rector of the church of St. Mary le Bow, or B. Mariæ de Arcubus. The oldest register of the archbishop's is that of Peckham, which, when I run over, I took notice of this early appointment of a dean—Frater Johannes eccl'ie Cant. minister humilis—dilecto filio magistro P. nuper decanatus eccl'ie beatæ Mariæ de Arcubus London. custodi salutem—dilectum filium mag'rum Rogerum de Rothewelle clericum nostrum in eccl'ia B. Mariæ de Arcubus prefecimus in decanum—vobis mandamus—ut sigillum decanatus eidem Rogero liberetis. Dat. apud Favresham ix. cal. Octob. consecrationis nostræ anno primo (i. e. 1279. 7. E. 1.) by which it seems plain, that upon decease of the dean another clergyman was made keeper of the seal, till the archbishop appointed a successor, who had seisin of his office by delivery of the said seal without any other delegation in writing.

“ And I beleive this nomination and transmitting the seal was the ordinary way of instituting rural deans: for had there been many deeds of commission, some at least would have remained in the rolls of your lordship's predecessors, H. Wells, or R. Grosthead, or of Walt. Grey of York; and yet in the worthy Dr. Hutton's most accurate collections from them, I doe not remember there is the least intimation of any such commissions given; nor I beleive is there any authentic form in any diocesan registers to the very time of the Reformation.

“ And yet probably there were short instruments of conveying this trust, though not remaining upon record. For it is certain the next successor to Peckham, archbishop Winchelse, made a dean of St. Mary Arches by these express letters patent.—Robertus Cant. ar'epus dilecto filio mag'ro Henrico de Nassington canonico eccl'ie Linc. salutem. Officium decanatus eccl'ie beatæ Mariæ de Arcubus London. cum suis juribus et pertinentiis universis, et exercitium jurisdictionis ejusdem—tibi commitimus per presentes—Dat. apud Otteford. 3. kal. Jun. 1295.

“ There be other continued forms in the archbishop's registers, and why there be

rature, and good report and favour with their brethren; and were therefore ordained to hear the confessions of rectors, vicars, and all other priests and ministers within the limits of their own deanery, few or none in the registers of other bishops is this: The dean of the Arches or Peculiars in London kept his customary rights, and obtained some new prerogatives, because there was no archdeacon to restrain him; whereas in other ordinary deaneries, the respective archdeacons had so cramped the authority of rural deans, (nay and in some dioceses had extorted from the weaker bishops the power of constituting and removing them at pleasure,) that I presume there was no great solemnity in appointing men to execute the declining office, commonly bestowed by verbal nomination, and tradition of the seal.

“And where there was express designation by writ or patent, I believe it was in the usual form of the ordinary’s delegating any other official or commissary: of which there is a good old form in the Chronica W. Thorn. inter x. Script. col. 1976, and several of the like nature in MS. records. So that if your lordship doe not think it sufficient to ordain rural deans by oral declaration at your times of visitation, (which I think was the method of good bishop Fell,) but to give them particular commissions to authorize them, (which indeed will look more solemn and authentic,) your lordship may use a short and general form; such as one of the foregoing; or such as is now commonly used in creating an official or surrogate; or such mutatis mutandis as now constitutes a dean of Arches. Or else your lordship may have a new form drawn up, which shall decently mention the good old custom, and the benefits of restoring it, and so delegate the person to exercise the office of dean of Xtianity within such a known deanery, without specifying the acts or bounds of his authority; because these must be limited or enlarged, as the prudence of governors shall direct, or indeed as the iniquity of times will bear. For at first, my lord, the archdeacons and officials, &c. will be jealous of them, and will create disturbance, if there be any seeming trespass upon their accustomed rights.

“And yet there be many parts of discipline that may be committed to the rural deans without any pretended invasion upon the archdeacons, or others, of which your lordship has wisdom to consider some of these.

“1. To have the mandates for induction into paroch. churches allwaie directed, as of old, to the rural dean.

“2. To have commissions de jure patronatus, or dilapidations, &c. executed by the rural dean and some assistants.

“3. To let the sentences of excommunication and absolution be denounced more especially by rural deans, &c.

“4. To call in some of the gravest and nearest rural deans to examine and assist at your ordinations.

“5. To require candidates for holy orders, if they have lately resided within your diocese, to bring a certificate from the rural dean, and his neighbouring brethren.

“6. To license no curate or schoolmaster within your diocese without a certificate from the rural dean, of the person, the place, the salary, the duties, &c.

and to enjoin them the sacrament of penance<sup>1</sup>. Which laudable practice grew into disuse by the negligence of the clergy, and the contempt of some of their rural deans. And then to recover this omission of some priests, the bishops were to appoint in every deanery two presbyters, to receive the confessions of those men in holy orders, who either despised their deans, or presumed to confess to the monks, and other religious, who had no authority of binding and loosing<sup>m</sup>. And because it seemed a farther inconvenience to the inferior clergy to confess to their deans, who had a judicial power over them, and might betray their private confessions in some public cause depending in their courts; therefore a legatine constitution of Otho, 20. Hen. III. does again provide, that there should

“ 8. To require your deans to give you occasional notice of all irregularities within their district; and at the end of each year, to send you the state of religion, as the suffragans were once most prudentially obliged to inform their metropolitan, and he the king.

“ And to omit many other things for which your lordship has sufficient authority, and which would not be invidious to the deans, nor injurious to any others.

“ Lastly, to provide that the meetings of the clergy, which are lately encouraged for the reformation of manners should be under the inspection and presidence of each rural dean. For, my lord, with all submission, if that popular practise goes on in Bedfordshire, &c. it will be soon necessary for your lordship to interpose your judgment and authority in advising and directing those conventions; or else that new project, however specious and laudable in itself, will, by the malice of enemies, or the indiscretion of friends, turn, I fear, to the prejudice of the church and the growth of faction.

“ But I have been impertinent, and gone beyond your lordship's commission, for which I humbly beg your lordship's pardon, as I crave your blessing; and resolve often to pray, that God Almighty would long preserve your life and health to govern well, and be a great and good example.

“ My lord,

“ WIL. KENNETT.”

“ Amersten, Novemb. 7. 1699.”

Upon this letter the bishop resolved to make the writer his chaplain, which he did soon after.

be prudent and faithful confessors appointed by the bishop in every deanery, to whom all parsons and inferior clerks might confess themselves, who were either ashamed or afraid to confess to their respective deans<sup>n</sup>. And hence John de Athon, with his wonted prejudice against the declining office, pretended that rural deans were no longer fit to be made confessors, because the same person could not well act in a double capacity in a penitential and judicial court. Another part of the office of rural deans was to denounce the sentence of excommunication upon all convicted persons within their district; and upon submission and penance to declare their absolution; and at the beginning of Lent to stand at the doors of the church, and there to receive and admit the penitents upon the recommendation and testimony of their parish priests<sup>o</sup>. They had an early right (which by custom they long retained) to visit all the several churches within their jurisdiction twice a year, (for all visitations were at first parochial,) and there to inquire of all personal and local abuses, correcting the smaller offences, and presenting the greater to the bishop at the next synod or visitation. But when archdeacons grew up to be vicars-general of the bishop and ordinaries in the diocese, then they assumed to themselves so much of the visitorian power, that the rural deans could no longer visit, but in subordination to these new masters; and as a mark of inferiority and subjection, they were allowed to go their circuit with two horses only, when the archdeacons might have five or seven<sup>p</sup>. This dependancy and limitation of power restrained the rural deans from the desire of being visitors; and therefore to ease themselves of the trouble, and their clergy of the expence, they let fall this jurisdiction by consent, and left this necessary care of all the churches solely to the archdeacons next under the bishop. But when their own power of visiting was intermitted, they were to summon their clergy to attend upon the visitation of the bishop at the time and place appointed, and to offer the excuses of those who were not able to appear<sup>q</sup>. They were to keep a register of all priests and other clerks, who did officiate within their jurisdiction, and were to take one penny and no more for inserting each name in the said register<sup>r</sup>. And to prevent litigious suits for the title of benefices, they were employed as officials of the bishop to take an account of the names and number of the parish churches, with the Christian name and surname of the rectors, the time of their collation to such benefices, by what title they held them, whether by institution, commendam, or custody; of what age they were, and in what orders, and whether they were beneficed in more than one church; of what name and quality the patrons were, and at what value the benefices were computed at the last taxation of them. Which inquest they were to cause to be distinctly wrote, and to give in a fair copy to the diocesan, who was to transmit it to the metropolitan in the next provincial council<sup>s</sup>. Upon the death of an incumbent without any formal sequestration, the rural dean was to take the vacant benefice* into his safe custody, and to provide for the necessary cure of souls; and to take care that the glebe land was seasonably tilled and sowed, to the best advantage of the successor, to whom they were to give up the intermediate profits, and be allowed their necessary charges; which upon dispute were to be moderated by the bishop or his official<sup>t</sup>. And upon the bishop's institution of a new clerk, the rural dean was to give him possession of the church; and, to prevent extortion, was to take no fee for this trouble<sup>u</sup>. But the canon lawyers soon deprived the country deans of this as well as of all other parts of jurisdiction. For the chancellors of the bishop, or the archdeacons, laid claim to the custody of vacant churches; and by forms of sequestration assigned them over to the œconomi, or lay guardians of the church; and the other office of induction, or giving possession to the new clerk, was by the bishop's letters upon institution committed to the archdeacon or his official. Again, the bishops and superior judges directed their citations of all accused persons to the rural dean, who was to take care to serve them, and then send a rescript or certificate to the respective judge<sup>x</sup>. And because it was sometimes their corrupt practice to return their certificatories before they had duly published their citations; whereby innocent persons became unjustly censured for contempt; it was therefore provided that no certificatory should be returned, till it had been published on some solemn day, during the office of mass, in the parish church, to which the cited person did usually resort: and therein mention should be made of the day and place of citation, with sufficient time allowed for appearance of the person. Which fair proceeding the deans should swear to observe every year in an episcopal synod<sup>y</sup>. And if any citation were directed to and published by any rector, vicar, or other priest, beside the rural dean or other official, it became void, and the party not obliged to any notice of it<sup>z</sup>. They were farther to attest and sign all letters procuratory, or the delegation of proctors: but to prevent frauds and abuses in this matter, they were to sign no such instrument but in open court; or if out of court, in presence of the person who so constituted his proctor; and this under penalty of three years' suspension and incapacity of obtaining any ecclesiastical office<sup>a</sup>. For their assistance, they retained bedels and apparitors, who were to summon the clergy to chapters and visitations; and were to execute citations, and all judicial writs in their own persons, and not by inferior deputies; and in their journies, they were to take no procuration or pecuniary composition for their entertainment, but to be content with whatever hospitality persons should freely receive them<sup>b</sup>. Beside the ordinary jurisdiction of rural deans, they were often upon an appeal to the archbishop delegated arbitrators and judges, as persons of the best figure and greatest abilities. So Edmund archbishop of Canterbury appointed the deans of Cambridge and Abingdon to determine or report the case of two appeals against Robert Grossthead bishop of Lincoln<sup>c</sup>. They were sometimes commissioned to receive the taxes of the clergy, subsidies, first-fruits, tenths. And particularly in the diocese of Canterbury, they were collectors of the Peter-pence, or Romescot, in their several deaneries<sup>d</sup>. And the Norwich taxation of all benefices in England by the pope's deputation of Walter de Suthfeld bishop of Norwich, anno 1254, was taken in every deanery by the rural dean, and two or three rectors or vicars, members of the chapter<sup>e</sup>.

Nor was it the least dignity of rural deans, that in every episcopal synod, (which was in effect a bishop's general visitation of his whole diocese,) they were the standing representatives of the rest of the clergy, and were there to deliver information of any abuses committed within their knowledge, and to propose and consult the best methods of reformation. For the ancient episcopal synods (which were commonly held once a year) were composed of the bishop as president, and the deans cathedral in the name of their collegiate body, and the archdeacons as deputies of that inferior order of deacons or servants in the church, and the urban and rural deans in the name of the parish ministers within their division, who were to have their charges allowed them according to the time of their attendance, by those whom they represented, as the practice obtained for the representatives of the people in the civil synods, common councils, or parliaments. By virtue of thus being members of the synod, the deans were anciently called testes synodales from informing and attesting the disorders of clergy and people. But in time they sunk in this authority, and left the trust to be committed to others. For we find these synodal witnesses were afterward a sort of impanelled jury, a priest and two or three laymen for every parish, who were upon oath to present all heretics, and other irregular persons<sup>f</sup>. And by a provincial constitution at Oxford, under Edmund archbishop of Canterbury, anno 1236. it was ordered, that there should be in every deanery two or three men having God before their eyes, who, at the command of the archbishop or his official, should inform of the public excesses of prelates and other clerks<sup>g</sup>. But afterwards their number was contracted into two for every diocese, chosen annually, who were to have no jurisdiction, but to inquire into all matters that wanted correction and reformation, and faithfully report them to the next provincial council or episcopal synod<sup>h</sup>; where inquiry was made according to certain articles drawn out of the canons, which were generally the same, according to which the juratores synodi, or testes synodales, were to give in their answers upon oath, which was therefore called juramentum synodale<sup>i</sup>. So that by these steps the rural deans were degraded from all this synodical honour: while that part of their duty which related to the information of scandals and offences was conferred upon the churchwardens of every parish, who became the grand inquest upon every visitation, and were upon oath to present all offenders or violators of the laws of the church. And their other dignity of being convened to sit members of provincial and episcopal synods, was transferred to two proctors or representatives of the parochial clergy in every diocese to assemble in convocation; where the cathedral deans and archdeacons still keep their ancient right; while the rural deans only have been forced to give place to an arbitrary election of two only for every diocese, instead of one by standing place for every deanery.

The rural deans had a public authentic seal of their office, which privilege was confirmed to them here in England by a legatine constitution of Otho, an. 1236. but with some restriction and diminution of that honour. For whereas archbishops, bishops, abbots, priors, collegiate deans, and archdeacons, (as having a perpetual office,) were allowed to have inscribed upon their seal the name of their dignity, office, or college, together with their own proper name in plain and legible characters; this was denied to rural deans and officials, who, enjoying but a temporary office, were to have inscribed on their seal only the name of their office, and not their personal or proper name; which seal, at the expiration of their office, they were to resign into the hands of that person (bishop or archdeacon) by whom they were commissioned<sup>k</sup>. But no doubt, for the rural deans to be thus accountable for the delivering up their seals at the arbitrary command of others, (at least of the archdeacons,) was an innovation brought in by the pope's legate, and seems to have been resented as an entrenchment on their ancient rights; as appears from the consequent practice of the rural deans, who, notwithstanding this constitution, did vindicate the property of retaining their seals, and refused to give them up at the will and command of their superiors; which contempt, though the glossator imputes to avarice and extortion, yet we may justly presume it owing only to the courage of asserting their ancient and independent right. With these seals they signed their certificatories made upon the return of citations, letters procuratory, inquisitions of the right of patronage, induction of clerks, and other acts and instruments, which passed through their office<sup>l</sup>. To avoid all corrupt and clandestine dealings, diligent care was to be taken of the custody of these seals: for example, the dean was to keep his seal in his own hands, or to commit it to the custody of some one single person, who should take an oath for the safe custody of it, and not affix it to any writing without the inspection and consent of the dean himself; to let the use of it be freely and easily obtained in the case of indigent persons, but strictly withheld from all false and fraudulent deeds: and finally, that no writing should be so sealed, but what had the date of the day, month, and year, and place, inserted in the beginning of it<sup>m</sup>. But when the rural deans lost the jurisdiction of their office, it was time to surrender the seals of it, which became appropriated to the archdeacons and their officials, who soon made a greater benefit of them. For whereas the deans were de jure communi, to put their seals gratis; the archdeacons and their officials could pretend that in “their modern times” a moderate exaction of fees was not prohibited<sup>n</sup>.

By the art and interest of the canonists, (supported by the bishops, who were very often of the same faculty,) and by the prescription and power of the archdeacons and their officials, it happened, that in the next age before the reformation of the church of England, the jurisdiction of rural deans in this island declined almost to nothing. For the exercise of their office, in the reign of Henry V. is by Lyndwood slightly represented, and observed to depend more on the custom of the country, than on any written laws<sup>o</sup>. The reason of which observation was this: among the legatine and all the later provincial constitutions, in the form of committing any authority to the rural deans, the archdeacons and their officials are joined with them, and commonly put before them; who, being equally empowered, engrossed the execution of the whole trust, and left the deans little else but their empty names; except in some few places, where by continued custom they preserved their ancient tenure.

In the mean time the rights of this office were kept more entire in the Gallican church. And in Germany, an. 1524, cardinal Campegius, in his model for the reforming of abuses, recommends the regular exercise of the authority of rural deans, and particularly advises the old way of meeting the bishops in an episcopal synod once a year<sup>p</sup>; which was accordingly established in the council of Trent. At which time of reformation, this office of rural deans seemed so necessary for restoring and asserting the discipline of the church, that it was now first brought into Italy by that exemplary prelate and reputed saint, Charles Borromæo, archbishop of Milan; who, throughout his province, deputed some of the parochial clergy, who were called vicarii foranei and præpositi ruris; and under this new title had the same authority, and in effect the same exercise of it, with the primitive rural deans. This clerical office was never before exercised in Italy, till introduced by this bishop of piety and a spirit of government above any in these later ages of the Roman church. But a false reason is assigned by a learned writer<sup>q</sup>, who presumes the Italian bishoprics were of so small an extent, as not to need a subdivision into deaneries. Whereas the true and only cause is before implied, that deaneries in the church were an imitation of tithings in the state, and therefore obtained only in the more northern parts of Europe, where the like secular custom had prevailed; but found no place in Italy or Spain, because the civil rites and laws (peculiar to those countries) differed from the septentrional ways of tithing. This indeed was a great argument for the dignity and necessity of rural deans, that they should now be established in a nation, where they were before unknown; by a bishop who was the greatest reformer of any in that communion; and at a time when it was more especially proper to project some method to support the declining church.

At our English reformation, it seems to be lamented, that passion and prejudice were in too much haste to restore all the rights and laudable practices of the ancient church. And therefore in the public acts of our reformers, no wonder if the case of rural deans was omitted, as well as many other useful points, that nearly concerned the order and government of the church. But those excellent persons who were commissioned to review the ecclesiastical laws of this realm, and to digest those which should be most serviceable to the reformed state of the church; they agreed on the office and full authority of * rural deans, and prescribed this good method, “ That “ every deanery should have a rural archpresbyter appointed by the “ bishop, or by the ordinary of the church, whose office should be “ annual; who, as a watchman, should continually supervise the “ presbyters, deacons, churchwardens, and sextons, that all of them “ discharge their respective duty. Who should inquire of all ido“ laters, heretics, simoniacs, bawds, whores, adulterers, fornicators, “ persons who had two wives or two husbands, sorcerers, witches, “ calumniators, blasphemers, Sodomites, drunkards, forgers, and “ perjured witnesses in testamentary causes, and all violators of the “ ecclesiastic laws, and the injunctions of the bishop. And should “ have authority to cite before them and to examine all persons “ suspected of such crimes; and then within ten days should return

 “ in writing to the bishop or ordinary of the place the whole matter “ of the accusation, whether by public fame, or attested by the de“ position of witnesses, or justly suspected. And if any person re“ fuse to come to him when duly cited by the apparitor, he shall be “ censured as contumacious, &c. And within every six months the “ said rural dean should inform the bishop or ordinary of the place, “ how many sermons had been preached in his deanery within that “ space of time<sup>r</sup>.” If this wholesome order had passed into practice, it had done good service to the church. But all that model for reformation of the ecclesiastical laws, when well and usefully projected, fell for want of confirmation by the legislative power. Yet, though it was not formally ratified, all those parts of it have no less the force of law, which in former times were such “ecclesiastical canons, constitutions, and ordinances, as were not contrariant or repugnant to the laws, statutes, or customs of the realm, nor to the damage or hurt of the king’s prerogative royal.” Of which inoffensive nature was this jurisdiction of rural deans, and therefore ought to have continued* in full force and virtue. But while the state was tender of countenancing too much power in the church; while the clergy lay under the servile awe of incurring a premunire by asserting their ecclesiastical rights; and while the humour of the age run more into reforming of doctrines, than restoring of discipline; these rural officers were in some deaneries extinct, and in others had a name and shadow only left. Nor do we find any express care taken for the support of this office, but only in the provincial synod or convocation held at London, April 3, anno 1571, by whom it was ordained, that “the archdeacon when he has finished his visitation, shall signify to the bishop what clergymen he has found in every deanery so well endued with learning and judgment as to be worthy to instruct the people in sermons, and to rule and preside over others. Out of these the bishop may choose such as he will have to be rural deans.” But this indeed seems rather a permission, than a positive command, for the continuance of that office. However, it proves that rural deans were thought fit ministers to assist in dispensing the laws and discipline of our reformed church; and it does imply, that when they were deputed by the bishop, they may exert all that power which by canon and custom resided in the said office before the reformation. The little remains of this dignity and jurisdiction depend now on the custom of places, and the pleasure of diocesan. In some parts of this kingdom, the rural deans have nothing left but the burden of entertaining the rectors and vicars of that deanery at a solemn feast; and that perhaps is the only remaining footstep of the ancient rural chapters corrupted into sociable meetings, to the great expence of the dean, and the no great honour of the clergy.

In this deanery of Burcester, I think the last rural dean (nominated by an excellent judge of men and merits, the right reverend Dr. John Fell, bishop of Oxon.) was Mr. Samuel Blackwell, B. D. then vicar of that church; who (as an exemplary supervisor of the clergy, and a diligent assertor of the rights of the church) had been duly qualified for that office, if it had continued in all the dignity and authority of its primitive institution.

June the second. Which advancement was reported to be the reward of his advising the murder of the duke of Gloucester<sup>f</sup>.

The vicarage of Merton, vacant by the death of Richard Witteney, was conferred by the prior of St. Frideswide, in Oxford, (who, by compact with the abbey of Egnesham, obtained that turn of presentation,) upon Lodowic Newton, who was admitted at Nettleham on the thirteenth of August<sup>g</sup>.

In the conventual church of the priory of St. Frideswide, in Oxford, this agreement was made between Edmund Rede, esquire, of Borstall, lord of the village of Standelf, and Henry Terfote, vicar of the church of Pyrton, com. Oxon. That whereas the said vicar was bound to find a capellane to officiate three days in a week, viz. Sunday, Wednesday, and Friday, in the chapel of Standelf, depending on the mother-church of Pyrton, and the said village was now left desolate of inhabitants; the said Edmund Rede did consent, that for the greater ease of the vicar, he should only officiate by himself or a curate one day in a week; but whenever the village should be again inhabited, then the vicar should be reobliged to his former duty. *Acta sunt hæc omnia, &c. præsentibus tunc ibidem discretis viris magistris Richardo Anghton archidiacono. Upon which he was committed to the Tower: but by his immoderate favour with the queen, he was soon released: while by these troubles he was made so sensible of his approaching fall, that on January 17, he made his last will and testament, bequeathing his body to be buried in the charter house at Hull, appointing an image for himself, and another for his wife, to be made in stone; and desiring, that the masses, which he had founded there for himself and her, might be daily sung over his grave<sup>n</sup>. AN. MCCCCXLIX. 27, 28. Henry VI.

The king's releasing William duke of Suffolk from his imprisonment in the Tower, and restoring him to his royal favour, had so much incensed the people, that they threatened a general insurrection. And in the parliament adjourned to Leicester, the commons fell so severely upon the duke, that, to avert the storm, the king thought fit to banish him the realm, but with secret design to recall him, as soon as better times would dispense with it. Upon which, at the beginning of May, the unhappy duke put to sea at Ipswich, in com. Suff. with purpose to sail into France; but the vessel was boarded by the captain of a ship of war belonging to the duke of Exeter, (then constable of the Tower of London,) called The Nicholas of the Tower, and brought into Dover road, where this miserable great man (like Pompey of old) had his head cut off on the side of the cock-boat, May 21, 1449. After which his body and head, being found by one of his own captains, were conveyed to the collegiate church of Wingfield, com. Suff. and there buried†.

By inquisition after his death, the jury found him to have died possessed in this county, jointly with Alice his wife, of twelve messuages, fourteen virgates of land, and twenty acres of meadow, with their appertenances in Thorp, Cudlington, and Sulthorne, (now Throp, Kidlington, and Souldern,) and the moiety of one hundred acres of wood, with appertenances, in Ewelme, and the advowson of the church of Ewelme, and the advowson of the eleemosynary house or hospital for the maintenance of two capellanes and thirteen poor men in Ewelme<sup>s</sup>. All which, with many other large possessions, continued to Alice his widow in her own right of inheritance, who lived to a good old age at her mansion-house in Ewelme, and died there May 20, 1475, 15. Edw. IV. and was buried on the ninth of June following, in the parish church of Ewelme, on the south side of the high altar, under a rich tomb of alabaster, with her image thereon, in the habit of a vowess crowned, and this epitaph: Orate pro anima serenissimæ principissæ Aliciæ ducissæ Suffolciæ hujus ecclesie fundatoris, et primæ fundatricis hujus elemosinariæ, quæ obiit xx. die mensis Maii, anno MCCCCLXXV. She had issue by her last husband the duke, one son and heir John, who, at his father's death, was seven years of age, who married Elizabeth, sister to king Edward IV. and for this honourable alliance was, in 3. Edw. IV. by letters patent, dated the 23d of March, restored to the title of duke of Suffolk, with forty pounds yearly out of the issues of the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk to himself and the heirs male of his body<sup>t</sup>.

The bishop of Lincoln confirmed the agreement made between the prior and convent of St. Frideswide, appropriators of the parish church of Oakle and the chapel of Borstall, on the one part, and Edmund Rede, esquire, lord of the manor of Borstall, on the other, by which it was covenanted, that a fit capellane to serve in the said chapel of Borstall should be deputed by the said Edmund and his heirs, and nominated to the said prior, and by him admitted; who for his portion or salary should receive all tithes, oblations, mortuaries, and emoluments whatever, excepting the tithe of corn and hay from the three common fields of Borstall, Frithfeld, Cowhouse-

By virtue of this compact and confirmation of it, on June the sixth, anno 1449, Edmund Rede, esquire, nominated John Kynton capellane to Robert prior of St. Frideswide, who, on the day following, admitted him to the cure of the said chapel.

Richard lord Strange of Knokyn, lord of the manor of Burcester, com. Oxon. having had summons to parliament as a baron from 5. Henry IV. to 27. Henry VI. departed this life on the ninth day of August, leaving John his son and heir five years of age, by his second wife Elizabeth, the eldest daughter of Reginald lord Cobham, of Sterborough, surviving. advowsons and appropriations he gave to Exeter college, in Oxford ; in which place he had his education, and to which he was a very grateful benefactor. Anno 1559, May the 5th, Philip Wendover, clerk, was instituted in the vicarage of Merton, (void by the death of Mr. John Jones,) to which he was presented by Walter Wright, doctor of law, guardian of the spiritualities in the diocese of Oxon. Several successive vicars were presented to the said church of Merton, till in late times, the vicarage being scarce worthy acceptance, the Fellows of Exeter college have by annual turns supplied the said church, without any institution or residence*, contrary to the rights of the church, the good of the parish, and the honour of religion.

“ Reverend Sir,

“ I am sorry to hear that I have given offence to your Society by a passage in my late book (p. 671). I think it justice and good manners to assure you that what I have there said was purely out of zeal to the care of souls and honour of the church, which I thought not so well consulted, by letting fall the good old custom of an instituted and residing vicar in the church of Merton, and leaving the people to complain of an uncertain supply. As to your college, or any person in it, I designed no manner of reflexion ; for those Fellows, with whom I have any acquaintance, are persons whom I well esteem ; and those, to whom I am a stranger, for ought I know, deserve nothing but a kind respect from me. What I have said is this—“ Several successive vicars “ were presented to the said church of Mer- “ ton, till in late times, the vicarage being “ scarce worthy acceptance, the Fellows of “ Exeter college have by annual turns sup“ plied the said church, without any institu- “ tion or residence.” This I presume is true and inoffensive. All that can displease is what I further add—“ contrary to the “ rights of the church, the good of the pa- “ rish, and the honour of religion.” I confess I did think that the unhappy dissolution of that vicarage, and the giving no person a proper title to the care of those souls, need not be expressed in much softer words. But I do not charge this as any abuse committed by the present rector and Fellows, nor could I mean it so. I rather wish and hope it may be the particular honour of your present body to convert some part of the good allowance you now make for an annual stipend into a settled augmentation for a constant vicar, and thereby encourage the lord of the manor and the parishioners to make some further contribution, which indeed would be a good and honourable work. In the mean time as to my opinion, I beg you would excuse it ; but as to any matter of fact, that I have falsely represented, I shall thank you for better in-

Sir Robert Hungerford, lord Molins, lord of the manors of Ludgershale, Adyngton, Stoke-Pogeys, &c. com. Bucks. Henley upon Thames, Broughton, Bampton-Aston, Bampton-Stanlake, and Swareford, with the moiety of the manor of Stoke-Moyles, com. Oxon. was now kept prisoner in France, where he had been taken, while he endeavoured the relief of Chastillon, besieged by the French in 31. Hen. VI. Whereupon Alianore countess of Arundel, lady Matravers and Hungerford, (sometime wife of Sir Walter Hungerford, knight, his grandfather,) by her testament, bearing date July 20, 1455, gave unto him all her wool, then being in her manor of Haylesbury, valued at one hundred marks, towards the payment of his ransom, upon condition that he came alive out of prison. By which help and other supplies he paid above twelve thousand marks for his liberty, which he obtained in 38. Henry VI. after seven years and four months confinement. After which, being faithful to the Lancastrian interest, he was attainted in parliament 1. Edw. IV. and in 3. Edw. IV. was taken prisoner in the battle of Hexam, and conveyed to Newcastle, and there beheaded; his corpse was carried to Salisbury, and there interred in the north isle of the cathedral church. He left Alianore his wife surviving, who was afterwards married to Sir Oliver Manningham, knight, and lies buried at Stoke-Pogeys, with this epitaph.

The convent of Augustin friars, built near the present site of Wadham college, in Oxford, had been founded by the liberality and interest of Sir John Handlo of Borstall, who had bequeathed his body to be buried in that place, and was reputed their founder. Upon which title Edmund Rede, esquire, the present lord of Borstall, proving his lineal descent from the said Sir John Handlo, was accepted as their founder and patron, and so recognized by John Stokton, prior, and the brethren of that convent, with the consent of John Capgrave, provincial of their order, in this memorable form.

AN. MCCCCLIX. 37, 38. Henry VI.

The king, by letters patent granted to George archbishop of York, in consideration of his many faithful services, the manors of Wodestoke, Hangeburgh, Wotton, and Stonesfeld, with their several members and hamlets, as also the hundred of Wotton, and the chattels of all felons, fugitives, condemned and outlawed persons, within the said liberties, to hold during his life<sup>f</sup>.

John Pashele, esquire, passed a fine in the court of King's Bench, to enable him to convey the third part of the manor of Cheping-Norton, com. Oxon. to John Glyn, gentleman<sup>g</sup>.

Edmund Rede, esquire, of Borstall, granted to William Craunford and Thomas Williams his manor of Hedingdon, with the bailiwick of the forests of Shottore and Stowode, com. Oxon. one messuage,

A trial at law was now depending between William Gaynesford and John Catesby, plaintiffs, and Edmund Rede, esquire, defendant, for the manors of Chakynden, Stoke-Marmyon, Gatehampton, and Standelf, com. Oxon. which being recovered by the plaintiffs, were by them for due consideration granted and confirmed to the said Edmund Rede and Catherine his wife, by deed, dated July 12, 1. Edw. IV. Hiis testibus; Roberto Harecourt milite, Thoma Stonore, Richardo Harecourt, Richardo Quatremayne, Johanne Parentyn, &c.<sup>i</sup>

The said Edmund Rede, of Borstall, under the title of Edmund Rede, knight, made his last will and testament on April 7, 1487, 2. Henry VII. wherein he bequeathed his body to be buried within the parish church of Borstall, in the chapel of Holy Trinity, situate on the south side of the said church, leaving Catherine his wife and Robert Arderne his executors; appointing several legacies to William Rede, his heir apparent; to John, Sebastian, and Thomas, his younger sons; to Catherine Rede and Joan Wykeham, his daughters; and provided for three priests in Oxford to sing mass for the souls of Dame Catherine and Agnes his two wives. Which will was proved on the last day of January next following<sup>k</sup>. His said relict, under the title of dame Catherine Rede, widow, made her will on the eighth of June, 1489, 13. Hen. VII. and after bequeathing her body to be buried in the holy church, she gave to the church of Hampton-Poyle, in com. Oxon. vi<sup>s</sup>. viii<sup>d</sup>. to George Gaynsford, esquire, her son, her grete salt; to Elizabeth, his wife, a crymson; to William Gaynsford, esquire, her son, a bason and ewer of sylver; to Anne, wife of the said William, a girdle of tynshew harnesssed; and to Elizabeth, her daughter, the wife of Richard Hall, gent. a ring of gold with a saphir. Which will was proved on the 18th of Septemb. next following<sup>1</sup>.

The said William, son and heir of Edmund Rede and Agnes his wife, left son and heir Leonard Rede, esquire, who by Anne his wife had Catherine, sole daughter and heir, married to Thomas Dynham, gent. on whom that large estate of her inheritance was settled by fine in 1. Edw. VI. who dying on February 16, 1562, 4. Eliz. left son and heir John Dynham, esquire, who deceased May the 29th, 1602, 44. Eliz. and by Catherine his wife left son and heir John Dynham, under age, then married to Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Dormer; which Sir John Dynham, knight, died on the 16th of February 1634, 10. Car. I. and by dame Penelope, his second wife, daughter of Sir Richard Wenman, (a lady of great fidelity and courage,) he left three daughters and coheirs, Mary, Alice, and Margaret; of which Mary, the eldest, was then the wife of Laurence Banistre, esquire, son and heir apparent of Sir Robert Banistre, knight, by whom she had Margaret, sole daughter and heir, married to William Lewis, esquire, of the Van, in com. Glamorgan. 24. Car. I. an. 1648, who, by the said Margaret, had issue Edward, who died unmarried in September, 1672, and two daughters, of which Mary, the eldest, was first married to William Jephson, esquire, who died on Trinity Sunday, anno 1691. After which she took to her second husband the hon. Sir John Aubrey, baronet, of Llantrithid, in com. Glamorgan. son of Sir John Aubrey, knight and baronet, son of Sir Thomas Aubrey, knight, son of William Aubrey, doctor of law, a person of great character and esteem in the reign of queen Elizabeth. The first lady of the said Sir John Aubrey, baronet, married March the first 1678, was Margaret, daughter of Sir John Lowther, of Lowther-Hall, in com. Westmor. by whom he has issue one son and heir apparent, John Aubrey, esquire, born June 20, 1680, a young gentleman of hopeful parts and virtues; upon whom the manor of Borstall is settled by fine; an estate, which it will be much the greater honour to enjoy, because, without alienation or forfeiture, it has passed down from the Conquest to the present time by several heirs female, from the family of Nigel, to that of Aubrey, in which may it long continue.

AN. MCCCCCLX. 38, 39. Henry VI.

An inquisition was taken in these parts, wherein the jury report that Humphrey, late duke of Buckingham, (who was slain on the king's part in the battle of Northampton, and buried at the convent of Gray Friars, in that town,) died on the 27th of July, 38. Hen. VI. possessed of the manors of Buckingham, Little-Brickhill, Newenton-Blossonville, Clyfton, Polycote, Little-Esindon, Agmundesham, and of one knight's fee in Ludgareshall, half a knight's fee in Chilton, one knight's fee in Ocle, &c. in com. Buck. of one knight's fee in Hampton-Gay and Heyford, and one knight's fee in Heth; as also of the manor of Stratton-Andley, with its appertenances, in com. Oxon. of which manor he had lately enfeofled Humphrey, late duke of Gloucester, Philip Morgan, late bishop of Ely, John Stafford, bishop of Bath and Wells, Richard Beauchamp, late earl of Warwick, William Pole, late earl of Suffolk, Henry viscount Bouchier, Sir Walter Hungerford, Sir William Babington, Thomas Rolfe, and Hugh Erdeswike, esquires; and that the said manor was held from the king, but by what service they knew not; and that Henry, son of Humphrey, his eldest son, (who was slain in the battle of St. Alban's, 22d May, 33. Henry VI.) was his heir, of the age of four years and upwards<sup>m</sup>.

This Humphrey earl of Stafford (who had been advanced to the title of duke of Buckingham, by patent dated Sept. 14, 23. Hen. VI.) had held, in joint possession with John Felmersham, the manor of Bigenhull, in Burcestre, com. Oxon. and in 17. Hen. VI. obtained the king's letters patent to confirm the weekly Monday market, and the yearly St. James's fair, which had been granted by king Richard I. in the first year of his reign, to Sir John de Worth, knight, lord of the said manor of Bigenhull. Which confirmation runs in this form.

Nos autem chartam predictam et omnia et singula in eadem contenta rata habentes et grata, ea pro nobis et heredibus nostris quantum in nobis est acceptamus approbamus et carissimo consanguineo nostro Humphrido comiti Staffordie et Johanni Felmersham nunc tenentibus manerii predicti (i. e. Bigenhull) confirmamus: prout charta predicta rationabiliter testatur. In cujus &c. Teste rege apud Westminster. XIII. die Julii.

This market at Bigenhull, in Burcester Kings-End, was soon discontinued, by reason of a new Friday market granted to be held in Burcester-Bury-End, from thence called Market-End, in which the picage, stallage, boothage, tollage, assize of bread and beer, and all other emoluments arising from the said market, were granted during life to the king's servant Robert Brooke, for the yearly rent of six shillings and eightpence, by these letters patent dated in 19. Hen. VI.

and heir, George Stavely, of Bigenhull, did, in 17. Hen. VIII. an. 1525, give to University College, in Oxford, the sum of fifty pounds on these terms agreed on between him and the said Society: That with that money land should be purchased to the yearly revenue of fifty shillings, of which rent 2s. 8d. should be yearly paid to one of the Fellows in sacred orders, to say mass as oft as he pleased at the south altar of the chapel, for the souls of the said George Stavely, Isabel his wife, John Stavely, and other their friends; of the remainder, 3s. 4d. should be allowed upon the anniversary of his death to the Master and Fellows for the increase of their commons: twopence to the manciple, twopence to the head cook, and fourpence to the bible-clerk: the overplus to be on the same day divided between the Master and Fellows<sup>p</sup>.

Robert Babington, esquire, of Nether-Cudington, com. Oxon. died about this time, and left the manors of Over-Cudington, Asterley, and Hook, alias Noke, com. Oxon. to his son and heir William Babington, esquire, who married Eleanor, the daughter of Richard Ellipsworth; and in 6. Edw. IV. conveyed and granted all the said premises to his uncle Thomas Babington<sup>q</sup>.

On the death of Edmund earl of Cornwall, when the manor of Ambrosden was escheated to the king, an extent of it was taken upon inquisition, which having been omitted in the proper place, deserves to be here inserted.

THE
NEAR BURCESTER, IN OXFORDSHIRE;

WITH SUCH OTHER OCCURRENTS AS ARE CONTIGUOUS AND APPENDANT TO THE SAME.

AD FRANCISCUM CRANE EQUITEM AURATUM AULICUM.

WROTE IN THE YEAR 1622.

ALLCHESTER, All Caer, or Caer Allecte, was a walled town that stood in the north-east part of Oxfordshire, part of that country, which, before the division of shires, was called Dobuna Dofn, because of the deepness and fatness thereof, built, as may be collected by many probabilities, besides the first syllable of his name, by Caius Allectus, one of the thirty tyrants, who, by slaying his dear friend and emperor Carausius, not by secret practices, but in open battle, at a place some two miles distant from the walls of Allchester, called after his name, and the field fought there, Carausfield, now Caversfield, the land of Thomas Moyle, esq. a wise and a religious gentleman, lately deceased, and some miles distant from the town that Birims, bishop of Caer Dor, now Dorchester, upon the banks of Thames, in Oxfordshire, built about six hundred and thirty years after Christ, calling it after his name Birincester, and contractly Birster. The very entrenched sence of Caraus's camp, where it lay, still appears in the plain upon Bayards-green, some mile or better distant from the now church of Caversfield. Allectus also, to guard his city and sconce without, and to break the incursions of horses, reared up a bank of earth of some two or three miles in length, on the south-west part of his city, that the enemy might not draw back wings upon him; a good part whereof may still be seen in Wendlebury parish.

But one thing is worth the observation here, that as the Grecians notified the place of their victories with Νικη, as Nicomedia, Nicopolis, Thessalonica, a sea victory; and the ancient Britains, by adding of the word mais; as masgnit, the bloody field in the low countries, Maisseveth, now Radnorshire, of Sæva his field; Malmaisbury, which is compounded of these three words, moel, mais, burge; moel, the bare hills above it; mais, the battle there fought between the Britains and the Saxons, when Ceaulyon, the king of the West-Saxons was there discomfited; and bury, or burge, put to it afterwards, as the Saxons language increased: it was also formerly called (as appeareth by old records) Meldunum, of moel, the round hill, and dun, the city; moel being more ancient than any language, and dun being the first language, giveth me better warrant for the etymology thereof, than to fetch it of Maildulphus, an obscure hermit that lived long after, (though Beda be of that opinion;) whose name, as it holdeth little correspondency with Malmesbury, so the situation of the place, which in their denominations the ancient Britains most regarded, hath none at all. But I am none of the sect called nominals; therefore I leave it free for every man's censure; only observe, that wheresoever they won or lost the field, they added to that place the word mais, or the English word field.

Neither are the high Malvern, or Maberne hills, near the fair city of Worcester, of the Latins called Wigornia, but of the Britains Caer-Bran, and of the learned Ptolomy, called more understandingly, after the name of famous Brenus, the first builder thereof, Branona; for the Britains called him Bran, and not Bren; though in foreign parts he were called sometimes Bran, and sometimes Bren;

and cities built after his name do answer both pronunciations, as Brandeburg and Brenona, now, by much corruption, Veronia. I say Malvern hills be not to be let pass in silence, because they partake of Malmsbury in the first part of their names, and are alike partakers with it in the corruption and depravation of their names. The ancient name of them huge hills being Malvern, of moel, the bare hills, and wern, the alders growing in and about them in marshes there: in which sense Ywerna or Jernia, Ireland, is derived of understanding writers. And so likewise Arverin, people of France dwelling by the river Loyr, and descended of the Trojans, took their names of the British word ar-wern; that is, their dwelling above the alders. And the French now calling them Auvergne, casting away the first r for the smoothness of the tongue, still retain the true signification of their names in that word. In authentic records the hills are called Malvern, and not Mabern, mal for moel being a common mistaking, as well to Malmsbury as also to Malvern, by reason of the bare knolls; but mais, proper to Malmsbury, and wern, the alders, to Malvern hills; and so is the one and the other haled out of darkness to his true light, and restored to his right name again. But not to follow occurrents, how pleasant soever, or how fair soever they offer themselves to our view; but to return to Caversfield, where the word field, as well in this place as wheresoever you shall find it joined to the name of any place, as Engfield, Englefield, Maxfield, Battlefield, Bosworthfield, Flodonfield, Caversfield, Woodnesfield, Newportfield, it importeth some battle there fought, and some field won or lost there; the English addition field, equivaling the Greek νίκη, and the British mais, for a fought field; Carausfield telling us that it was Caraus his field, whom Allectus slew after he had reigned seven years, that himself might gain the title of emperor, which he obtained; but retained it not above two years.

In the year of Grace 1620, an earthen pot full of brass money bearing the stamp, name, and picture, some of Carausius, some of Allectus, was found under the root of a tree in Steeple-Claydon parish, by the great pond there, in the wood of the worthy knight Sir

Thomas Chaloner, chamberlain to the hopeful beam of Great Britain prince Henry, while he lived, which may serve instead of many authors to give credit to my history; for it seemeth to be hid there what time they went to the field hard by; and the hidiers being put either to flight or killed, it so continued, till it was found by Sir Thomas his woodward William Richardson.

Sir Thomas Chaloner taking me the coin to be informed of the inscription what it meant; I found that the one coin had this inscription on the right side, Imp. Carausius P. F. Aug. which I interpret thus, Imperator Carausius pius felix Augustus. And the other coin had, Imp. C. Allectus P. F. Aug. which I likewise thus interpret, Imp. Cuius Allectus pius felix Augustus: both emperors' pictures being on the right side coronated laureate; and on the other side of the coin both coins had the picture of Pallas, with an olive leaf in her right hand, reaching it out in token of peace offered; and a spear in her left hand, that if peace were refused, then should war ensue, and lies in hieroglyphical manner on the same side of the coin, importing each emperor's names in his own coin. Some of both their monies I kept until this present year 1622; and in the month of October I took it to Mr. Hood, rector of Lincoln college, in Oxford, to confer it with the antiquity of the University library.

The emperor Carausius, that by his field fought and lost there gave name to Carausfield, which now, by the transposition of some letters, is called Caversfield, was a man full of humanity, and well beloved of the Britains, as approved authors report; by whose help he achieved great feats of arms at home and abroad; and in the joint reign of Dioclesian and Maximian the emperors, (for they reigned both together,) was appointed admiral of the British seas, to repress the incursions of pirates, who annoyed the borders of Britain, France, the Netherlands, and Spain; whereof Carausius, intending his own ends and purposes, made great booties, enriching himself much thereby, without either restitution unto the right owners, or account made to the emperors for the same; which caused Maximianus Herculeius, whom Dioclesian had taken to be his associate and colleague in the administration of the empire, to come down to Gallia to surprise the principal men of Carausius his faction there, giving further direction to have Carausius himself made away by some stratagem or other; which stirred Carausius to stand upon his guard, and to bend his force, not to be master of the seas alone, but also to compass the whole government of all Britain, which he attained soon after, but held it not long, as is said; for Allectus, his seeming friend, inwardly and greedily affected that title, as well as he, and thought the time overlong till he might effect his purpose; which he soon after effected, by depriving Carausius of his life, crown, and empire, at the place aforesaid. About this time, to withstand rebellions in divers parts of the Roman empire, Dioclesian and Maximian elected for their Cæsars to fight their battles, Galerius Maximus, who was sent to the east, and Constantius Chlorus, so called, because, as he was a valiant warrior, so was he a togated senator, and had his train carried after him, which train the Britains called chloren: this Constantius coming to Britain to chase Carausius, found him to be killed by Allectus, his seeming friend, before his coming; and Allectus usurping the title of emperor, as may appear by his brass money still extant; who, for his better defence, as well against Carausius, whilst he lived, as also against Constantius, then coming in, had built and fortified the walled town of Allchester, in the heart of the land, that if he were put to the worst at the sea-side, yet he might have where to reinforce himself in the main land; and having advertisement of Constantius his coming near at hand by sea, hastened to the south seas about the Isle of Wight to intercept his landing, leaving the first syllable of his name in Allsford, Allinton, Allingham, for his way and passage, as well as in Allchester, for his residence. But Constantius having gained the benefit of a misty foggy time, landed his men, put them in good order, and like a valiant resolute captain burnt up his ships, that neither the enemy might be strengthened by his vessels, nor his vassals have any hope to save themselves by flight; and, or ever that Allectus had any certain intelligence where he was, gave Allectus (that ambitious bloody tyrant) a set battle by the sea-side, and put him to a shameful flight, whom Asclepiodatus slew shortly after; but where, except it were at a plain called Allsfield, (now Ellsfield,) between Allchester and the city of Oxford, which cometh nearest his name, and importeth a field fought, I cannot nor will not determine.

By this time Constantius had got good footing in Britain, and a good governor he was, and was come forwards upon the downs as far as New Sarum; where, upon the side of the downs, he built a fortification, the ramparts whereof still appear very apparently, and is called Chloren, after the name that the Britains gave him, by reason of his long train carried up after him; it standeth in Wiltshire, upon the north corner of Chlorendon park, now called Clarindon, which taketh his name thereof; a park of that largeness and bigness, that it exceedeth any park in the kingdom; it hath a church covered over with ivy, in the north part thereof next Chloren, which thereupon is now called Ivy Church; and, if we give credit to a late poet, the park had twenty groves in it, each of them of a mile compass; and without any sophistication, it had a house of the king's within, but long since dilapidated: it doth now belong to the right honourable William earl of Pembroke, lord chamberlain to his Majesty, whose heart is as large and liberal as the park is wide; who being at this time chancellor of the University of Oxford, obtained of his Majesty a prebend in Christ Church for the doctor of the chair, the king's professor in divinity, for ever, and also gave two halls, and procured two portions of tithes for the other two professors of law and physic.

This Constantius embraced the Christian faith, and married Helena, daughter to king Coyl, that built Colchester, by whom he had Constantine the Great, that removed the empire to the east, built Constantinople, promoted the Christian faith, relieved the distressed estate of the Christians, called divers general councils, and established the peace of the church about 320 years after Christ's blessed incarnation, and was the only renowned emperor of the world.

But to return to Allchester, which was situated in the north-east part of Oxfordshire, within one mile of Caer Birin, now called Bircester, a neat market town, well frequented, and full of honest rich tradesmen; built at first by Birinus, bishop of Caer Dor, which Beda called Dorcinia, and Leland Hydropolis, now called Dorchester, in Oxfordshire, taking his name of the waters it standeth upon, sometimes walled about and castled, but all now ruined and gone, a round hill there still appearing, where the superstitious ensuing ages built Birinus a shrine, teaching them that had any cattle amiss to creep to that shrine for help: such blindness possessed them then, that they laid the commandments of God aside to follow their own traditions; and yet so blind are their posterity, that they praise their doings.

Bircester sometimes a walled town, though no steps thereof appear now; which Birinus built to withstand the incursions of the Danes, and other Pagans. And this one thing is worth the observing, that wheresoever the Britains built a walled town, they gave it the name, first or last, of the word caer, which is derived of the Hebrew kir, and signifieth, in the one and the other language, a wall; and wheresoever the English coming in found the word caer in the name of any town, they translated it by the word chester, or cester, which was the same to them as caer to the old Britains. As that city upon the Irish sea-side which the Britains called (for the eminency thereof) Caer, and no more, until the Romans planted legions there, and then it began to be called Caer Legion, which name it still retaineth with them; the English called it Chester upon the like eminency; and since, because it standeth upon the west part of the kingdom, it came to be called Westchester. So Caer Gloyn, which took his name either of Claudius the emperor, (which is the general opinion,) or of the beauty and brightness thereof, which the Britains call Gloyn, which I think rather they translated it Gloucester. Caer Branon, built by the noble and renowned captain Brenus after his name; they, upon some other occasion of the withes and wirges there growing in the Seavern fast by, translated it Worcester, or Wircester, Caer Birin Bircester, Caer Allecte Allchester, Caer of Egypt, the great and only famous town of traffic in all the world, formerly called Memphis, and Caera in Greek, took their names by reason of the walls, though it appears not to us who first so named them: many of the British local names have much community with the Greek names, which is supposed to be by Cayneus, and his company, that came in with Brutus, and after his arrival possessed Cornwall, and gave name unto it, which it still retaineth, as received histories have delivered unto us. Caer and Garth are proper to many eastern languages, as well as to the British; for example, to the Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, Arabic, Armenian, Egyptian tongues, &c.

Bircester aforenamed, built by bishop Birinus some six hundred and forty years after our Saviour Christ's blessed incarnation, is at this day a very good market for all manner of cattle, and well supplied with all kind of trades, but no corporation; and it is the richer thereby, for that such as be in debt and danger need not shun it; neither are any polling officers to draw fees and seconcing money to enrich themselves, and to impoverish others; which maketh a market town flourish so much the more. Yet in Bister I can observe nothing memorable, but a fair church for the setting forth God's glory, and the ruins of an old abbey, now the house of Sir Richard Blunt, or Sir Charles his son, descended from the honourable house of the barons Mountjoy and the earl of Devonshire, the subduer of the rebel Tyrone and his complices, in Ireland, in the latter part of queen Elizabeth, and in the beginning of king James his most happy reign over Great Britain: the land of the said Blunts butteth upon Allchester, on the east; Amersdon, the late seat of the Dentons, but now of Sir Thomas Mildmay's son, of Chelmsford in Essex, and his heirs, beholding it also afar off, between the lands of the Blunts and Merton, the neat seat late of the d'Oilys, descended of a noble house in Normandy, some of which lineage built the castle of Oxford, and abbey of Oseney, in Oxford, which abutteth upon Allchester on the south; and by the marriage of the widow of . . . d'Oily, esq. came first to Sir James Harrington, knight and baronet, whose son and heir, Sir Edward Harrington, married the eldest of the daughters and heirs of the said d'Oily; Sir William Dier another, upon whom it is to descend ; but now, by a third marriage of the said lady Harrington, the late widow of the said d'Oily, it is fallen to Sir Henry Pool, a provident prudent knight, descended of a noble name, and formerly matched with the noble line of Nevills, barons of Abergavenny, who at this present enjoyeth the same in the right of his wife.

On the west it hath Wenelbury, or Wendilbury, (in which parish it standeth,) and on the north Bicester and Chesterton, a small village that sprang out of the bowels of Allchester, keeping one part of the name of Allchester alive in it still, late the lands of the baron Norris of Ricot, in Oxfordshire, the last whereof was viscount Thame and earl of Berkshire, in whom also it died.

The place where Allchester stood is now a ploughed plat of ground, that still (nevertheless) retaineth the name of Allchester to this day, situate upon Akemanstreet-way under the foot of a woody hill, called by the name of Gravenhill, where the vulgar fain great treasures to be hid : neither is their conjecture altogether improbable, seeing it was usual, when they went to battle, to hide their treasure in the earth ; witness the many stone chests found in hillocks and heaps of stones in the mountains of Wales, and other places in our fathers' days ; and the manner was in those days to bury them richly ; and the word Gravenhill telleth us, it took his name of graves there made after the field.

It happened to Allchester much like to Allclind, by Boroughbrige, in Yorkshire, which was a famous city, and is now a plain plat of ground eared and sowed ; and but for the two piles of stones set up in the highway, which they say was the breadth of the gates thereof, and the like village of Aclborough, at the foot of it, which retaineth the first syllable of Allclind in it, there were no manner of tokens to lead us that it was a city ; yet when they dig or plough deep in wet weather in that field, they oftentimes find pieces of gold of three pounds a piece, as the understanding men of those parts assure me ; but whose image and superscription it beareth, ignoramus. Neither will I stand to sue out a melius inquirendum, until I shall light upon one of those pieces; but return again to Allcheſter, which ſtandeth in the very heart of Akemanſtreet-way, one of the four great ways that parteth the land of Britain; our chronicles generally call it Erminſtreet-way, of the Britiſh word arminth, becauſe it croſſeth mountains, and weylays places for the better direction of travellers: thoſe that call it Akemanſtreet-way, ſay, that it took its name of them that, being full of ache and aching, made it their way to the hot baths, in Somerſetſhire, for eaſe of their pains, where this way hitteth upon Mendipp hill, in old records called Munedupp, or rather Moinedoppe, that is, the many knolls; and ſo Leland calleth them Mineragia, out of the mines there found in great abundance. Some digging in our days for metal, lighted upon a grave, or a vault, arched in a hillock, wherein lay a man in rich armour well gilded, having two vials of ſome kind of liquor laid by his head, as it were pro viatico, the one bearing the colour of gold, as if it were ſome kind of potable gold, the other of a more reddiſh colour, as if it were ſome vinum philoſophicum, which that age had a ſkill of; but whoſe grave that was (except it were the grave of Congerus, as Capgrave calleth him, or Congellus, as Baronius ſtyleth him, who was ſon to one Conſtantine, emperor of Conſtantinople, that betook himſelf to a private life thereabouts, and gave name to Congersbury) I cannot conjecture; and no inſcription was found upon him to give any directions; only a grave miniſter, Mr. Bird, parſon of Wenelbury, where Allcheſter is, aſſured me, that himſelf had ſeen the vials, and ſome part of the armour. King Edgar alſo, that ſtyled himſelf monarcha totius Britannicæ, and king Athelſtane (in whoſe time Guy the renowned earl of Warwick ſlew the Daniſh giant Colbrand in a ſet combat) are ſaid by approved authors to be buried in ſome of Wiltſhire hills, though Wincheſter church challenge Edgar, and Malmsbury Athelſtane, which is much more credible; but howſoever this may ſerve to confirm my former aſſertion of Gravenhill, that they buried their princes, peers, and nobles in hills, making ſome monuments of earth or stones heaped up, to put posterities in mind of them, and buried them also as costly as the times would suffer, and their abilities would afford.

The ground where Allchester stood was neither too fat to make it foul, nor too lean to make it barren, but reasonably fertile, well meadowed about it, and washed with a sweet little current of water that floweth out of two little heads arising some three or four miles off, thereabout Somerton, a lordship of Sir Richard Farmer, knight, washing the sides of Frinkford, the land of Richard Waneman, esquire; Stratton Audley, sometimes the lands of baron Audley, of whom it took the addition of Audley, but now the lands of Sir Richard Burlace, a religious understanding knight; and Lanton, appertaining to the dean and college of Westminster, whose worthy and honourable dean is at this time Dr. Williams, descended of the ancient houses of Coch Willian and Penryn, bishop of Lincoln and lord keeper of the great seal of England, a man of no less magnanimity and justness in his place, than he is of place and power.

Another head ariseth about Bucknell and Caversfield, the lands of Thomas Moyle, esquire, and washing the heart of the town of Bister, taking into his company a lively spring called Crockwell, that ariseth on the north side, and runneth full south, being arched and vaulted a good way into the ploughed lands, meeteth the former brook about Akemanstreet-way, and lightly washeth the walls of Allchester, and from thence running down along by the skirts of the neat forest of Barnwood, beholding afar off the ancient town of Brill, in ancient and old records called Brinhely, of brin, the hill in which it standeth upon, and hely, the salt wells then about it, whereof the brines beneath it seemeth to continue the memory still; a town well graced with many fair houses and good buildings, and the best yeomen of any one town in the shire, delicately situated upon a fertile fruitful hill in the midst of the forest, and blessed with all kind of commodities, as corn, hay, grass, wood, herbs and roots, wells and springs, that the earth can bring forth in the upper parts of the earth. And the earth within serving for the best brick and all earthen vessels, and the stones for lime, of any one place again, whereof will follow great want to all the countries, and to the University of Oxford, the eye of Christendom, (if the channels of Thames be not scoured to fetch these things from foreign and remote parts, besides the want of building timber,) infinite damage, when the forest is put down, and the wood destroyed. It were therefore much to be wished, that the University were either able to buy it, or otherwise made capable to exchange other lands with his Majesty for the same, that the woods and under-woods might be still maintained there.

It is generally received that Brill was one of the seats of king Ludd, Ludswell, Ludslad, Ludgarsall, and now Ludgarshall, seeming to continue some part of his name, and to make proof of the same; but howsoever it had a strong castle, the ruins whereof still appear near the church there. It appeareth to be very ancient by the Roman money there found.

About the year of Grace 914. it was spoiled by the Danes, in the days of Edward Seniour, whose manor it was; against whose incursions the said Edward built the castle of Buckingham, and another on the other side of the river over against it, at a place they now call the Hermitage; both which are now buried in the earth, but are sufficiently revived in the lustre and favour of their most honourable lord George earl and marquis of Buckingham, whose resplendent favour fortifieth their corporation of Buckingham, better than the castle walls whilst they stood. But to return to Brill: it standeth on the top of a fair hill in the upper end of the vale of Ailesbury, which taketh his name of ayl, the brow of the hill; and the Saxonish word word birig, which is a borough, put to it, the fattest and best soil of all the kingdom, environed on each side with this goodly vale, abounding with all kind of commodities, and having a goodly prospect twenty miles every way, saving the Chinner side, where it reacheth but twelve miles, and so passing down between Muswell and Borsall, the seat of Sir John Dynham, knight, of the line of lord Dynham, lord treasurer to king Henry the Seventh, by Studley abbey, late the land of Sir John Crook, knight, and now of his sons, to the great fat common of Ottmore, that in winter is nothing but a sea of waters, there to meet Allehester brook, and to conduct it along to Charwell, to be both incorporated into Isis at Oxford, where I will leave them; and now speak of some monuments found in the midst of that ploughed field Allcheester, which still retaineth that name, though the city be gone. In the midst whereof one Fymmore, a husbandman of Wenelbury, ploughing very deep, lighted upon a rough round stone, which being digged out was found to be hollowed within, and seamed and cemented together, and being opened, there was nothing found therein but a green glass of some three quarts, full of ashes close stopped up, with lead over the mouth, which warranted it to be urna, or burnt ashes of some great man; for though the manner was then among the Pagans to burn all their dead bodies, instead of burials, yet in those troublesome times to have such an urna hollowed in stone, happened to none but to some great man; as now in these halcyon days of peace wherein we live, it happeneth not to all but to a few to have tombs, epitaphs, or statues: likewise must we judge him to be some Pagan, because urned, and some great man (most like Carausius) slain hard by, that by laws of arms might by right claim his interring, according to the custom of the times, and because in those tumultuous times so well urned, that he might compare with Alexander the conqueror of the whole world for his burial.

Tho' Alexander all the world had got,
His ashes would not fill a little pot.

Which may serve to bridle the cankered greediness of worldly-minded men to gather riches, and especially to lie in wait for blood, thereby to raise themselves in the world, though thereby they lie in hell like sheep afterwards, seeing themselves and all at last may be bedded in a glass.

Another observation I gather herehence, that as the emperors were Heathens then, (and cruel persecutors of the Christians,) so their lieutenants, until Constantius Chlorus came in, were for the most part Pagans; and howsoever Carausius was favourable to the Britains being then Christians, and well beloved of them, and by their help achieved great things at home and abroad, that his name grew fearful to the emperors themselves, which may easily be proved, seeing Maximianus Herculeius, Dioclesian's associate in the empire, was constrained to come into France in person to withstand his force; yet I cannot collect, except it be out of the P. in the inscription upon his coin, which may signify Pius, that he was a Christian; and therefore it is the more probable that he was urned, and that that was his urna.

Yet of Allectus, though in his actions he walked not like a Christian, in seeking and shedding his master, king, and Cesar's blood; yet forasmuch as he hath the sign of the cross in the cress of his coin, which sign was then so odious, that none but Christians did use it, I persuade myself that he had received some glimpse of Christianity; but the Britains generally, and even in the uncivilest parts thereof, had received the Christian faith long before that time, as Tertullian speaketh, Britannorum loca Romanis inaccessa fidem Christi receperunt; that is, those places of the Britains where the Romans never came, (meaning the northern and mountainous parts thereof,) received the Christian faith.

What Pagans meant by saving the ashes of the burnt corpse, I cannot conceive, except by the instinct of nature (out of Plato's philosophy) they had some glimmering light of the immortality of the soul, or expected apalingenesia to the same ashes again.

In the forefront of Allcheester, Allectus, for his better defence, built a sconce, or watch-tower, the ruins and rudders whereof still appear in a plain plat of meadow ground, now the soil of Thomas Moyles, of Caversfield, esq. (lately deceased,) but formerly of a knight of the name of Maund; where, in our days, have been digged much Roman money, brick, tile, and pavements of curious wrought tile of the bigness of sixpence, being delicately laid there, (belike it was some inward hollow place which the Romans called tyslanicum;) the country people call it still very properly rully, or rulla, yet without any knowledge of what it meaneth; for rulla is a diminutive of runa, which cometh of ruo, to rush; that as aries was a kind of engine to batter walls withal, so also the engine rulla was broad-headed, like a plough staff, which thereupon is called rullum, and served to beat off the enemies from the walls thereof; the engine therein kept giving name to the tower, as is usual in the Roman phrase, by a figure called metonimia continens pro contento. But to leave rulla to be further treated of by them of further knowledge in antiquity, and to make known where Allchester stood. It was nine miles from the University of Oxford, a mile from Birster, seven miles short of Woodstock, the king's manor, famous for the goodly fair house of the kings, the presence and privy chamber whereof are paved with alabaster, where queen Elizabeth of ever happy memory was kept prisoner a great part of queen Mary's reign. And famous also for a fair park of red deer and stag, walled all about with a stone wall, where through runneth a sweet current of water, but best known for a curious labyrinth that Henry the Second made to hide his Fair Rosamond in, when himself warred in foreign parts, the ruins whereof are still to be seen against the court gate, and called Rosamond's Bower to this day. This park was made by Henry the First, and said to be the first park in all England, the care and keeping whereof is at this time committed to Philip earl of Montgomery, the first that ever had that title in that place; for the town of Woodstock is a good market and a corporation, and more graced with the birth of ancient learned Chaucer, and Dr. Case, than with any monument of antiquity within it.

For Allchester there is not one stone left upon another; what happened to Troy, happened to it; as it stood in Plough hundred, so is it all ploughed over, and corn doth grow where it stood, as in this rhyme:

In Oxfordshire, by Gravenhill wood,
 Stood Allchester, so fair and good:
 Allectus' walls are brought full low;
 Where once they stood, now corn doth grow.

And as Allchester was built by Allectus, so was it possessed by Constantine, Domitian, and many other Roman governors, whose coin were found therein.

One George Maund, of Chesterton aforesaid, gentleman, took me a piece of money there found, bearing the picture and name of Constantine, who was second from Allectus: on the right side thereof was this inscription, Constantinus Augustus; and on the other side the portraiture of a castle, having the sun and stars in chief above it, and some word on the coin by the side of the castle; to my judgment it was Gallitas. It is the arms at this day of the castle of Wallingford, the king's manor, which was translated to the honour of Ewel, in Oxfordshire; Sir William Knowls, baron of Greys and viscount Walingford, a religious honourable counsellor of state, having at this day the ordering thereof, under his most excellent majesty king James, whose days I beseech God to make as the days of heaven, and his years as many generations; and let his tongue cleave to the roof of his mouth, that saith not Amen to it.

This coin, besides the ancient name of Wallingford, Wallenford, approveth it to be very ancient, and to be a walled town before Constantine's time, or otherwise he had not given the castle in his coin. Another piece of brass money bearing the name and stamp of Domitian Aug. Germa, was found in Allchester by the same gentleman at the same time, which, together with a piece of the mouth of the glass wherein the urna, or burnt ashes, were kept, he sent me this year, 1622. And so leaving Allchester, I return to Allectus, the builder thereof, who (as it ever happened to bloodthirsty and deceitful men) had no sooner obtained the crown and empire, that he so much thirsted after, but Fortune, that before made him her dandling, now, as a revenger of wickedness, began to frown upon him, and to require at his hands the causeless and innocent blood that he had shed, and from the height of honour where she had raised him, threw him down headlong, to verify the proverb, Elevantur ut graviore lapsu cadant. And or ever the crown was warm upon his head, tidings came unto him, that Constantius Chlorus was coming in with a puissant army to take the morsel from between his teeth, which soon after he did. And as Allectus came in by blood, so he ended his days by blood; where observe, that such as lay ambush for blood are at last, like Cyrus, taken themselves, and end their days in blood.

Quam necis artifices arte perire sua.*

Englished thus :

In Nature's book there is no law
That is more just and good,
Than that bloodthirsty guileful men Should end their days in blood.

But whilst these things were a doing, Dioclesian and Maximian resigned their places in the empire, and betook themselves to private lives; Maximian to live at Millan, in Italy, and Dioclesian to live at Nicomedia, in Bithinia, as you may read in Baronius, anno 404; and Constantius obtained the rule of Great Britain, and ruled peacefully, and married Helena, the daughter of king Coyl, who built Colchester, which keepeth part of his name still in it; by whom he had Constantine the Great, that blessed emperor, that refreshed the distressed state of the church, settled the peace thereof, assembled general councils, suppressed the Arians, and promoted Christian religion throughout the world; who was first saluted emperor in Britain, (some of whose money was found in the walls of Allchester;) who having three sons, Constantinus, Constantius, and Constans, whom he left behind him to rule Britain, and sent Constantius to govern France, who gave name to the city of Constance there; Constantine his eldest son he left above the Rhine, to keep Germany in order; himself went forward towards Bithinia, where he discomfited Licinius, and returning to Greece built a fair city at Bizantium, calling it after his own name, in the Greek language Constantino-polis, that is, the city of Constantine, which name in memory of him still it retaineth of us Christians; but of the Mahometans and Turks it is called Stambol, wherein nevertheless they keep the two middle syllables of the former name, but much corrupted. Helen also, his mother, accompanied him upwards so far, and from thence took her voyage to Jerusalem, to seek the cross whereon Christ suffered, and the place where he was buried, both which they say she found; and returning homewards left a castle of her name in Cilicia, another in Spain, near Callacium, which now we call Cales; and first arriving for Ireland, which was but a small cut from Spain, and thence making for the north parts of Britain, which now we call North Wales, landed at Aber Segont, near that fair walled town which now we call Carnarvon, where Constans her grandchild had built a city, some part of the walls thereof are yet standing, some calling it after the name of the river Caer Segont, others after his name Caer Constans; others say, that at several times it carried both names; but now it receiveth generally the name of Hengaer, the old town near Carnarvon, which arising out of her ruins, now drowneth her light and glory.

New Carnarvon, Beaumarish, and Conway, with their three fair castles, were built by king Edward the First, father to Edward of Carnarvon, so called because he was born therein, in whom the principality of Wales was first annexed to the crown of England; king Edward the First his leathern money, bearing his name, stamp, and picture, which he used in the building thereof to spare better bullion, were, since I can remember, preserved and kept in one of the towers of Carnarvon castle; and his statue is still upon the great gate of the town.

At that time king Edward found in that old town the leaden crown, the sword, and other monuments of valiant king Arthur, (the flower and mirror of chivalry,) who, the better to invite all the worthies of the world to his side, created the order of the knights of the round table in honour of arms, whereby he became not only renowned, but followed and admired of all brave high spirited knights, captains, and commanders; out of which order the most honourable order of the Garter (in the days of king Edward the Third of England) took his beginning, as the most judicious duke of Lenox, a gracious temperate senator, well observed. The honourable order of Tassons, Annunciadoes, and St. Michaels, in foreign parts, taking their rise, in imitation of the Garter : but to let this pass on by the by, and to return to king Edward the First, who as soon as he had found these furnitures of king Arthur rejoiced much, and made great account thereof, as the furnitures of the worthiest soldier in the world. And for king Arthur's signet, Sir John Price affirmeth to be kept at Westminster; and Leland hath also described it so perfectly, that if it were lost, yet it might remain alive in his writings.

In the bowels of this old town Caer Constans, there is a little chapel still standing, and a delicate spring of running water fast by, both bearing St. Helen's name, in memory of her landing there; and from the gates of this city (where is both a cross way, and also a cross of stone standing in bivio between the two ways) ariseth a great causeway of hard durable stone; for such is the nature of those stones, that they will not wear away; the way on each side being worn out knee deep, which the inhabitants call Sarn Elen lued-daw, that is, St. Helen the Powerful's causeway, and runneth southward, through the rocky ragged straits of the mountains, even to the south parts of the kingdom. But before I follow this way any further, the sight of the high rocky mountains called Rivel, between Carnarvon and the upper parts of that country called Llyn, or Llain, (as it were a parcel of plain ground beyond those mountains,) presenting themselves to my view, put me in mind of an occurrent worthy to be remembered, that freeth a great prince, Gourtigern king of Britain, who, for his defence against the Picts and other northern nations invading this land, sent for Hengest and Horsa, valiant warriors of the Saxon nation, in Germany, to come to his aid, who, aiming at their own ends more than his good, came without delay, did valiant service against the Picts, and discomfited them; and then perceiving the land to be fat and good, and abounding with all kind of commodities for profit and for pleasures that nature could afford, cast in their heads to make themselves lords of the land, followed Gourtigern in his vices, first filled him with wine, then gave him Rowen, Hengest's daughter, rather to be his concubine than wife, (who was then married,) and seeing him to pamper the belly, provided him and his nobles a drunken feast, and by a secret practice slew his nobles, and enforced him to yield to hard conditions, to make them lords of the best and greatest part of the kingdom ; himself retiring to a city that he had built in Radnorshire, in Wales, called after his name Caer Gourtigern ; where the injurious times, not contented to strip him of the royal crown and dignity, and to confine him to the out borders, and being not able to deprive him of his life, killed him in his name, laying heavy imputations upon him, (as is always the manner of insolent victors and wilful depravers,) saying that he and his city were burnt up by lightning from heaven, where it is more like (as will hereafter appear) that he set his city on a light fire, like a wise captain, that his enemies might not be relieved there, whilst himself fled up to the mountains some fifty miles further, as our chronicles mention, to a place called Garneth, which place we cannot find out except it be Garnethwen, a little above Carnarvon, or at the foot of the mountain Rivel, where he made his abode, died, and was buried, as may be proved by the traditions of the elders, the songs of the bards, which were all the written monuments of those times ; his grave there lately found, his name left in the hills and passage there, and such like monuments of him thereabouts ; for Gourtigern being put to his last refuge, planted himself beyond the mountain of the Rivel, towards that tract of ground called Llein, having the mountain at his back for a bulwark of defence, there being no more passage over it than one, which to this day is called Bulch Gourtigern, that is Gourtigern's passage, and that so narrow that three cannot come up a front, so that with a few he might repel a great many ; and if he found himself overmatched, then might he betake himself to sea on the one hand and the other ; and if the enemy were afore him by sea, and landed to annoy him, then he might flee to the height of the mountains at his back, and escape them : this commodious place did Gourtigern choose for his last refuge, where by all likelihood he died. And besides his passage still retaining his name there, a place being there called Bedn Gour- tigern his grave, which was a hillock raised and stones heaped up after the manner of burying the princes and kings in those times; the inhabitants of the parish of Llanoyhayarn, where his grave was, for better proof of the truth thereof, assembled themselves together, digged down that heap of earth, and removed the great heap of stones, and in a stone chest found the body of a very tall man, for his shin bone was of an ell long, as a grave minister, Mr. Hugh Roberts, who is a landed man in that parish, a certain man of his word, and a careful preserver and searcher of antiquities, informed me upon his knowledge, these being found out there since his Majesty's most happy coming to the crown of England, and most of the searchers yet alive to verify it, are better proofs to free this dead prince from a direful death, than the slanderous imputations of his enemies to maintain it; and his bones there found are better testimonies for him, than all their bones can bring against him for being burnt up with lightning at Caer Gourtigern. But in my return back again to St. Helen's causeway, I cast my eye upon a nook of land, bordering upon a narrow mouth of the sea, called Abermenay, where the river of Conway Segont, and other lesser brooks, give the Irish ocean the meeting, called Llanwaglan, where, at the building of a new house in our days appertaining to Thomas Glynne of Naulley, esquire, digging but a little way into the ground, they found stones bearing the very colour of silver or tin, which gave many suspicion to think that silver ore might be taken up there, if it were searched for, as well as in other parts of this kingdom, as Moynglath, Mailor, Isa, and other places.

And now, since my foot standeth upon St. Helen's causeway, by the gates of the old town above Carnarvon, I will follow it upwards into the craggy mountains, and trace it out until it come to Caer Garon, where it endeth, some six miles higher into the mountains, in a narrow strait between the nooks of two great mountains, the one called Mynith Mawr, the other Moeleilio: the country people say that Constans was slain by a savage man, which they call Kidun, in respect of his wildness; but all writers say it was Megnentius Ta-

porus, as will appear in the words following, and they will demonstrate in a manner the place where he was buried, calling it Bedli y mab, that is, the son's grave, calling it so by an excellency, Bedli y mab, that though every son be mab, yet not many such sons, and therefore, by the son's grave, they mean the great son or grandson of the great empress St. Helen. And the rock against it, where the wild savage lay in ambush for Constans, whom he slew coming in the rearward of the troop, and fled there for his refuge, they call the castle Kidmn, that is, the wild man's castle. I like not of their opinion who say, that Constans was slain by Gourtigern aforementioned; for there was very near a hundred years difference between their two reigns, and many succeeded between them: what Constans soever that was Gourtigern did depose and deprive of his life to get the crown, it cannot be this Constans, sith so many reigned between them both. And though some of our chronicles say, that Constans was slain in Spain, yet that may be a mistake pardonable in those times, when historiographers did not observe time and place so narrowly as we do, these places being then less known than Spain, through which he came to Ireland, and with a small cut off the sea to the harbour of Caer Constans, his own town, and therefore more like to be buried in this place, where so many things are that continue his memory still, as his grave, which they call still Bedli y mab, a stone stile fast by, called to this day Cafndha Bedli y mab, the high Snowdon hills, which allusively they call the British Alps, and was called formerly (of the coldness thereof) Rirri, upon the great outcry they made upon his death, was called Waiddfa, corruptly Widdfa, that is, the place of the outcry, and still keepeth that name; a place some mile or two further, where they sat down to make lamentation for him, they call Cadair r Ochain, that is, the seat or chair of lamentation, where they say that all the train sat down to mourn for Constans his death, making doleful lamentation, like the lamentation of Israel for Josiah, or the lamentation of Joseph and the Egyptians for Jacob: and as the Egyptians called the place where that lamentation was made Abel Mizraim, that is, the lamen- tation of the Egyptians; so the inhabitants thereabouts called the high hills Snowdon, at the foot whereof they made their outcry, Widdfa, and the place where they sat down to mourn, Cadair r Ochain, which names they retain to this very day.

That Magnentius that slew Constans is surnamed Taporus, and was the son of a Britain, and afterwards usurped the empire for three years, over Britain, Gallia, and the adjacent isles to the same. In anno 1616, myself being in those very places, and calling to my company all the ancient and understanding men thereabouts, made great and diligent inquiry, if any could shew me the place of Constans his grave, or whereabouts it lay; for that the general voice and tradition of the people said it was by a stone stile, notoriously known by the name of Cafudhabed y mab, that is, the stile of the son's grave. And a freeholder (the owner of those lands) shewed us long blue slate stones being then in the stone walls, which his grandfather digging stones thereout to repair that wall, lighted upon some kind of grave whereout he had those long stones; but upon the fresh pursuit of that inquiry, some half mile further or better in the highway side, by the great lake side, called Llynn Tartheniby, the conduction of one that a little before digged a ditch there, where his mattock struck through cross a grave of blue slate, the best stones that the mountains could afford, but whose it was nobody could tell us, except that it were Constans's grave. It was of a great length, and somewhat shallow in the ground, but bones I could find none, and being so near the upper crust of the earth where air came, it was no marvel, for they must needs putrefy: myself did see this grave, and thrust my riding wand into it.

1. But whosoever was buried there, it seemeth he was some great person, that they provided him a kind of tomb.

2. That he was a Christian, or else they had not buried him and tombed him, but urned him, as that which was found at Allechester.

3. That also he was buried before there were any churches in those parts, or else they had not buried him in the mountains.

4. And lastly, that he was no malefactor, for then they had not tombed him, but rather thrust a stake through him, as the manner is.

From thence this causeway runneth up into the mountains, leaving many marks of some great furrow, as Croysford, an unlucky way seemeth to retain in it so much, to Harleigh, and so down through Wales, Herefordshire, Gloucestershire, Somersetshire, and Wiltshire, till it come to old Sarum, which seemeth to take his name of the causeway, sarn, the dash above taken for um, made it be called Sarum. Doctor Maschett, in his poem of it, calleth it Sarona, and Pompey making it Sorbiodun, and the Saxons coming in, in their language call Searnsburgh; all which draweth nigh the etymology of Sarn; and the Britains used to denominate such towns as stood upon causeways to bear part of the name of Sarn in it. As Stonystratford, that hath a forced way to the end of it, Isanaavara, and by the river of Conway, upon the like causeway, the hamlet above it is called Taly Sarn; and another place in South Wales is called in like manner Taly Sarn, of the causeway sarnia, sarnsey, now garnsey, by turning s into g, seemeth to come herehence. Some derive Sarisbury of Cesars-burg; and for that cause they give the black spread eagle upon their gates at Wilton, the shire town of Wiltshire, and the chief house of the noble earl of Pembroke, formerly called Elen-dun, that is Elen's town; for so I judge it to be derived of her name that dwelt fast by, rather than of the river Alon, or Alanone, which cometh not so near the word. At which town, or at Chloren, or at old Sarum, being before guns were invented an invincible hold, it is most likely St. Helen, at her return, did remain, as well for her better safety, as also to be near the south seas, to expect daily news and tidings, as well from Constantine the emperor, and the east parts, as also from her nephews his sons from the west parts, viz. Germany and France, where I leave her safely guarded and conducted to her own country, and will walk up the downs to behold the great stones set up in a round compass upon the top of a high knoll near Ambrosbury, the late noble earl of Hartford's house, whose lady and widow Lodowick the noble duke of Lenox, by the mediation of his most excellent Majesty, married, a virtuous lady, endowed with good gifts of grace and nature, presenting themselves to my view, require I say somewhat of them before I put an end to my story: upon the height of the plain between the river Avon and the river Alon, both which rivers water the fair city of new Sarum, and part themselves through every street of that city, standeth these goodly monuments of stones reared up an end, of a wondrous great height, and a great stone at the top of every two mortised into both the other, which plainly proveth that they are not, as they fable, (giants' stones,) fetched from Mount Karel, in Ireland, by Merlyn's art, but made out of that cliff over against towards old Sarum, the colour of which blue clay they still represent, and being scraped but with a knife, a man may discern this clay cemented with some other gluey substance, as plaister of Paris, and such like, erected not in memory of those nobles whose tombs in heaps of earth appear still thereabouts, slain by Hengest there treacherously, when he called his son in law Gourtigern and the Britains to feast there, but for a trophy of some memorable victory thereabouts obtained, as Necham the poet saith, by Uter Pendragon; or as other say, by Arthur the valiant; and to that seemeth the ancient bard Theliesinus to allude; but Necham's verse is this:

Fines devicto victor ab hoste means.*

Uter Pendragon brought these stones
To Ambrosbury coast,
For trophies of his victory,
Had on the Pagan host.

To be short, as the pillars in the village and field of Borough Brig, in Yorkshire, are made marble, and said to be reared at the reconciliation of Elydure and Archigallo, or Aurygallon, as the history of St. Albane's calleth him, the son of Morudus, the king, that was devoured by a sea monster which he fought withal; or rather, as I should take it, these pillars were set up at the reconciliation of the most renowned Britains Belinus and Brennus, of whom we read in our chronicles, that having drawn great armies to the side of a river, such as that river Eure is, being ready to give each other battle, at the earnest labour and mediation of their grave mother were reconciled and accorded, so is it most likely that these pillars (like the divini pacis, in Scotland) were reared thereupon, and made of made marble, which art then flourished, though now it be not practised. King Arthur, that lived about that time, and was acquainted with rearing of trophies after his victory had against the Caledon Britains, reared also the like trophy of stones mortised one into another, as still appeareth at the foot of Caledon forest, and is called of the inhabitants Arthur's oven, or Arthur's oval rather, that is, his triumph after the victory there obtained. And as these stones on Ambrosbury hills are the only mirror of England, so are the other of Scotland: but for the stones of Stoneage, two strange things are reported of them; the first, that if they be rubbed, and water thrown upon them, they will heal any green wound or old sore; the second, that though they be not many, and stand round like a coronet, yet they cannot be numbered: but I will leave both these under a melius inquirendum, to be further examined by them that shall make proof thereof. And so leaving Constantius Chlorus buried at York, Constantine his son at his imperial seat at Constantinople, Constantinus his son in Germany, Constantius in France, and Constans slain by Magnentius, and buried (as is very probable) in the mountains of North Wales, and St. Helen returned from Jerusalem and the eastern parts, as the only mirror of women for her travels, (except the Sarcasian Persian lady that Sir Robert Shirly married, and brought through all lands with him into England, who was there delivered of a son, his Majesty king James being his godfather at the font,) to rest quietly at her cities of Sarum, Chloren, and Elendun, and to expect tidings from the eastern parts, and Constantinople, I will put an end to my history.

THE HISTORY OF CHILTON,

IN THE COUNTY OF BUCKINGHAM.

---

C H A P. I.

Of the Place in general.

CHILTON, the subject of the following essay, in its present state is a small parochial village in the county of Buckingham, and in the hundred of Ashendon. Being encompassed by the parishes of Ashendon, Dourton, Cherdsey, Long Crendon, Wormenhall, Ickford or Hickford, and Brill, anciently a royal vill of Edward the Confessor, so called corruptly from Buryhill or Brehill. Its latitude being reckoned at 51°. 48'. north, and its longitude 56'. west from the city of London<sup>a</sup>.

In spiritual matters, it is subject to the see of Lincoln, in the arch-deaconry of Buckingham and the deanery of Waddesdon; and in present repute, it is a curacy, the church being dedicated to St. Mary, and under the patronage of Richard Carter, esq.

What was its ancient form; the alterations it underwent; the succession of its superior possessors; and its ecclesiastical state, shall be attempted, as far as my discoveries can reach, in the course of these few ensuing pages.

The figure this place made under (those I beg leave to call) the Aboriginal Britains is now lost in the revolution of time. Nor is its condition more certain during the Roman command here. But it received its present name from, and doubtless was a residence of the Saxons. And if Ashenden (as Dr. Kennett<sup>b</sup> conjectures) was the Ærceþūn of the Saxons, and the place of the battle between Ethelred, king of the West Saxons, and Alfred the Great, his brother, against the Danes, anno Dom. 871. in which the Pagans (albeit they had their complete army in the field)<sup>c</sup> were routed with a great slaughter of their leaders and common soldiers, this place<sup>d</sup>, in regard of its neighbourhood, might be concerned in the event of that transaction. The Danes, after the defeat, retreated to the castle of Reading, then in their hands, and were pursued by the victorious Saxons. But whether they got over the Thame stream, either at Thame, or Ickford, or at any intermediate passage, this place might possibly lie in their rout. But be this as it will, we are assured, that it was of consideration in the times of the Saxons; and from them, and the latter end of their government, I must begin my æra of this place, for want of proper authorities to rise any higher.

C H A P. II.

Of the Name of Chilton.

Nothing was more usual (because natural and rational) than for places originally to have received their distinguishing denomination from their situation. I need not instance in Scripture local names, nor yet those of the Greeks and Romans for confirmation, the places round about this neighbourhood affording abundant evidence; as Thame, Ickford, Wheatley, (Watele,) Waterstoke, Waterperry,

Dourton, Oakley, Brill, Ashendon, Wotton, &c. And till I am better informed in its etymology, I shall have recourse to the same consideration for imposing the name of Chilton on this place.

Chilton, therefore, I shall suppose derived from the Saxon Ēyl, or chil, cold; and their ton, a place or dwelling. Tan et ton in fine nominum locorum deducenda sunt a Sax. tun, sepes, vallum; et in translatione villa, vicus, oppidum, prædium, habitaculum<sup>c</sup>. So that it might, perhaps, have got its name from its cool and airy scite, chiefly owing to its elevated situation, and its easterly exposure; which some naturalists<sup>f</sup> have recommended as the most healthful of all situations. So Mr. Lambard<sup>g</sup> accounts for Chilham castle, in Kent, viz. in Saxon, Ēyleham, that is, the cold dwelling. Dr. Harris also, according with him, says, That it took its denomination from the coldness of its situation<sup>h</sup>, as several places in that county, and elsewhere, have done.

From hence the range of hills that lie chiefly in this shire, and are the upland part of it, and which yield a curious view from this very place, are called the Chiltern, and in Saxon Ēlreþn or Ēylreþn; which Mr. Somner interprets locus gelidus, as our very place in Domesday is written Cilton.

Of the Possessors of Chilton.

What I intend by the possessors of this our village of Chilton, are those that have been the chief proprietors of it, that have had its manor vested in them, and have been what we may call owners of the lordship; though perhaps they have not resided here, but at some other capital seat of their estates.

And these, as I shall happen to collect them, shall be sorted, each family distinct, under different sections.

Of Alric Fitz-Goding, Lord of this place.

The first capital lord of our manor, that it hath been my fortune to meet with<sup>i</sup>, was Alric Fitz-Goding, (Alricus Filius Goding,) a knight of king Edward the Confessor's court, who held both Chilton and Essington in that king's reign, which began about 1042, upon the death of Hardicanute, the last Danish king, and ended by his death in 1066, which gave a handle after a sharp, unsuccessful struggle made by Harold, son of Godwin earl of Kent, for the claim, invasion, and (at length) succession of the Conqueror.

Alric, from the Saxon Æl, Al, of Alh, signified omnis, or totus; and ric (ric) in the end of words, was regnum, or imperium<sup>k</sup>. So that Alric, by implication, was one that was worthy of all command. It was a name of frequent use in distinguished people among the Saxons, and especially of Alric king of Kent<sup>l</sup>, who was defeated in a bloody engagement at Otford, by Ofla king of the Mercians, in 773<sup>m</sup>; as also of Alric, son of Heardberht, who, anno 798, was slain in a battle at Whalley, (þpeallæge.)<sup>n</sup> in com. Lancaster.

Goding, in its first part, was Eud, which, says my authority, est vocabulum Saxonicum, et significat bellum<sup>o</sup>; and if, when complete in Saxon, it was Eudpine, softened into Godwine, it was a fit name for a martial man, signifying one that was successful in war, and famed for victory.

I shall only observe further, that the termination ing, in the Anglo-Saxon language, denoted extraction, or descent, as Edgaring, the son of Edgar. And so Goding, the son of Good, or Eud<sup>p</sup>, which signified Good. And the Saxon Chronicle hath Euppes pær Epichelming. Epichelm Eýnegylring<sup>q</sup>, which Dr. Gibson, the present wor-

But however worthy our Alric was, or worthily descended, he underwent the fate of the rest vanquished English, to be outed of his possessions, and to see his estate distributed amongst the Norman adventurers. An action, the policy of which could never atone to the Conqueror its injustice and severity. An instance indeed of power, and deep reach of design, as well as a mark of conquest, but at the same time a flagrant example of inexcusable fierceness and relentless inhumanity.

Of the Family of Giffard, Possessors of Chilton.

The effect of the Conquest produced almost an universal change and alteration in the owners of the English lands. The Saxons, who had by degrees violently drove out the Britains, and settled in their habitations as lords and masters, and not as inmates and dependants, now underwent the same usage from the victorious Norman and his attendants. The blood of her bravest sons was shed in defence of their country, and falling in battle in opposition of the invader, their lands were seized, as the claim of arms, and the purchase of the sword ; as they were generally through the whole kingdom, whether their owners had resisted the invasion or submitted to it. The first suffered for want of will to truckle to lawless power, and the other for want of power to oppose and repel it.

This brought in a thorough change of masters through the whole land ; the Saxons being thrust out, and the foreign adventurers placed in their room.

Dixerat ; Hæc mea sunt ; veteres migrate coloni. Virg. Ecl. 9.

And this alteration was soon succeeded by a general survey of the lands and possessors, not only to establish and ascertain the settlement of the new sort of owners lately introduced, but also as a fund to enable the intruder to fix his government and kingdom, to support his conquests, and perpetuate the bondage of the vanquished and oppressed natives, by contributions raised from those lauds, of which they had been violently and unjustly dispossessed.

It was upon this great event, that our parish of Chilton (being made up of two manors, Ciltone and Hesintone) was taken from Alric Fitz-Goding, its Saxon lord, and conferred, by a mere stretch of power, on one of the Giffards, named Walter, who had attended on the Conqueror in this expedition.

And not long after this, viz. 18. William I. 1084, was compiled that noble record of Doomsday, which, for the fullness of the survey, the accuracy of the entries, and its antiquity, has not perhaps its equal in the world. In this book, (which is carefully preserved,) both Chilton and Esington are entered as the land of Walter Giffard; Chilton (called therein Cilton) was surveyed at five hides, and Esington (Hesintone) at five hides also. There were ten villain, or copyholders at Chilton, and five at Esington. Chilton valuit vii. libras, and Esington Lx. solidos, or three pounds. A hide, by the way, was as many acres as were sufficient for one plough to manage in a year. Hidæ, id est, jugera uni aratro sufficientia per annum<sup>1</sup>.

Our lord in some tables is styled Gualtier Giffard conte de Longeville<sup>t</sup>, and in another he is recited Gualtar Guifart counte de Longueville<sup>u</sup>. Our historians furnish us with the following account of him, viz. that he was the son of Walter Giffard the first, by the daughter of Girard Flatellus; which first Walter was the son of Osbern de Bolebec<sup>x</sup>, by Avelina his wife, sister to Gunnor, wife of Richard the first duke of Normandy.

Our Walter Giffard became earl of Longeville, in Normandy, before his association with the Conqueror in his adventure on England. And not long after the establishment of William the First, viz. 1070, he received of him, in gift, the earldom of Buckingham, and other vast possessions in these parts; having been not only assistant to him in his conquest, but allied to him in ties of blood, being his cousin (consanguineus) in the third degree.

In the year 1100, 1. Hen. I. we meet with his name recited as a witness to that king's confirmation of the laws and customs of England<sup>y</sup>; which charter lay dormant for a long time, till Stephen Langton, archbishop of Canterbury, in 1213, produced it to the nobles, and with them confederated to maintain the several articles of it against king John<sup>z</sup>.

His wife was Agnes de Ribothmonte, the sister of Anselm de Ribothmonte<sup>a</sup>, by whom, after fifteen years' marriage, he had his son Walter Giffard the third, and another son named Hugh; he had also a sister, Rohisia, Rohais, or Rose, married to Richard Fitz-Gilbert, earl of Ewe and Briony in Normandy, and by the Conqueror (to whom he was sewer, or dapifer) enfeoffed in the towns and castles of Clare in Suffolk, and Tunbridge in Kent<sup>b</sup>, and in divers other great seigneuries in England. This Rose was lady of Standon, a small market town in the hundred of Branghing; and in Domesday (after my authority)<sup>c</sup> she was called Rothais, and was the mother of several children that became of account.

Our Walter, the first earl of Buckingham, died in England in 1102, 2. Hen. I. and his dead body, after his own order, was conveyed into Normandy<sup>d</sup>, and buried in the entrance (in introitu) of the church of St. Mary, at Longeville, which he had founded and built<sup>e</sup>, as appears from his epitaph handed down to the present time.

His successor was Walter Giffard, his son, the third of that name, and second earl of Buckingham, and also earl of Longeville, in Normandy. He married one Ermingard, (a noble lady, if one may guess from her name, which signifies robes listed or lined with ermines, a costly fur worn only by persons of the best distinction,) who joined with him in the founding and endowing of the abbey of Nutley, Notesly, Noteley, or Notley<sup>f</sup>, in this neighbourhood, in the year 1112, where at length he was buried, dying without issue, in 1164, 10. Hen. II. though I know not how to reconcile this date with the foregoing note, viz. 12. Hen. II. Upon an assessment of the aid for the marriage of Maud the king's daughter, (to Henry, surnamed Leo, or the Lion, duke of Saxony and Bavaria<sup>g</sup>, an incomparable hero, to whom she bore, besides other sons, William, born at Winchester, the father of Otto Puer, the first duke of Braunthswieg Luneburg, from whom his present Majesty king George and the royal family of Great Britain are lineally descended,) Walter de Bolebec certified<sup>h</sup>, that the knight's fees, which he held of our Walter, then earl of Buckingham, were no less than twenty in number.

The Conqueror is said to have given to our Walter Giffard earl of Buckingham twenty-eight manors in the county of Norfolk<sup>i</sup>; and the lands they held in com. Bucks. &c. were a vast accession of estate, and called the honour of Giffard. Credenden, or Crendon, was one of their seats, where they had a park, one of the most ancient in this shire. As they had also another residence at Whaddon, in Cotslow hundred, where the ingenious and communicative antiquary Browne Willis, esq. hath his present seat. The Giffards also were possessors of Crowmarsh, com. Oxon, to which they have left the adjunct of Giffard subsisting to this day.

Walter Giffard confirmed to the alien priory of Newinton Longville, in Bucks. a cell to the abbey of St. Faith, of Longville, in Normandy, many lands and tenements given to it by his father Walter Giffard, by himself, and his wife Ermingar, with great privileges in his forest of Waddon<sup>k</sup>.

The successor of our Walter Giffard the second, in his entailed lands, was Osbert Giffard, son to his brother Hugh. The rest of his possessions he gave to William Marshal earl of Pembroke, who had married Isabel, grandchild to Rohesia Giffard aforesaid, aunt to our Walter<sup>l</sup>.

Thus says Mr. Brookes: but it seems to be a mistake; for king Richard the First, in the first year of his reign 1189, gave this Isabel in marriage to William Marshall<sup>m</sup>, twenty-five years after our Walter's death. The case seems rather to be, that this hath relation only to his honours, and the lands annexed to them, that he held of the crown; and that, after his decease, his kinsman Richard de Clare, surnamed earl of Pembroke, son of Gilbert, the second son of Gilbert, son of Richard Fitz-Gilbert and Rohesia Giffard, was honoured with the title and lands belonging to the earldom of Buckingham; and that marrying with Eva, daughter of Dermor king of Ulster, at his death in 1176. he left only Isabel, his daughter, his heir in ward to the crown; who, being matched to William Marshall aforesaid, brought the lands derived to her from the Giffards into that family. She bore him five sons, who all died without issue, two of them being buried by their father in the church of the Temple, at London; and as many daughters, matched into honourable families, as will appear by the pedigree annexed. Of the sons of this match

(by the way) Richard the Second did give to the church of St. Mary's, in Thame, certain woods in Crendon<sup>n</sup>, to pray for his own soul, and that of Gervasia his wife. This must have been about the year 1234. Which those woods were, and by whom now possessed, those who have leisure and curiosity may inquire.

Here follows the scheme of the descendants from Rohesia Giffard that had relation to these parts: though in the settling of this matter of the descent, we need not be too curious; our manor being (I presume) part of the entailed lands, and descended to that branch of the Giffards which retained the name of Bulbec, and were of prime note and consideration for the great inheritances they possessed hereabouts.

I find, that in the 9. Ric. I. 1198, Walter de Giffard was high sheriff of Dorset and Somersetshire<sup>o</sup>.

The arms of the Giffards, earls of Buckingham, and lords of the manor and town there, are said to have been gules, three lions passant in pale, argent<sup>p</sup>. Though, in the 14. Edw. 1. 1286, I find that Osbert Giffard, knight, bore in his seal this coat of arms, viz. barry of three, in chief a lion rampant<sup>q</sup>.

Of the Family of Bulbec, Possessors of Chilton.

Mr. Camden, a writer of great capacity and judgment, not only tells us, that Crendon was the head of the honour of Giffard, but that the Bolebees held here several manors of them<sup>r</sup>. For their seat they built a castle in these parts, called after their name Bolebec castle<sup>s</sup>, in the parish of Whitchurch, near Wing, long since laid in ruins.

But this was not the only place that took its name from them. They occasioned an addition to Swaffham Bulbeck, in Cambridge-shire, and gave name to the barony of Bolebeck, near Headon, in Northumberland, of which it was a considerable part<sup>1</sup>.

But to rise as high as I can in the account of the family.—Hugh de Bolebee was one of the Conqueror's train; and in the old rolls is recorded Hue sire de Bolebeke, Bollebee, or Bolebeck<sup>2</sup>; and, as a recompence for his service, was generously rewarded with many manors of good value and consideration, as appears by the Domesday survey; viz. one, and that the largest, of the two manors of Rycote, com. Oxon. and therefore called Great Rycote<sup>3</sup>; Waltune, in the county of Huntingdon; and several of distinction in our county of Bucks. as Missenden, Agmondesham, Chesham, Medmenham, Culloreton, (perhaps Culverton, in the parish of Risborough,) Linford, Wavendon, and some others, as Brook, Cetedone, Wadone, and Herulfmede, whose modern names I cannot assign.

How the descent came down from the original Hugh, I cannot ascertain; but I find another Hugh, whose mother was the daughter of Richard lord Montfitchet, who gave name to Stansted Montfitchet, in the county of Essex, the seat of the barony. The original of them came in with the Conqueror, (viz. Le Sire Mont Fiquet<sup>4</sup>;) and the family continuing for five generations, the inheritance fell to three ladies that were sisters<sup>5</sup>; viz. Margaret, matched to our Hugh de Bolebee; Avelina, to Hugh de Fortibus earl of Albemarle; and Philippa, to Hugh Playz.

This Hugh de Bolebee, anno 1145, 10. king Stephen, is said to have founded the abbey of Wobourn, in Bedfordshire<sup>6</sup>, now one of the seats of the Russells, dukes of Bedford; and he (or rather some of his descendants) was the founder of Medenham convent, in Bucks. This last was a priory of Cistercian monks, and said to have been founded in the reign of king John, and confirmed by that prince. It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and made a cell to the abbey of Wobourne, before mentioned, from whence the monks came in 1204, and settled at it<sup>b</sup>.

These Cistercians were a refined order of the Benedictines, or black monks. They were first settled in England at Rivalx, in Yorkshire. To E. abbot of which convent, William Neubrigensis dedicates his five books of English history, from the conquest to A. D. 1197<sup>c</sup>. In which, with a great deal of freedom, he speaks of the avarice of the church of Rome, and of the prelates and clergy of those times. Wobourne was another of this brotherhood, and parent to Medmenham, having been itself a colony from Fountains, in Yorkshire<sup>d</sup>. The monks of which last place call him homo potens, et magnarum rerum inspiratus a Domino, ut monasterium construeret ordinis Cisterciensis<sup>e</sup>.

Who was the wife of this Hugh de Bulbec, or when he died, I have not found, but he is said to have left four daughters coheirs of his vast estate; viz. Philippa, married to Thomas de Lancaster; Margery, to Richard de Corbet, and afterwards to Ralph lord Greystock, (as Mr. Camden says<sup>f</sup>;) but Sir William Dugdale tells us it was Ralph, the son of William lord Grimsthorp<sup>g</sup>; Alice, to Walter de Huntercombe, (perhaps seated at Huntercombe, in the parish of Tuffield, alias Nuffield, in Oxfordshire<sup>h</sup>, whose descendant, William de Huntercomb, by a writ of summons, bearing date the 31st of Edward the First, was called as a baron to Parliament<sup>i</sup>;) and Maud, to Hugh de la Val, or (as Camden) J. Lovel.

To this last mentioned Hugh succeeded Walter<sup>k</sup>, his brother, who was styled of Bulbec castle, in the county of Bucks; which seat was in the parish of Whitchurch, where the ruins of the castle appear<sup>l</sup>.

Anno 1135, 1. Stephen, in an original charter, whereby some lands were settled on the church of Winchester, subscribed by a great many barons, we have amongst the subsigners, signum Walteri de Bolbec, bar.<sup>m</sup>—But I scarce believe this gentleman to have been the Walter that is said to have been his brother, and to have succeeded to the last Hugh.

Walter, the brother of Hugh, 11. Hen. II. gave the king one hundred marks for the wardship of his nephew, perhaps the minor son of Hugh aforegoing; and the next year paid an aid towards the marriage of Maud, the king's daughter"; at which time he held of the king eight knight's fees, but twenty of Giffard earl of Buckingham. He had by a wife, whose name and family I have not recovered, two daughters, viz. . . . . the wife of Elias de Beauchamp, and Isabel, whom he, dying before the 32d of Henry II. 1185, left but nine years old, and his heir.

This lady was by the king committed to the care of Alberic de Vere, the first earl of Oxford, who disposed of her in marriage to his second son Robert de Vere<sup>a</sup>, afterwards the third earl, who in 9. John gave the king three hundred marks and three palfreys (saddle horses) for licence to take the said Isabel to wife, which he accordingly did. He lived with her about thirteen years; and dying in 1221, was buried cross-legged in the priory of Hatfield Broad Oak, com. Hertford, of which he was founder<sup>p</sup>; with an epitaph over his grave, that promised forty days' pardon to any that should pray for his soul. He left by our Isabel two sons, Hugh, his successor, earl of Oxford, and Sir Henry Vere, knight; and a daughter, Isabel, married to Sir John Courtney, knight. His arms, as they were painted on his pavise or shield, were, or, a quarter of France semee, charged with a mullet argent<sup>q</sup>. The assuming of a mullet in the first quarter of the coat of Vere is said to have happened on this occasion<sup>r</sup>, viz. for that a shooting star, falling on the top of the guidhome of one of their ancestors in the holy land, gave him the opportunity of pursuing his enemies, the infidels. A story, no doubt, hatched by the crusaders, improved by the monks, and by fanciful heralds and armorists confirmed.

After the decease of her first husband, the lady Isabel took to her second Henry de Nuvant<sup>s</sup>, whom she also survived. She is sometimes called Elizabeth; and having taken a friar of the order of the Dominicans, or friars preachers, or black friars, to her confessor, she became much affected to that order, and is esteemed as the foundress of their monastery in Oxford, to which she gave a court-yard<sup>t</sup>. The time of her death, and place of her burial, may be ascertained from this note in Matthew Paris<sup>u</sup>, viz. 1245. “In crastino Purificationis beatæ Mariæ, obiit comitissa Oxoniæ, cujus nomen erat Isabella de Bolbec, et sepulta est in ecclesia fratrum prædicatorum Oxoniæ, quia ejusdem ecclesiæ fuerat fundatrix.”

Of some other Families anciently Possessors of Lands in the Parish of Chilton.

It must be remembered that Dourton, in ancient esteem, was reckoned in the parish, and the church there a chapel to that of Chilton.

In an old register, or leiger book, of the abbey of Noteley, now or lately in the possession of the earl of Abingdon, (as I have been informed by Mr. Willis, who kindly assisted me on every occasion with instructions,) there are several particulars relating to ancient families heretofore possessing some lands in this our parish; of each of which I shall give an account in order of time.

Paganus (Payne) de Dourton, and Roesia (Rose) his wife, and William their son and heir, granted in perpetual alms to Parco Cren-don, alias Nutley abbey, the chapel of Dourton, and one yard land there. Which grant was confirmed (as to the donation of the chapel more particularly) by Robert de Burnham, archdeacon of Buckingham<sup>x</sup>. This must have been about anno 1188, the last of the reign of king Henry the Second; for then Robert possessed that dignity. This grant of his father and mother was again renewed by William de Dourton their son. Of this name and family, I am furnished with no further memorials; and so proceed to the next, viz.

Geoffrey de Sancto Martino.

This gentleman (in English, St. Martin) was owner of lands in the lordship of Easington, and gave some of them to the religious of Nutley<sup>y</sup>. But of this donation I have neither the particulars nor time; and shall only observe of the name, that Laurence de Sancto Martino was a chaplain and counsellor of king Henry the Third in 1244<sup>z</sup>; and, in anno 1246<sup>a</sup>, was employed by that king to put a stop to the pope's exactions in England. This pope was Innocent the Fourth, who, by means of the first general council convened at Lyons, in France, 1245<sup>b</sup>, deprived the emperor Frederick the Second of his empire and kingdoms<sup>c</sup>; and afterwards, by his partizans, with a prodigious slaughter, routed the imperial army of sixty thousand men, that had laid siege to Parma<sup>d</sup>, and took an inestimable treasure; and amongst the rest the imperial crown, of exceeding value, and many golden vessels of great weight<sup>e</sup>; having cut to pieces Thaddeus, the lieutenant of the emperor's army, and guardian of his treasure. The same pope<sup>f</sup> (not long before this time, to carry on his wars against the emperor) demanded of all beneficed clergymen in England that were resident, the third part of their goods; and of the non-residents the half; and constituted Fulco Basset, bishop of London, (who, by the way, was by inheritance owner of one of the manors of Hasely, com. Oxon.) diligently to exact it. To oppose this proceeding of the bishop, the king sent Sir J. de Lexintune, and this Laurence de Saint Martin, to St. Paul's, where the bishop held his meeting, to represent, in the name of the clergy of England<sup>f</sup>, the unreasonableness of this imposition, and their incapacity to bear it; appealing from this decree of the pope and the council to our Lord Jesus Christ, and a future universal council. But to return to my subject. This Laurence de Sancto Martino, about 1250, was elected bishop of Rochester in the room of Richard de Wendover, deceased<sup>g</sup>; where he sat till 1274, when he died, and was buried in his own cathedral<sup>h</sup>. If he be found to have been of the family of our Geoffrey, the relation of so eminent a person will add no small splendor to the little place of Easington. Of the same name and family also was Sir Richard St. Martyn, who was paramour to the infamous Alice, countess to Thomas earl of Lancaster.

N. B.—That A. D. 1683, Thomas Parsons, esq. (of a family descended from Great Milton, com. Oxon.) was lord of the manor and owner of the lands and lordship of Easington, in the parish of Chilton, com. Bucks. and Mrs. Margaret . . . . was his wife.

John de Easington, or Esingdon, anno 1355, was abbot of Thame<sup>i</sup>.

Hamden, or Hampden.

The next owner of lands in this place was a family of great consideration heretofore, and that still remaineth in the neighbourhood till the present time, viz. that of Hamden. What relates to us is, that Reginald, son of Alexander de Hampden, in the time of Henry the Second, between the years 1263 and 1280, that is, the 9th and 26th years of his reign, did grant some lands at Chilton to the aforesaid abbey at Notely. This family (as de Dourton, that went before) derived their surname from their habitation or seat, named Hamden, in Aylesbury hundred. They are said to have been settled there before the conquest; and are undoubtedly one of the oldest families in the county of Bucks. and what is something extraordinary, they are still possessors of their seat and estate, where there is a gate remarkable for its ancient structure still standing entire.

Our benefactor Reginald, the son of Alexander, might possibly be the father of Alexander de Hammeden, who, for three years, viz. the 34th to 37th of Henry the Third, was high sheriff of the then conjoined counties of Bedford and Buckingham<sup>k</sup>; and again for four years, from the 43d to the 47th; and then for five years following, together with Simon de Pateshill; which family was seated at Accestane, saith Dr. Fuller; which possibly might be intended for the present Ashenden, the hundred town, hard by Chilton, and not far distant from Hamden.

To proceed to the memoirs of the family. In the 31st, 32d, 33d, and 35th of Edward the Third, i. e. anno 1357, 1358, 1359, 1361, John de Hampden was sheriff of Bedfordshire and Bucks.<sup>l</sup> as in the 26th and 37th of that reign he was one of the representatives of the county of Bucks. in the parliament then held at Westminster<sup>m</sup>. In the 14th and 19th of Richard the Second, 1391, 1396, we find Edmund Hampden (of Hamden, saith my author) supplying the office of high sheriff<sup>n</sup>, as the same name appears in the rolls of the 2d and 6th of Henry the Fourth, as also in the 2d of Henry the Fifth. Edmund Hampden was also knight of the shire for Bucks. in the Parliament of the 1st, 3d, and 4th of Henry the Fourth<sup>o</sup>. I find also, that in 1403, 4. Henry IV. Sir Gerard Braybroke, knight, Edmund Hampden, and John Boys, esquires, gave their manor of Losthale, in the county of Essex, to a priest perpetually celebrating at the chantry in the chapel of the bishop's palace, by St. Paul's, London, and to his successors<sup>p</sup>, to the intent that they should pray for the good estate of the said founders, as also of Robert Braybroke, then bishop of London, and for the health of his soul after his departure hence. And moreover, for the souls of John Grandison, sometime bishop of Exeter; Nicholas Braybroke, canon of St. Paul's, and all Christian souls.

This our Edmund Hampden might be father to John Hampden, of Hamden, who represented the county in Parliament in the 8th of Henry the Fifth, and in the 6th and 9th of Henry the Sixth<sup>q</sup>; and who, in the 13th, 17th, 29th, 35th of Henry the Sixth, A. D. 1435, 1439, 1451, 1457, served the honourable and important trust of sheriff of this county<sup>r</sup>. It is observable in this reign, that this family was spread out into three distinct and considerable branches; for upon a return made of the gentry of this county<sup>s</sup>, there were so many of this name and family returned; viz. John Hampden, of Hamden, esquire; John Hampden, of Kimbel; and John Hampden, of Wycombe; West Wycombe, (I suppose,) which was also anciently called Haveringdon<sup>t</sup>.

This John Hampden, of Hamden, either died or was superannuated before the 7th of Edward the Fourth; for that year his son Thomas Hampden, of Hamden, supplied the office of sheriff<sup>u</sup>; as he did also in the 22d of that reign. This same year, viz. 1482, he made his last will; in which he styles himself Thomas Hampden, esq. son of John Hampden; and by it, it appears that he had manors and lands in the counties of Bucks. Oxon. Bedford, Northampton, Huntingdon, and Essex; that his wife's name was Margery, who was to have dower. His children were, six sons; John the eldest, (then married, whose wife was Elizabeth<sup>x</sup>,) Edmund, Edward, Francis, Alisander, and Henry; and four daughters, Alice, Kate-ryne, Jane, and Alianor. He then held the manor of Theydon in the Mount, in Essex, (since purchased by Sir Thomas Smith, secretary of state to queen Elizabeth, who lieth buried in the church there, where he built a noble seat called Hill Hall, still possessed by the knightly family of the Smiths, the descendants of Sir Thomas, the present owner being Sir Edward Smith, baronet, who married a daughter of Sir Charles Hedges, secretary of state to queen Anne,) and held in Bucks. the manors of Hamden, Bledlow, Chilton, and Easington, Upton Wales, and Waleroy.

I suppose he lived some time after making this will; for I find, that A. D. 1483, amongst others, our Thomas Hampden, of Hamden, was summoned to receive the honour of knighthood on the 22d day of June that year<sup>y</sup>, being the day intended for the coronation of king Edward the Fifth, but which was never effected. When he died I have not found; but his second son Edmund was esquire of the body to king Henry the Seventh, and steward of the university of Oxford from 1487 to 1491<sup>z</sup>. As for his eldest son, John, he succeeded his father, and was knighted; and A. D. 1519, 10. Hen. VIII. by the name of John Hampden of the Hill, (i. e. of Hamden, highly situated in the comparison of Kimbel, lying in the vale,) was appointed one of the knights to attend on Katherine the queen of Henry the Eighth, at the intended interview of that king with Francis the First, king of France<sup>a</sup>; which interview was made with great pomp and solemnity near Guisnes, in June 1520<sup>b</sup>. In the 20th of Henry the Eighth, Sir John Hampden, knight, was sheriff of this county, and of Bedford annexed<sup>c</sup>; as was Griffith Hampden high sheriff of Bucks. in 18. Elizabeth; and Alexander Hampden in the 33d of that reign<sup>d</sup>. The said Griffin, or Griffith, was also member of parliament for the county of Buckingham in the 27th of Elizabeth; and Alexander Hamden, esq. in the 43d of that reign, having for his colleague Francis Fortescue, esq.<sup>e</sup> larly John Hampden, esq. who, in the reign of king Charles the First opposed the levying of ship-money without the authority of parliament; and was supported in it by Sir George Croke, a native of our Chilton<sup>f</sup>. Mr. Hampden had a seat at Pirton, near Watlington, com. Oxon. and was one of the commissioners of array that reviewed the Oxfordshire militia in Chalgrove-field, before the commencement of the war. And in the same field<sup>g</sup>, in 1643, being a colonel of foot, he was mortally wounded by a party of royalists, headed by prince Rupert, from the king's garrison at Oxford<sup>h</sup>. He was a volunteer in this action; and receiving a musket shot in the shoulder, he retreated out of the field, and died a few days after at Thame; where he was attended by Mr. Delafield, surgeon to the garrison there, living afterwards at Aylesbury, and ancestor to the compiler of these memoirs.—The arms of this Hamden were, argent, a saltire, gules, between four eagles displayed azure: crest, a talbot ermine, collared gules.

Greinvill, or Grenville.

This is also a family that had relation to our parish of Chilton. For, by the fore-recited authority<sup>i</sup>, it appears that William de Greinvill, son and heir of Gerard de Greinvill, and Henry, son to William, granted to the convent of Nutley lands at Chilton. This was (if I mistake not) in the reign of Henry the Second. This grant (I presume) was confirmed by Eustache de Greinvill; who also, for the soul of king Henry the Third, and for his father's and mother's souls, and Gerard de Greinvill's, confirmed to the said abbey of Nutley the grant, of Walter Giffard earl of Buckingham, of our parish church of Chilton.

This is another family of good continuance, even now subsisting in a flourishing condition in the neighbourhood of this place. The head of the family being Richard Grenville of Wotton, esquire, in this present parliament, (1746,) representative of the county of Bucks. eldest son of Richard Grenville of Wotton, aforesaid, by Mrs. Hester Temple, sister to Richard lord Cobham, of Stow, near Buckingham, eminent for the grandeur and magnificence of its gardens.

Of the ancient race of these Greinvills I know nothing; except that in 12. Henry VI. 1433, amongst the gentry of Bucks. then returned by William Grey, bishop of Lincoln, Sir Reginald de Grey, of Ruther, knight, Thomas Sackville, knight, and William Wapland, commissioners, for that purpose appointed, is Eustachius Grenville<sup>k</sup>.

Of the Family of Zouche, Lord Zouche, of Harringworth, Possessors of Chilton.

This family (I presume) stands misplaced; for it ought to have come in amongst the Hampdens, as by the order of time will appear. And one of them particularly preceded Thomas Hampden, esquire, whose will I have taken some notice of. But I chose rather to bestow a distinct chapter on the family, than to interrupt the procedure of the work by inserting it with that of another.

What I find of it, (on which I ground my claim,) is, that in the 8th year of the reign of king Edward the Fourth, anno 1468, William lord Zouch, of Harringworth, in Northamptonshire, who then died, besides other considerable possessions, was then seised of the manors of Lavenden, Weston, Underwode, Chilton, and Hames, in com. Bucks.<sup>l</sup>

But to begin, and bring down an account of the family. Of the family of Zouche (which some interpret de Aridi Stirpe) the first that I have met with is Roger de Zouch, (Zucha,) who was one of the barons that swore to obey the twenty-five barons appointed to settle the realm, and order it, anno Domini 1215, the 15th of the reign of king John<sup>m</sup>.

The next that occurs is Alan le Zouche, (or Zuche,) who was descended from Alan, viscount of Rohan, in Little Britain, and Constantia his wife, daughter of Conan le Grosse earl of Britain, and Maud his wife, the natural daughter of king Henry the First<sup>n</sup>. Mr. Brooke calls this lady Mabel, and saith she bore, to Conan, Howel a son, and two daughters, Bertha and Constance<sup>o</sup>. This Conan le Grosse bore ermin on his shield; from whence the Zouches might assume the canton ermine in their coat, in remembrance of such their honourable descent.

As for Alan, I find that in 34. Hen. III. 1250, he was constituted justiciary of the king, that is, chief justice of the Common Pleas, with very large and full powers<sup>p</sup>. And the next year he was made governor of that part of Wales that bordered on Cheshire, in the room of John de Grey, which he farmed of the king at one thousand six hundred marks<sup>q</sup>. In 1255, he was appointed and came justiciary into Ireland<sup>r</sup>. He was also in 46. Hen. III. 1262, appointed, by patent, one of the itinerant judges for Huntingdon, Bucks. and Northamptonshire<sup>s</sup>. In 1267, he was custos of London, and a baron of the realm<sup>t</sup>. And A. D. 1272, he was one of one hundred worthy patriots<sup>u</sup> that withstood the papal usurpation.

These marks of confidence and trust shew him to have been an active and considerable man in his day. However, he came to a sudden and fatal end, being slain in Westminster Hall, as he was sitting in judgment on the bench, by John Plantagenet earl of Sussex, Surrey, and Warren<sup>x</sup>, who, being called upon to shew by what title he held his land, drew an old rusty sword, and answered, By this did my ancestors gain my lands, and by this will I keep them. Upon which Alan Zouche, lord chief justice, replied<sup>y</sup>, If he could give no better reason, judgment must proceed against him: whereat the earl being provoked grievously wounded him, so that he died soon after.

The account that Mr. Camden gives of this matter is, that Alan Zouch having commenced a suit against the earl of Warren, the earl choosing rather to determine the matter by the sword, than by the law, the judge was killed by him in the King's Hall, at Westminster, A. D. 1279<sup>z</sup>. The Winchester annals place it under the year 1270<sup>a</sup>.

He was possessor of Ashby (from him still retaining the title of De la Zouch) in Leicestershire, and bore for his arms, gules, ten besants, 4. 3. 2. 1.<sup>b</sup>

What children this Alan left, I know not; but his younger son, the founder of the distinguished family at Harringworth, was Eudo, (or Ivo<sup>c</sup>,) by his wife Hellen, the second daughter of Roger de Quincy earl of Winchester<sup>d</sup>, by Hellen his first wife, daughter and heir of Alan lord of Galloway, in Scotland, who was buried at Brackley, com. Northampton<sup>e</sup>. This Roger de Quincy, (by the way,) in the 42d of king Henry the Third, A. D. 1258, gave to the monks of Tame all his demesne lands in Sydenham, and likewise what was held of him in villenage, with the tenants thereto, and all their offspring.

Eudo (or Ivo) le Zouche, in the reign of Edward the First, married Mellisent, the eldest daughter and coheir of William Cantlow, or de Cantilupo, lord of Abergavenny, and of Harringworth, in Northamptonshire, (or as some accounts say, sister of George de Cantilupo,) who, upon the division of that great inheritance, had Harringworth with her, as he had also Totnes, in Devonshire<sup>f</sup>. This lady, after his death, took to her second husband John de Monthault, (de monte alto,) seneschal of Chester.

By this match Eudo de la Zouch had also Stanstede manor, in Kent; whose descendant, Thomas la Zouch, in the 6th year of Henry the Fourth, died possessed of it; as did his son Henry lord Zouch, in the 26th of Henry the Sixth<sup>b</sup>.

Eudo de la Zouch died the 2d of Edward I. 1274; and by Milliscent de Cantilupe had a son named William, who seated himself at Haringworth; and by the favour of Edward the First had a charter of free warren there granted him<sup>i</sup>; and was made a knight by bathing with prince Edward<sup>k</sup>, afterwards king Edward the Third, in the third of whose reign he was clerk and overseer of the wardrobe.

This William, son to Eudo, had to wife Maud, daughter of Sir John Lovel, by Isabel, sister and heir of William de (Bosco) Bois. This William founded a chantry in his chapel of St. Mary the Virgin, in his manor of Weston, in com. Warwick, for a priest to sing mass daily for his own and living friends' good estate, and for the souls of his deceased ancestors; particularly Sir Eudo la Zouche and Milliscent, his father and mother, and Maud his late consort. This he did about five years before his death<sup>l</sup>.

He died the 10th of March, the 26th of Edward the Third, 1352<sup>m</sup>, having accompanied king Edward the Third in divers expeditions into Scotland and France; and had a son, Eudo la Zouche the second, who married Joan, (or Isolda,) daughter of William de Juge, (one of the judges 29. Edw. I. and 8. Edw. II.<sup>n</sup>) and with her had the manor of Ightham, in Kent<sup>o</sup>, which continued in the family till about the beginning of king Henry the Seventh, and then was sold to Sir Robert Rede, afterward lord chief justice of the Common Pleas, and (as I suppose) lord of Borstal.

This Eudo died in his father's lifetime; but left by Joan de Juge a son, William le Zouche, (whose wife was named Elizabeth,) and was thirty years of age at the death of his grandfather. This William lord Zouche, just before his death, had designed to found a monastery of Carthusian monks at Shortley, near Coventry, in Warwickshire<sup>a</sup>; but being prevented by death, he ordered that sixty pounds per annum might be settled for that purpose. He accompanied king Edward the Third in divers expeditions into Scotland and France, and held a manor in Docketing, (a small parochial village,) in Norfolk, called Zouche's manor, which came down to his descendant, continuing in the family for some generations; till at length, for failure of heirs male, it came to the female heirs of Sir John Zouche, of Codnovre, in Derbyshire, in the reign of king James the First<sup>r</sup>. He purchased, of the heir of John lord Cobham, High Halslow in Kent<sup>s</sup>, and died possessed of it, and a great many valuable manors beside, in the 5th of the reign of king Richard II. 1382.

His heir was another William de la Zouche the third, (who was styled William de la Zouche, et de Seymour, de Totnes, et de Haryngworth,) and was thirty years of age at his father's death<sup>t</sup>. In 14. Ric. II. he was found, by inquisition, to be owner of the manor of Gresley, com. Nottingham, being descended from Milliscent de Cantilupo. In the reign of Henry the Fourth, he purchased the manor of Shawsted, in Alkham parish, in Kent, of the family of Delapole<sup>u</sup>. And about the 10th of that reign he married Alice, sole daughter of Richard St. Maur, of Rood, in Somersetshire, which he held with her in marriage; and from thence contracted the title of lord St. Maur<sup>x</sup>; and in his posterity Rood continued, till by heirs general it went into other families. By her, amongst other issue, he had a daughter, Margaret, married to Sir Thomas Tresham, comptroller of the household to king Henry the Sixth<sup>y</sup>.

A. D. 1413, 1. Henry V. he was one of the ambassadors commissioned to treat with the French<sup>z</sup>; and in the third of that reign, 1415, he departed this life; leaving for his heir William la Zouch the fourth, who was thirteen years of age at his father's death. This is the William lord Zouche whom we are concerned in, that at his death was possessed of our manor of Chilton.

In the year 1418, 6th of Henry V. amongst the rest of the English nobles, who on August the 22d that year attended the king at the siege of Roan, was the Sieur de Zouche<sup>a</sup>, who then bore for his arms, gules, besantee, and a canton ermine. And about four years after, viz. anno 1422, in the funeral procession for bringing the dead body of king Henry the Fifth out of France into England, this our lord Souche (or Zouche) was one of the four nobles that bore the banner of the saints<sup>b</sup>.

This William le Zouch, of Haryngworth, married one of the daughters and coheirs of Henry lord Grey, of Codnore, in Derbyshire, and had with her in marriage, besides other considerable lands, the manor of Hoo, in Kent<sup>c</sup>; which being forfeited by his son, was given to Sir Henry Wyat, grandfather of Sir Thomas, attainted in the second of queen Mary.

By this lady he had a daughter named Margaret, who was married to William Catesby, of Lapworth, in Warwickshire, esquire, the great confident of king Richard the Third<sup>d</sup>; in defence of whose cause he fought bravely at Bosworth Field; and being there made prisoner, he was three days after executed at Leicester<sup>e</sup>. From which match came George Catesby, esquire, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Richard Empson, one of the great projectors of king Henry the Seventh.

Dying at length, 1468, possessed of our manor of Chilton, and other very large estates in several parts of England, he left them to his son John lord Zouch, who was but eight years old at his father's decease. This John lord Zouch growing up, became one of the principal adherents to king Richard the Third; and as such, amongst the rest of the ministers, privadoes, and favourites of that prince, who had been either killed at Bosworth, or executed after the battle, was attainted in parliament, on November the 7th, the first of the reign of king Henry the Seventh, A. D. 1485, being about twenty-five years of age.

His son and heir, John Zouche, was restored in honour and blood, and to his mother's estate; and occurs in the 23d Hen. VII. 1508. He married Dorothy, daughter of Sir William Capel, knight, (who in the 18th of Henry VII. was lord mayor of London,) by Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Arundel, knight<sup>f</sup>.

His heir was Richard lord Zouch; and his, George lord Zouch, who arrived at full age the 6th of Edward the Sixth, 1552, and died the 19th of June, in the 19th of the reign of Elizabeth, 1577, being about 46 years of age.

His son and heir was Edward lord Zouch, just come of age before the death of his father. In 1580, he accompanied Arthur lord Grey, lieutenant of Ireland, into that kingdom, and there performed good military service<sup>g</sup>; and anno 1594. he was sent ambassador to the king of Scotland, to obviate the intrigues of the Jesuits and Romish priests<sup>h</sup>. This gentleman, in the 40th of Elizabeth, 1598, was sent by the queen, (together with Christopher Perkins, doctor of laws<sup>i</sup>;) as ambassador, to congratulate Christian king of Denmark, brother of Anne, the queen of king James the First, on his marriage with the daughter of the marquis of Brandenburg<sup>k</sup>; who departing from Lees, in Essex, on June the 10th, sailed to Denmark, executed his commission, and returned to her majesty's presence the first day of August following.

This Edward lord Zouch and Edward Herbert earl of Worcester, having been formerly pupils to Dr. John Whitgift, archbishop of Canterbury, on March the 27th, 1604, carried his banner at his funeral, at Croydon, in Surrey<sup>l</sup>. Also, upon the death of Henry Herbert earl of Pembroke, he was by king James the First appointed to succeed him as president of the council of the marches of Wales<sup>m</sup>. And in the reign of the same king, A. D. 1614, I find, that Edward lord Harringworth was made lord warden of the Cinque Ports in the room of Henry Howard earl of Northampton<sup>n</sup>.

This nobleman became a great spendthrift, and dissipated the fair inheritance and patrimony of his fathers, after it had continued in the name and family, with great reputation, for many generations. Though, as for our manor of Chilton, it had long before (though I know not at what time, and in what manner) passed into other hands.

The Zouches had a city house in London, in the high-street of Cornhill<sup>o</sup>; and many large and considerable inheritances in the country; as Brackley, in Northamptonshire, which passed from them to the Hollands and the Lovels; (at this place the Zouches founded a college<sup>p</sup>;) the castle and lordship of Codnore, in Derbyshire, of which I meet with the following account; viz. Henry lord Grey of Codnor, who studied chemistry much, and obtained a licence to practise the transmutation of metals by his philosophical skill, but without any effect that we know of, died without heirs, and left his estate to his aunt Elizabeth, then married to Sir John Zouch<sup>q</sup>; Totness, in Devonshire, which, upon the attainder of John lord Zouche, was given to Peter Edgecombe, esq.<sup>r</sup> They had also Ship-ton, or Shypton, in Oxfordshire, which came afterwards to the Hollands, and also Sifford, or Shifford, in that same county<sup>s</sup>.

But Haringworth became their dignified seat. It remained in the family in Camden's days: but since that it hath been sold to a gentleman (Mr. Tryon) that hath an estate at Bulwick, hard by, and the seat pulled down, only a chapel, in which the family were buried, and the monuments therein, being reserved to the Zouches<sup>t</sup>. But through neglect even this chapel hath since been almost quite ruinated, the roof being fallen in, some of the walls down, and the floor rooted up by hogs<sup>u</sup>; the dire effects of ill-fated extravagance! not only to run through fair and long settled patrimonies, but to expose consecrated places to desecration, and the ashes of ancestors to be disturbed and outed out of their graves by the most filthy of four-footed beasts. Abominable desolation!

But to reckon up some other particular persons of the family. In 1229, 13. Hen. III. Robert Zouche was high sheriff of Devonshire<sup>x</sup>. And in 1321, 14. Edward II. Almarick de Zouche was high sheriff of Cambridgeshire and Huntingdonshire for five years, to the end of that reign<sup>y</sup>. In the 4th of Edward the Third, Nicholas de la Zouche was clerk of the wardrobe<sup>z</sup>. In 1408, 9. Henry IV. John la Zouche, a friar minor and S. T. P. was consecrated bishop of Landaff about the beginning of August<sup>a</sup>. He built the episcopal palace at Matherne, near Chepstow; in several places of which his arms were fixed, that shewed him to have been of the family of the lord Zouches<sup>b</sup>. Anno 1439, dame Joan, wife of Sir John Zouche, died, and was buried in the parish church of St. Olaves, Hart-street, London<sup>c</sup>. A. D. 1539, Elizabeth Souche, or Zouche, lady abbess of the monastery of Shaftsbury, com. Dorset, surrendered that convent, and obtained a pension of 133<sup>l</sup>. 6<sup>s</sup>. 8<sup>d</sup>. which she was possessed of in the year 1553<sup>d</sup>; and A. D. 1563, John Zouche, one of the officers of the English troops, died of the plague at the siege of Havre de Grace, (Franciscopolis,) in France<sup>e</sup>.

But the most memorable person of this name and family was an eminent clergyman, whose merit raised him to one of the most exalted stations in the church, viz. William de la Zouche, or Souche<sup>f</sup>. This gentleman was admitted dean of York, in the room of William de Colby, anno 1333, the 6th of Edward the Third<sup>g</sup>; and on March 14, in the 11th of that reign, he was constituted treasurer of the Exchequer<sup>h</sup>; and by the style of dean of the church of the Blessed Mary of York, treasurer to the king, he was summoned with the king's judges, serjeants at law, and officers of state, to the parliaments of the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th years of king Edward the Third<sup>i</sup>; and on April 9, 1340, he was collated to the prebend of Ulveton, in the church of Lichfield, in the room of John de Leicester deceased<sup>k</sup>; and the same year, on May 2, he succeeded by election to William de Melton in the see of York<sup>l</sup>. He had a competitor for the chair, viz. one William Killesby, who contested the validity of his election; but after two years' dispute, it was determined by the pope (Clement VI.) in favour of Zouche, who was consecrated by him at Avignon, on July 7, 1342. This prelate, in 1346, being left by king Edward the Third warden of the north parts, whilst himself was pursuing his wars in France<sup>n</sup>, upon an inroad made by the Scots, with a brave army, headed by their king, had the good fortune to defeat them at Bewre Park, or Nevils Cross, near Durham, and to take their king, David Bruce, prisoner<sup>o</sup>. This action, in which the archbishop commanded the second corps of the English army, was on the vigil of St. Luke, the same year in which was fought the famous battle of Cressy, in France. And besides their king, the Scots lost prisoners, the famous William Douglas, and the earls of Fife, Menteth, and Wygynton<sup>p</sup>. He was a benefactor to the buildings of the cathedral of York, being the founder of a new chapel on the south side of the church, which is now the vestry<sup>q</sup>. He died on July 19th, 1352<sup>r</sup>, and was buried in his cathedral, to which he bequeathed 500*l.* sterling towards erecting a chantry of two priests to pray for his soul<sup>s</sup>. His arms were gules, fourteen bezants or, a canton ermine<sup>t</sup>.

pose the family to have been originally of French extraction. For Zouche (in their tongue) signifies the stock of a dry tree; which Mr. Camden collects from the before-mentioned archbishop, who is so called in this verse for his valour shewn in the battle against the Scots at Bear Park, 1342*.

Est pater invictus sicco de stipite dictus, &c.

The family seems also to have been remarkable for their hospitality, agreeable to the greatness of their estate, as is manifest from an expression still frequent in several parts of England, of persons that go unbidden to any house for a meal, viz. to go a Zouching.

The general arms of the lords Zouche were, gules, 10 bezants, 4. 3. 2. 1. with a canton ermine; which, with several quarterings, may be seen in Dugdale's Origines Juridiciales†, as they were set up in Grey's Inn Hall.

Of the Family of Croke, Possessors of Chilton.

The next that I find owners of Chilton was the family of Croke; a succession and set of gentlemen of good distinction, and many of them (scarce more in any one family, in such a compass of time, to be met with) an ornament to the long robe.

They are said to have been descended from a family of equal antiquity and honour, viz. le Blunt. One of which, in the various struggles for the crown that were exercised for many years between the two families of York and Lancaster, espoused the interest of the latter, which cause he both favoured and assisted; and therefore, upon the Yorkists' gaining the superiority, to shroud himself more effectually from observation, he assumed the name of Croke‡; and the family for some time went under that borrowed denomination<sup>a</sup>.

At last, under king Henry the Seventh, the two contending parties being united, or at least their favourite Lancastrian family being seated on the throne<sup>b</sup>, this Blunt threw off his disguise, and resuming his real original name, wrote himself Croke, alias Blunt.

Who his wife was does not appear; but he had a son named John<sup>c</sup>, who was bred up to the study of the laws; and being one of the six clerks in Chancery<sup>d</sup>, was restrained from marriage, till the statute of the 14th of king Henry the Eighth, which took away that restriction, and left him to his liberty. He was much in the graces of that prince, by whom he was made one of the masters in Chancery; and in the 1st of Edward Sixth he was created a serjeant at law<sup>e</sup>; and afterwards matching with one of the daughters of Sir Ambrose Cave, of Leicestershire, (whose arms were azure, fretty argent, and himself high sheriff of Leicester and Warwickshire, in the 2d of king Edward the Sixth<sup>f</sup>;) he had by her a son of his own name. He lies buried (with a long train of his descendants) in a family chapel on the south side of the chancel of Chilton Church, under a marble stone, on which are the following inscriptions cut on brass plates fixed therein.

His son, John Croke, esq. was chosen knight of the shire for the county of Bucks. in the parliament that met at Westminster the 14th of Elizabeth<sup>h</sup>, having for his colleague Sir Hen. Lee, knight; and in anno Domini 1575, the 17th of the reign of queen Elizabeth, living then at Chilton, was the first sole sheriff of Bucks. divided from the county of Bedford<sup>i</sup>, and had Hampden of Hampden the next year for his successor. He received the honour of knighthood from queen Elizabeth; and married Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander Unton, esquire, (of the family at Wadley, near Farrington, in Berkshire<sup>k</sup>, who bore for arms, azure, on a fesse engrailed or, betwixt three spears' heads argent, a greyhound current sable, collared gules<sup>l</sup>;) by whom he had five sons, John, Henry, George, Paul, Ambrose, and William; and three daughters. He lived with his lady upward of fifty-five years; and died February 10, 1608, in the seventy-eighth year of his age, leaving behind him the character of being a gentleman of great modesty, charity, and piety. After his decease dame Elizabeth, his wife, built a very fine elegant and costly monument of white marble in honour of the family, in the aforesaid isle of the chancel, in the church of Chilton, inclosed with iron rails, and embellished with coats of arms, and a variety of other ornaments; and is in short a very comprehensive and entire family memorial. Upon the tomb, under an arch supported by two black marble pillars, lie Sir John and his lady in effigie. Over whom is this inscription:

Johannes Crocus eques clarissimus, una cum uxore Elizabetha, ex illustri Untoniorum familia, qui pariter suave Jugum Christi, unanimi in vera pietate consensu sustulerunt, vitam DEO consecrarunt, opera indigentibus exhibuerunt, exemplum posteris reliquerunt. In the front, on the jamb below, are the figures of their eight children, all kneeling, (exactly carved,) with three grand-children of a lesser size; the five sons being each in the dress and habit proper to their several stations and degrees in life. The first and third are in the garb of judges, having on scarlet robes and black coifs: the second and fourth in black gowns; the former welted down the sleeves, denoting him to be an usher barrister; and the other plain, as having been a reader: and the fifth, in the habit of an esquire, or gentleman who bears arms. Behind the first is the figure of an infant in swaddling clothes; and at the back of the fourth two boys. These figures could not all of them have been made by the direction of dame Elizabeth; for though both her eldest and third son were judges, yet the latter did not arrive at that dignity till long after the death of his mother. However, it is an extraordinary incident, and worthy of observation, to see two judges, a barrister, and reader of the law, to arise out of the stock of children of a private country gentleman. But so it fell out; a set of eminently worthy men, of approved capacity and integrity, raised a family (before not contemptible) into greater distinction, with a no small accession of fortunes and honours; and their posterity for some time sustained itself on their stock, till at last, by a contrary practice, the branch of it here sunk into poverty and obscurity. *Hanc (virtutem) retinete quæso, Quirites, quam vobis, tanquam hæreditatem, majores vestri reliquerunt. Sir John Croke, and lady Elizabeth Unton, lie both in the floor before the monument, covered with two marble gravestones conjoined, having a fillet of brass going round them, on which is the following inscription. “ Here lyeth buried Sir John Croke, knight, “ and the lady Elizabeth his wife, a daughter of Sir Alexander Unton, knight, who lyved married together fifty-five years nine “ monthes and . . . . days, for whome this tombe is made at the “ charge and direction of the said lady Elizabeth. The said Sir “ John Croke died the 10th day of February, in the yeare of our Lord “ 1608; and the said lady Elizabeth dyed the 24th day of June, in “ the year of our Lord 1611.” This Sir Alexander Unton, (by the way,) the father of lady Croke, was successor of Thomas Umpton, and held lands in the reign of Henry VIII. in the parish of Fingest, com. Bucks. as may be seen in the court rolls of that manor. He was made knight of the Bath at the coronation of king Edward VI.<sup>a</sup> and was succeeded by Sir Edward Umpton, who was also knighted at the coronation of queen Elizabeth; and was followed by Henry Umpton, who in 29. Elizabeth, 1587. was a free tenant of that manor; and on September 28. that year was knighted by the English governor before Zutphen in Holland<sup>o</sup>.

Having mentioned this monument, which is an elegant and curious piece of work of the taste of that age, I shall just give an account of the arms over against the several effigies placed in the jamb, in the front of the tomb.

1. Gules, a fesse between six martlets argent, Croke; impaling, or, three bars sable.

2. Gules, &c. on a fesse a crescent azure for difference of a second brother.

3. Gules, &c. a mullet for difference; impaling sable, a chevron between three eagles’ heads erased argent.

4. Gules, &c. a martlet sable for difference; impaling, gules, three demi-lions; in center, a ball argent.

5. Gules, &c. an annulet for difference; impaling, gules, a lion rampant argent, debruised by a bend azure; a chief chequy argent, and gules. Again, Croke impaling two piles wavy.

6. Croke with a fleur de lis for difference.

7. Croke with a rose for difference.

8. Croke with a quatrefoyle for difference; impaling azure, a chevron between three eagles' heads erased argent.

First daughter, sable, a stag's head, with a cross fitch between his horns, and an arrow in his mouth; impaling Croke; 2dly, gules, a chevron between three lions' paws erased argent on a chief sable . . . . . impaling, Croke.

Second daughter, on a bend cottised gules, three double wings; impaling, Croke.

Third daughter, argent two chevrons, azure; within a border, engrailed gules; Tirrel, empaling Croke.

The two statues of Sir John and his lady, though disposed in a recumbent posture, according to the gust of the age when the monument was erected, and therefore placed to great disadvantage as to the view, yet may be observed in such a quiet attitude to discover the ingenuity of the artist; and the figures below are well distinguished by their habits, and exhibit a good shew of the dress of those times; and especially those of the three daughters, which, besides, have all one family likeness, and yet each a distinct form and feature peculiar to itself.

Facies non omnibus una,

Nec diversa tamen, qualem decet esse sororum.

Sir John, the eldest son, inherited both his father's virtues and estate, and married the daughter of Sir Michael Blount; upon which marriage, the family is said wholly to have omitted the name of Blunt<sup>p</sup>: the first thing I find of him is, that in the 27th of Elizabeth he was burgess of New Windsor, Berks. in conjunction with Henry Nevill, esquire<sup>q</sup>, in the parliament then held at Westminster. Anno 38th of Elizabeth 1595, he was Lent reader of the Inner Temple, London<sup>r</sup>; and in the 40th of that reign treasurer of that society, having succeeded Edward Coke, esquire, afterwards Sir Edward<sup>s</sup>. In 1601, 43d of Elizabeth, he was speaker of the House of Commons; which Parliament met October 27, and was dissolved on December 19. following; and made an act for relief of the poor, and appointing overseers<sup>t</sup>. At the end of this parliament he received this eulogium from the queen, who knighted him<sup>u</sup>, “That he had proceeded therein with such wisdom and discretion, that none before him had deserved better.” Sir Michael Hicks, in some merry verses wrote by him, De Crepitu in Parlamento, brings him in thus:

“And said his message on his book<sup>x</sup>.”

At the end of this reign he was recorder of the city of London.

In February 1603, 1. Jac. I. John Croke and others were chosen to receive the degree of serjeant at law in Easter Term following<sup>y</sup>; and accordingly John Croke, miles, was created a serjeant at law on May the 29th next ensuing, and afterwards the king's serjeant at law. On June 25, 1607, 5. Jac. I. he was by patent constituted one of the judges of the King's Bench<sup>z</sup>; and, in honour of his receiving that preferment, his arms were set up in the north window of the Inner Temple hall<sup>a</sup>; viz. Croke quartering, or, a fesse nebuly gules charged with six bezants, between three annulets gules, with this inscription over head. “Johannes Crooke miles unus justic. domini regis de Banco”<sup>b</sup>. As they were also in the windows of the hall of Serjeants Inn, in Fleet-street, thus inscribed. “Joh. Croke justic. Banc. R.”<sup>c</sup>

The next year, viz. 1608, Sir John Croke, knight, together with Sir Thomas Fleming, chief justice of England, and Sir David Williams, gave sentence against the townsmen of Oxford, in the court of the King's Bench, in a dispute between the University and city for privilege of watch and ward<sup>d</sup>. In which cause, besides sitting as judge, he gave testimony that the privileges in dispute had been asserted and used by the University above thirty years before, to his remembrance, without the claim of the town.

He died on the 23d of January 1619, 17. Jac. I. at his house in Holborn, in the suburbs of London; from whence he was conveyed to Chilton, and there was gathered to his fathers. He had whilst living composed an epitaph for himself in Latin verse, which yet remains engraven on a brass plate fixed on a marble stone that covers him, viz.

He left a plentiful estate behind him, and several children to enjoy it; viz. five sons, John, Henry, Charles, Unton, and Edward; and one daughter, whose name was Rachel; and also a widow, named Katharine, his only wife I presume.

Of the four brothers of Sir John Croke, the judge, the three next were all bred to the law. Henry, the second, was a barrister; he dwelt in Oxfordshire, and had a son, Henry, who inherited the lordship of Waterstoke by the gift of his uncle Sir George Croke, the judge; which is all that I know of him.

George, the third brother, was born here, at Chilton, in the second year of queen Elizabeth, A. D. 1559. He was last finished in grammar learning at the free school of Thame; and at sixteen years of age removed to University College<sup>b</sup>, in Oxford, of which he became commoner in 1575; and from thence to the Inner Temple, London, of which he was autumnal reader anno 41st of Elizabeth; treasurer to that society in 1608, and in 1617 double reader for the Lent exercise<sup>i</sup>.

Anno 1622, on December 11, an instrument tripartite was signed between Sir John Sedley of Ayre'sford, in Kent, baronet, on the first part; George Croke, of Waterstoke, esquire, and Gregory Hirst, of the second; and the chancellor, masters, and scholars of the University of Oxford; by which some lands, of one hundred and twenty pounds yearly rent, lying in Waddesdon, in this neighbourhood, were settled in trustees for the natural philosophy lecture there<sup>k</sup>.

June 27, 1623, 21. Jac. I. he with nine others was called to the degree of serjeant; and on October 18, the same year, was made the king's serjeant<sup>l</sup>; and about that time had conferred on him the honour of knighthood. On February 11, following, he was admitted to be one of the judges of the Common Pleas<sup>m</sup>. In consideration of which advancement, his arms were set up (quartered as his brother John's) in the Inner Temple hall; and in that of Serjeants Inn, with a small variation in the bearing of Croke, viz. a mullet sable on the fesse, for the difference of a second brother.

In Hilary Term 1627, certain orders published to be observed in the houses of the courts of law, were subscribed by our Sir George Croke, amongst the rest of the judges<sup>n</sup>; and on April 15, 1630, 6. Car. I. further orders were made by the lord keeper, the judges of both benches, and barons of the Exchequer, by the command of the king and council, for the government of the inns of court and chancery, which were also signed by this judge Croke with the rest<sup>o</sup>.

On October 9, 1628, 4. Car. I. upon the death of Sir John Dodderidge, he succeeded him as judge of the King's Bench<sup>n</sup>. In which high station he exerted his honour and integrity, though almost alone, in the case of Mr. Hamden his neighbour, relating to ship-money<sup>q</sup>. For he and Sir Richard Hutton were the only judges in the Star Chamber who refused to sign the case of ship-money in favour of king Charles the First; their opinions and arguments being for Mr. Hamden, who was sued for not paying the twenty shillings taxed on him for ship-money. This was about 1638; and in 1640 the House of Commons voted the assessment of ship-money, and the opinion of the judges for it, to be illegal, and ordered the arguments of Croke and Hutton, shewing the illegality thereof, to be printed.

This Sir George Croke purchased of Sir William Cave a handsome estate at Waterstoke, where he resided; and where, being very aged, he retired, and departed this life February 15, 1641-2, in the eighty-second year of his age. In the chancel of which church he lies buried, having a monument erected for him against the wall, on which is his effigies to the waist, in a judge's habit, with a book in the right hand, and the left leaning on a death's head, and this inscription below:

He seems to have been twice married<sup>s</sup>. First, to Jane, daughter of Sir Richard Onslow, knight, by Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of Arthur Strangeways, of the city of London, esquire; secondly, . . . . . daughter of Sir Thomas Bennet, knight, (who survived him several years, and was at last buried by him at Waterstoke :) he had a son named Thomas, who died without issue about a year before him, and three daughters. The eldest, Elizabeth, married to Thomas Lee, esquire, of Hartwell, and afterwards to Sir Richard Ingoldesby, knight of the Bath; the second, named Mary, to Sir Harbottle Grimstone, baronet, master of the rolls, to whom he bequeathed his study of books at Serjeants Inn; and the youngest to Richard Jarvais, esquire<sup>t</sup>.

Sir Harbottle Grimstone falling in love with judge Croke's daughter, the father would not bestow her on him, unless he would return to his studies, which he did with great success<sup>u</sup>.

His Reports and select cases in law, which have gone through several editions, (one especially by his son-in-law, Sir Harbottle Grimstone,) have made him famous amongst the gentlemen of the long robe, as well as shewn his capacity in the business of his profession; his religion and charity are as conspicuous in their fruits; viz. the chapel and almshouse that he built and founded at his manor of Stodley, near Beckley, in Oxfordshire; and another hospital and chapel by him liberally endowed at Bleachley, in Newport hundred,

com. Bucks. about two miles from the mother church<sup>x</sup>. In short, his character is thus justly drawn up by the Oxford historian: “Judicio acri, et memoria tenaci fruebatur, quibus addita singulari industria, amplissimam juris cognitionem maxime autem in ijs quæ ad causas agendas spectant, adeptus est: denique virtutibus intellectualibus morales adjunxit: fidem utique integerrimam, et munificentiam egregiam, cujus specimen haud vulgare edidit, cum noscomium pauperibus, et capellam, ad manerium suum de Stodeley secus Beckleiam in agro Oxoniensi extruxit, et liberaliter dotavit.”<sup>y</sup>

He was also a benefactor to the library of Sion College, in London, to which he gave one hundred pounds to buy books<sup>z</sup>; but the time I find not. I likewise meet with this note of him; viz. “Nov. 11, 1641, died Sir George Crooke, Judge of the King’s Bench; an old and eminent lawyer, whose Reports have been highly valued, and further esteemed for opposing the ship-money”<sup>a</sup>;” though in that great case, in his judgment for Mr. Hamden, he declared he was a dangerous person, and that men ought to take heed of him.

The fourth brother, viz. Paul Ambrose Croke, esq. was a student of the laws in the Inner Temple, London, (as had been his two brothers John and George before him,) where he was the Lent reader in 1607, the 6th of king James the First<sup>b</sup>. This gentleman purchased the lordships of Cotsmore and Barrow, in Rutlandshire; and having one only daughter and heir, married to Sir Edward Heath, knight of the Bath, (eldest son and heir of Sir Robert Heath, attorney-general, and lord chief justice of the King’s Bench,) left it to her as an inheritance<sup>c</sup>; but she had also only one daughter Margaret, her heir, who married Sir Thomas Fanshaw, knight, and had Susannah, her daughter and sole heir, who married Baptist Noel, esquire, second son of Baptist lord viscount Camden, and was mother of Baptist, who became earl of Gainsborough in 1690<sup>d</sup>. Of his wife I meet with this account; viz. “ Frances Croke, the loving and beloved wife “ of Paulus Ambrosius Croke, of the Inner Temple, esquire, was one “ of the daughters and heirs of Francis Wellesborne, esq. of Hanny, “ in the county of Berks. She deceased 10th July, A. D. 1605, aged “ twenty-two years.” She was buried in St. Katharine Cree-church, London, in the midst of the chancel; where, besides the account above, were some verses over her, that may be seen in Stow<sup>e</sup>. This Paul Ambrose Croke died in 1631, at his chambers in Hare’s court, in the Inner Temple<sup>f</sup>.

William, the youngest of the five brothers, was a modest and pious man, who addicted himself wholly to a country life, and settled at Chilton, where he died, and was buried December the 12th, 1642; as was his wife Dorothy, on February 13. following. She was the daughter of the celebrated Mrs. Honeywood, who had, at the time of her decease, three hundred and sixty-seven lawful descendants. Nati natorum et qui nascuntur ab illis. By this Dorothy Mr. William Croke had a son, Alexander, who by his uncle, Sir George, was made heir of his estate at Studley. Elizabeth, the daughter of Sir John Croke the first and dame Elizabeth Unton, married Sir John Tyrrel, eldest son of Sir Thomas Tyrrel of Heron Gate, in Essex, knight; and dying 16th February 1631, aged fifty-seven years, was laid in the burial place of the family, in Chilton church, as appears from a monument erected to her memory. This Sir John Tyrrel was descended from Thomas Tyrel of Heron, esquire, who bore for arms, argent, two chevrons azure, within a bordure engrailed gules<sup>g</sup>, the same as on the monument.

Now to return to the progeny of Sir John Croke the judge.

His eldest son, Sir John Croke the third, was knighted by king James the First before the death of the judge. He succeeded to the estate at Chilton, where he lived and died a country gentleman on the 10th of April 1640, in the fifty-fourth year of his age, and lies buried near his father under a marble stone, on which is an inscription to his memory, that lets us know, that his lady was Rachel daughter and heiress of Sir William Webb of Motcomb, in Dorsetshire, by whom he had three sons and one daughter. The arms of Webb, as born in an escutcheon of pretence, appear to have been . . . . . a cross between four falcons<sup>h</sup> . . . . . which, when blazoned, is the field gules; the charge, or; the crest of Croke is two swans' necks conjoined and linked.

Henry, the second son of Sir John the judge, was one of the executors of his father's will, as was Charles his brother<sup>i</sup>. He was created a knight; and 1617, 15. Jac. I. he was master of the pipe office, in the Exchequer. He married Mrs. Bridget Hawtree, second daughter and coheiress of Sir William Hawtree, of the parish of Ellesborough, knight, (by his wife Winifred, daughter of Ambrose Dormer of Ascot, in the parish of Great Milton, in Oxfordshire, esquire, by his wife Mrs. Jane Bury, eldest daughter and coheiress of James Bury, of Hampton Poyle, esq.) by the marriage of which Mrs. Bridget Hawtree, our Sir Henry in time became possessed of the fair estate of the Hawtrees, in the parish of Ellesborough, and died (if my account does not mislead me) in the year 1638.

Sir Henry Croke, knight, died (it may be presumed) at Checkers House, and lieth buried in Ellesborough church; and from a stone that covers him, may be collected, that he was clerk of the pipe office; and being born in 1588, died 1659, in the seventy-second year of his age. His colleague in the pipe-office was . . . . . Rouse, esquire.

The lady Bridget, daughter of Sir William Hawtrej, and wife of Sir Henry Croke, lieth in Ellesborough church, where, on a monument against the wall, on the south side, is her effigies, in the dress of the times, handsomely cut, in a cumbent posture, but lying on the left side, with more advantage to be viewed, than most of that time are, that are placed on their backs, with their hands lifted up in a form of praying.

This church of Ellesborough (by the way) is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, as Mr. Willis has it<sup>k</sup>.

His son, by Mrs. Bridget Hawtrey, was Sir Robert Croke, knight, clerk of the pipe office above twenty years; and twice member in parliament for Wendover. His lady was Mrs. Susannah Vanloor, daughter and heir of Sir Peter Vanloor, baronet, (created on October 3. 1628. 4. Car. I.) of Tylehurst, com. Berks.<sup>l</sup> by whom he had six sons and seven daughters. Sir Robert Croke died February 8. 1680, aged seventy-one years; and his lady, Susannah Vanloor, in 1685, aged sixty-nine; and were both buried at Ellesborough. The arms of Vanloor were, or, a round wreath, or chaplet of bays, or laurel proper, as appears on the grave-stone, or of woodbine, or honeysuckle, as in other accounts.

Robert Croke, esquire, first son of Sir Robert and the lady Susan, was in his father's lifetime clerk of the pipe office, or ingrossator rotulæ magnæ in curia scaccarij, as it is both in the patent and on the gravestone. He died July 30, 1671. in the thirty-fifth year of his age; and lieth buried with the rest of the family in Ellesborough church; where are achievements for them against the walls, and memorials on the stones below.

Here also lies buried his brother Henry Croke, esquire, who died in 1662, aged twenty years.

Be it further known of Sir Peter Vanlore, the grandfather of the two gentlemen last mentioned, that he was of the province of Utrecht by birth, a merchant of London by profession; and whose services three of our princes, viz. Elizabeth, James, and Charles, frequently employed. He died at above fourscore years old, on September 6, 1627. and was buried at Tilehurst, where he had his seat. In the church of which place is a fair and large monument erected for him, on which are lying his own and his lady's statue<sup>m</sup>.

Charles was a divine, being first educated at Thame school, and afterwards sent to Christ Church, in the University of Oxford; on which, on Jan. 20. 1625, he went out D. D. accumulator and compounder, having before took the degree of A. M. in 1611<sup>n</sup>. Anno 1613, on Jan. 14. he succeeded Mr. Ball, who had resigned, as professor of rhetoric in Gresham college°. In 1616. he was proctor of the University of Oxford<sup>p</sup>, together with Dr. Saunderson, afterwards the learned bishop of Lincoln<sup>q</sup>. The same year, in the month of June, he was presented to the rectory of Waterstoke by his uncle George Croke, esquire; which he resigned in October following<sup>r</sup>. In 1617, Sept. 5. he was elected Fellow of Eton College; and in 1619, resigned his professor's place at Gresham in favour of his kinsman, Henry Croke<sup>s</sup>. In 1621. he was presented to the rich living of Agmondesham, Bucks. by Edward Russel, earl of Bedford; and that year quitted his fellowship of Eton. After this he became chaplain to king Charles the First; and after his death retired to Ireland, where dying unmarried, on April 10. 1657, he was there buried.

Unton, the fourth son of Sir John, the judge, who took his name from the family of his grandmother, was a student of the law in the Inner Temple, London; and in the first of king Charles the First, (1625,) was one of the burgesses for Wallingford, Berks.<sup>t</sup> together with Sir Anthony Forester, knight; as he was also for the same place in the parliament called the fifteenth of that reign, having for colleague Edmund Dunch, esquire. This same year, viz. A. D. 1639, he was Lent reader to the society of the Inner Temple<sup>u</sup>; which year Sir Thomas Gardiner, recorder of the city of London, (who lived some time at Cuddesdon, near Oxford,) read the autumnal lecture. He was a counsellor at law, and had a seat at Merton, near Oxford<sup>x</sup>, where, in May 1646, his house was made use of by the commissioners for the king, and the parliament army, for the surrendry of Oxford<sup>y</sup>. He was also for some time deputy steward of the University of Oxford to Philip Herbert, earl of Montgomery and Pembroke<sup>z</sup>. On June 21, 1654, he was called to the bar, as one of Oliver's sergeants at law<sup>a</sup>; and in 1658, he, and Richard Croke, esquire, were returned, as members for the city of Oxford, in the parliament then called by Richard the protector<sup>b</sup>. When he married I find not, but he was father of Unton Croke, a captain in the parliament army, and a major of a regiment of horse; and of Charles, a writer<sup>c</sup>, noted by A. Wood. Unton Croke, the captain in the parliament army in 1649, was presented to the degree of LL. B. of the University of Oxford<sup>d</sup>. In March 1654-5, he, with a troop of horse, which he commanded, defeated the king's forces at Chard, a market town in Somersetshire, headed by colonels Penruddock, Groves, &c.<sup>e</sup> whom he afterwards took prisoners at South Molton, in Devonshire; and being delivered into the power of Oliver, for their unreasonable loyalty to the king, then in exile, they were put to death at Exeter<sup>f</sup>. In 1659, he, being colonel of a regiment of horse under the usurper, was residing at his house in Grandpoole, in the south suburb of Oxford<sup>g</sup>. After the Restoration he resided sometimes at Chadlington, near Ivinghoe, com. Bucks. sometimes in Oxford, or at the Wick, in the parish of Heddington, near Oxford, or else sometime in Devonshire, from whence he married his wife; shunned and abhorred (saith Wood) by gentlemen and royalists, wherever he abode. Whence this aversion chiefly arose, is said to have been his falsifying his word to Penruddock, who, when some houses in South Molton were forced by captain Croke's men, bravely, and with great resolution, maintained his quarters, till he had quarter promised and artieled; which Croke afterward, (as saith my author,) unworthily and basely denied<sup>h</sup>; and for this (saith another) he became infamous to the royalists, and all true generous hearts<sup>i</sup>.

Edward, the youngest son, I know nothing of, unless that he seems to have lived unmarried; and at length dying, lieth buried under a black marble, not far from the grand monument, on which is fixed a brass plate, where, under some English verses, is the following Latin inscription: “Hic jacet Edwardus Croke, qui obiit “quarto die Februarij 1626.” On a plate above are the arms of Croke, with an annulet for difference of a fifth son.

The eldest son of Sir John Croke the third, (who left three sons and one daughter surviving him,) was Sir John Croke, the fourth of both those names, and a knight in a direct succession: he married, in the lifetime of his father, a wife that soon after deceased, as is plain from this inscription on a stone in Chilton church; viz. “Jane “daughter of Moses Tryon of Harringworth, in Northamptonshire,
“the wife of John Croke, esquire, died in childbed 9th May,
“1636, ætat. 20. leaving a little newborn daughter behind.” Arms, on a chief crenelle three stars of six rays; though in Guillim and Moreton’s Northamptonshire, Tryon’s arms are a fesse embattled between six estoils<sup>k</sup>. This last Sir John Croke fell into an extravagance that proved detrimental to his estate, and set on foot a most unrighteous prosecution against the Rev. Mr. Robert Hawkins, vicar of Chilton, which most justly redounded to his infamy and dishonour. For this indictment for felony, for which Mr. Hawkins was tried, and after a full hearing honourably acquitted at Aylesbury assizes, (before Sir Mathew Hale, chief justice,) in March 1667-8, may be seen the printed trial at large. Who was Sir John’s second lady, I have not found; nor the time of his death, which happened at London; where, perhaps, he was buried; or if brought down to Chilton, I can find no memorial for him in the burying place of the family there.

His son and successor here was Sir Dodsworth Croke, knighted by king Charles the second, who lived to a great old age, miserably reduced at Chilton; and dying there was buried with his ancestors, having on a small square stone this short inscription over him; “Here lieth the body of Sir Dodsworth Croke, knight and bar.<sup>1</sup> knight, who died January the 16th, 1728, aged 84 years.”

Having brought this head branch of the family to its period at Chilton, we are to go back to other collateral branches, that were for some time possessed of Studley and Waterstoke, in the county of Oxford: and first, of Waterstoke.

Sir George Croke dying without heirs of his body, in 1641, left his estate at Waterstoke to his nephew Henry Croke, son of his brother Henry, who was the barrister at law. This Henry Croke, the son of Henry, was born in Oxfordshire about 1596, and entered of Christ Church College, in that University, on June 17, 1610, being fourteen years of age. Here he continued till he had taken the degrees in arts, and then removed to Brazen Nose College, of which he was a member in 1618. On Wednesday May 26, 1619, he was chosen rhetoric professor in Gresham College<sup>m</sup>, in the place of his kinsman Charles Croke, who had, it seems, resigned in his favour, he being then but twenty-three years old. This province he discharged eight years with great reputation and esteem; and on April 13, 1627, being then B. D. he resigned that post; and on July the 18th following, married Sarah, daughter of Mr. Henry Wilkinson, rector of Waddesdon Bucks.<sup>n</sup> (by his wife Sarah, daughter of Mr. Arthur Wake, Canon of Christ Church, and sister to the famous Sir Isaac Wake,) whose brother Edward Wilkinson succeeded Mr. Croke in the rhetoric chair of Gresham. Soon after this he was presented to the rectory of Waterstoke by his uncle Sir George, where he continued in easy circumstances, till the death of his uncle made him lord of the manor, as he had been before rector of the parish. About the year

1640, he took the degree of D. D.<sup>o</sup> and dying at Waterstoke on April 20, 1642, he was laid in the chancel without any memorial.

He left behind him four sons, George, John, Henry, and Samuel; of which, John (who was a courtier, and gentleman of the bedchamber to king Charles the Second) dying, was buried at Waterstoke Nov. 8, 1670; Henry was a linen-draper in the Haymarket, St. James's, Westminster; and of Samuel I find nothing.

George, who possessed the estate at Waterstoke, was created A. M. on February 27, 1651<sup>p</sup>, by virtue of a dispensation from Oliver Cromwell, the Chancellor of the University; as he had been before made Fellow of All Souls' College by the parliamentary visitors. Upon the Restoration he was knighted; and 1664, was high sheriff of Oxfordshire. Mr. Wood represents him as an unthrift, who run out of his estate; but an ingenious writer<sup>q</sup> (who hath taken a great deal of pains in adjusting an account of this family, and to whose labours I am much obliged) sets him out as a gentleman highly addicted to philosophical studies; as a lover of gardening, and particularly curious in exotic plants; and the first (after Mr. Laurence's account) that brought the plane-tree into England: which inclination recommended him to the favour of the Royal Society; of which, on February 8, 1676, he was chosen Fellow<sup>r</sup>: in the books of which learned body some curious letters of his are still preserved. His wife died about four years before him, himself departing Nov. 17, 1680, at the house of his brother Henry, in London, and was brought and laid at Waterstoke, without any memorial. He left only two daughters, Elizabeth and Sarah<sup>s</sup>, as heiresses to his estate; which was afterwards sold to Sir Henry Ashurst, baronet, one of the trustees appointed by the honourable Robert Boyle, esquire, for his perpetual lecture, founded in the cathedral church of St. Paul, London, to be preached yearly.

Sir Henry Ashurst being entitled of Ennington, (Emington,) in com. Oxon. knight, was created a baronet of England by patent dated July 21, 1688<sup>1</sup>.

This Sir Henry Ashurst (who, by the way, was a staunch puritan, and a friend to Mr. Baxter, who often abode with him at Waterstoke, and whom he personally supported, and stood by at his trial on May 30, 1685, before Sir George Jefferies, in Westminster Hall) bore for his arms; quarterly, (1.) gules, a cross charged with the arms of Ulster, between four fleurs de lis argent, Ashurst; (2.) azure, a lion rampant argent, crowned, or; (3.) argent, on a bend cottised gules, three torteauxes; a chief sable; (4.) as first, impaling sable, a cross engrailed argent, charged with five lions passant, sable, between four spread eagles of the second. Motto, Degeneranti genus opprobrium. Crest, on a torse gules and argent, a fox proper passant.

The heir of Sir Henry Ashurst was his son Sir Henry, who married one of the daughters of Sir Thomas Draper of Sunninghill, near Windsor. He was member of Parliament for the borough of New Windsor, in the county of Berks.; and dying at Bath, was buried at Waterstoke. But leaving no issue, his estate here devolved to his kinsman Thomas Ashurst, esquire, of Lancashire, who had married a niece of the late Sir Henry Ashurst, the daughter of his sister, the wife of Sir . . . . . Allen of . . . . . in Suffolk, baronet, by whom he hath several children. For a just character of the late Sir Henry Ashurst may be seen the dedication to the lady Ashurst of a sermon preached in Albury church, near Rycote, on June 18, 1727, by Dr. William Tilly, rector of Albury. Thomas Ashurst, esquire, (the heir of the last mentioned Sir Henry,) died at Waterstoke, and was succeeded by his son.

Studley, or Stodely, (for so it was heretofore written,) in the parish of Beckly, near Otmore, in Oxfordshire, was a nunnery of Benedictines dedicated to St. Mary, founded soon after the conquest by Thomas St. Walery, (de Sancto Walerico,) and patronized and enriched by their family. Bernard de St. Walery gave the nuns half a hide of land at Horton, which William his son confirmed<sup>u</sup>. Robert, lord of St. Walleries, gave them the church of Beckly anno Domini 1227; and Thomas de St. Walerie gave them a pension of three shillings a year at Beckly, A. D. 1252; also a load of wood weekly, an extraordinary provision for fuel, out of his woods at Horton. Richard king of the Romans, (second son of king John,) lord, I presume, of the soil, gave them the breadth of twelve feet of land all round their monastery<sup>x</sup>; and Geoffrey de Craucombe gave them his manor of Cracumb, with the advowson of the church<sup>y</sup>. In the reign of king Richard the Second, it appears to have been escheated to the crown, with the honour of Studley, upon which the king approved of the choice of Elizabeth Fremental for prioress thereof. At the suppression it was valued at 102<sup>l</sup>. 6<sup>s</sup>. 7<sup>d</sup>. in the gross; and in the clear at 82<sup>l</sup>. 4<sup>s</sup>. 4½<sup>d</sup>. as saith Mr. Stevens, in an old valuation published by him<sup>z</sup>, and was given by king Henry the Eighth to John Wyllames, afterwards lord Williams of Thame.

To whom it came next, I know not, but it was purchased by Sir George Croke, the judge, who had here a handsome seat; and where, in the year 1639, he erected and endowed an almshouse for four men and four women, (to be taken out of Chilton, Waterstoke, and Studley, as vacancies fall,) which is still kept up. For the better regulating of this well-designed charity, Sir George drew up a set of orders, dated in 1639, and signed by himself, and attested by three hands. But Sir George burying his only son, some little time before his own decease, (dying himself at Waterstoke, in 1641,) gave by will this estate at Studley to his nephew, Alexander Croke, son of his youngest brother William, by Mrs. Dorothy Honeywood, one of the daughters of Mrs. Mary Honeywood, wife of Robert Honeywood of Charinge, in Kent, esq.<sup>a</sup> who had, at her decease, lawfully descended from her 367 children, (more than one for each day in the year;) 16 of her own body, 114 grandchildren, 228 in the third generation<sup>b</sup>, (just the double of the grandchildren,) and 9 in the fourth; of whom 200 at one time dined with her; she died in 1620, in the ninety-third year of her age, and forty-fourth of her widowhood.<sup>c</sup> But this by the way.

This Alexander Croke, heir of Studley, had two wives; for both of whom there are memorials in the chancel of Chilton church. (1.) “Here lieth Anne Croke, the wife of Alexander Croke, esq. and daughter and heir of Richard Brasey of Thame, in the county of Oxford, gentleman, who died the 22d day of March, A. D. 1622, aged twenty-two years.” (2.) “Here lieth the body of Sarah Croke, second wife of Alexander Croke of Studley, in the county of Oxford, esq. and daughter of Richard Beke of Hadenham, in the county of Bucks. esq. she died in the sixty-seventh year of her age, anno Domini 1667.” The arms of Beke here are . . . two bends indented . . . on a chief . . . three annulets . . . And Alexander himself having lived six years after his last wife, died at Studley, and was buried in the chancel there, just by the communion table, with the following inscription on the stone that covers him. “Here lieth the body of Alexander Croke, esq. sometime of Chilton, and afterwards of Studley, in the county of Oxon, where he died in the seventy-eight year of his age, anno Domini 1673, being the son of William Croke, esq. and grandson of Sir John Croke, both of Chilton.” He was buried on October 24, 1672, (saith Wood<sup>d</sup>,) on which occasion Daniel Greenwood, A. M. rector of Steeple Aston, near Dedington, Oxfordshire, preached his funeral sermon from 2. Cor. vi. 7. 8. printed at Oxford 1680. 4to.

“April 12, 1680, by Mr. William More.” Albury parish register.)

His son was William Croke, esq. by his second wife Mrs. Sarah Beke. He seems to have been seated at Chilton, by this inscription on his gravestone in the chancel by the altar, viz. “William Croke, “esq. of Chilton, son of Alexander Croke, esq. by his second wife, “died October the 6th, 1702, aged seventy-seven years.” By Susannah, the daughter of Edward Fetiplace, esq. of Swinbrook, com. Oxon. he had six sons and five daughters. Susannah his wife died 17th May, 1712, aged eighty-six years. The arms of Fetiplace, there engraven, are . . . . . two chevrons . . . . .

This family of Fetiplace (by the way) hath been of long standing and good account in Berks. and Oxon. having had seats at Letcombe Regis, Childrey, and at Besils Lee, near Abingdon, afterwards the estate of Speaker Lenthall; as also, at Swincombe, near Watlington, and Swinbroke, near Burford, com. Oxon. It is said that the first of them came into England with William the Conqueror, to whom he was gentleman usher; and in the reign of king Henry the Sixth the family received a great addition of blood and honour, by marrying Beatrix, daughter of the king of Portugal; which match is mentioned, and allowed of in the pedigree of the kings of Portugal. The Fettiplace, that married the daughter of Portugal, was Thomas Fettiplace, esquire, of Childrey, in Berks. who was the father of James, the father of Richard, who married Friswide the heiress of Sir John Kentwood, knight; and by her was father of William, who was father of Nicholas Fetiplace, whose daughter and heir, Anne, was married to Edmund Dunch, esq. who died in 1627, in the seventy-first year of her age; and lieth buried in Little Wittenham church, Berks. where, against the north wall, is a fair monument erected to her memory; from the inscription on which, this part of the account is taken<sup>c</sup>. In the reign of Henry the Sixth, anno 14th, Thomas Fetiplace, of Childrey, was sheriff of Berks. and Oxon. and in the 20th, Peter Fetiplace; as in 13. Hen. VII. was Anthony Fetiplace; and in 15. Hen. VIII. John Fetiplace<sup>f</sup>; and in 10. Elizabeth, John Fetiplace was sheriff of Berks. alone, and in 19; as was Besil Fetiplace, esq. in the 26th<sup>g</sup>; who took his name from the Besiles, who lived in great regard at Besiles Lee, (locus, or seat of the Besiles,) till Elizabeth, daughter and heir of William Besile, last of that name, was married unto Richard Fetiplace, whose great great grandchild was named Besile, to continue the remembrance of their female ancestor. In the manor house of Childrey were several coats of arms and memorials of the family, and some monuments of them in the church. In the 1st, 3d, and 15th Car. I. John Fetiplace, esq. was one of the representatives of the county of Berks. in the parliament then held<sup>h</sup>. This gentleman became afterwards a colonel in the parliament army; and in 1642, made Cirencester, in com. Gloucester, a garrison for the cause, and became the governor there; but it was taken by prince Rupert on the first approach<sup>i</sup>. On March 30, 1661, John Fetiplace of Childrey, in Berks. esq. was created a baronet of England<sup>k</sup>. Descended from, or related to him, (I presume,) was Edward Fetiplace of Swinbroke, com. Oxon. esq. from whom was descended Sir John Fetiplace, of Swinbroke, baronet, who, by his first lady, Anne, daughter of Sir Francis Wenman, of Carswell, in Oxfordshire, had four sons, who all succeeded to the honour of baronets in order, and all died unmarried; viz. Sir Edmund, Sir Charles, Sir Lorenzo, and Sir George; which last died at London on Wednesday, in Easter week, April 6, 1743, (much about the time of the death of Sir John Aubrey of Borstal,) and left the estate to be divided between two nephews, the sons of two sisters; viz. John Lacy, esq. of Pudlicot, soon after sheriff of Oxfordshire; and . . . . . Bushel, esq. But Mr. Lacy dying without issue on October 22, 1746, the whole Fetiplace estate fell to Mr. Bushel, who, in 1747. assumed, by act of Parliament, the name of Fetiplace, and resides at the ancient seat of Swinbroke.

But to return from this digression to the family of Croke, possessors of Studley.

William Croke, last mentioned, had two sons, William and Alexander, and a daughter, Sarah. William Croke, gentleman, the eldest son, died the 19th January, 1705, and lies buried at Chilton. Alexander was born 1657, and bred a divine; and being at Wadham College, Oxford, on June 6, 1681. commenced A. M.<sup>1</sup> At length he became rector of Hartwell, in the hundred of Aylesbury and deanery of Wendover, under the patronage of Sir Thomas Lee, bart. where he died on November 27, 1726, in the 69th year of his age, and lieth buried at Chilton. Sarah, the sister of William and Alexander, and eldest daughter of William Croke, esq. of Chilton, died unmarried April 6, 1727, aged 76 years. Alexander, the clergyman, had a son of his own name, now (1746) seated at . . . . and one of his Majesty's justices of the county of Buckingham; and a daughter, Sarah, who died unmarried September 24, 1728, aged 25 years, and was buried near her father in the chancel of Chilton.

Of the Family of Hervey, Possessors of Chilton.

The first of this name and family here, was . . . . Hervey, esquire, a citizen and . . . . . of London, and nearly related to John Hervey, esquire, who in the parliament of 12. Anne was, with Sir Pynsent Chernoche his colleague, one of the knights of the shire to represent the county of Bedford<sup>m</sup>. He purchased this our manor of Chilton of the Crokes, and dying left behind him two sons, viz. Edward and George.

His son Edward succeeded, and married . . . . one of the daughters of Sir Pynsent Chernocke, of Bedfordshire, baronet. He died at or near Hyworth, (or Highworth,) in the county of Wilts, leaving several children by his wife, having sold his estate here to the present owner, Richard Carter, esq.

His brother George is a captain in the lord Cobham's regiment of horse, and married Penelope, another daughter of Sir Pynsent Chernoke aforesaid, who died on May 4, 1743, aged thirty-nine years; and lieth buried in Chilton church, where may be seen her monument.

The arms of Hervey were, argent three packsaddles sable; and of Chernocke, argent, on a bend sable three cross crosslets of the first.

To this gentleman (Mr. George Hervey) was occasionally dedicated a copy of verses published under the name of William Smith, in the Gentleman's Magazine for December 1734. This William Smith was a barber in Thame, and kept a public house at the sign of the Bird-cage, near the Butcher-row; and passed for the author with the printer and some others<sup>n</sup>: but a person entirely unsuspected was the real writer and conveyer to the press of those lines.

Of the Parish Church of Chilton.

The church of this place carries in it the marks of some antiquity; at least (as I guess) about 450 years, and perhaps a good deal more.

The body, or nave, for so ancient a building, is very light; and hath this particularity, that at the end of it, on the north side before the chancel begins, it hath its tower; which is contrary to the common form, and seldom to be met with in the churches of country villages: but however in some: as Radnage in this county; which having been given to the Knights Templars by the king, and there being a cross-legged statue in the eastern wall on the outside, at the end of our church of Chilton, next to the chancel, it might be erected for the founder, who might perhaps be of that order: and if the position of the tower in the middle was chiefly made use of by them, it may well be accounted for in both these places.

Having entered the church, in the eastern wall on the right, facing the west, near the entrance into the chancel, we find a seat, pew, or pulpit, made in the wall; a seat, perhaps, for the abbot of Noteley, or his representative, when here; or a confessional for the parish priest on particular days and proper seasons; or a pulpit, from whence the legends of the saints were read, and stated sermons or discourses delivered to the people.

For other pulpits heretofore were unfixed, portable, to be placed or removed at pleasure; and the present conveniences that are now fixed in our churches are owing to the times that accompanied the Reformation; for then churches were first generally seated; when ambulatory processions, within and about the church, were laid aside; and a pulpit ordered to be provided and set up in every church, by the churchwardens, at the charge of the parish<sup>o</sup>.

On the side of the pulpit, toward the right hand of the preacher, is a handsome frame for an hour-glass, heretofore an attendant on every pulpit; but at present even the frames are to be found but in few; however there is one left at Stokenchurch, Oxon. and another at Turfield, com. Bucks.; and I observed in the parish church of High Wycombe, that there is the like iron fastened just by the pulpit, and which in the year 1737. I saw furnished with an hour-glass for sand, but cannot say whether it is used still to its original purpose.

Not far from this, at the corner of the seats in the great isle, is a poor's box, with a slit in the lid, to receive the benefactions dropped by the well disposed into it.

This in the times of popery was called truncus, and there were many at several altars and images in the churches; and the customary free-will offerings dropt into the trunks, made up a good part of the endowment of vicars, and thereby made their condition better than in later times. Vicarius habebit oblationes quascunque ad truncos tam in dicta ecclesia de &c. quum alibi infra parochiam ipsius ecclesiæ factus<sup>p</sup>.

This way of collecting of charity by a chest placed in consecrated places hath been of very ancient standing: for we read, that in the reign of Joash, king of Judah, Jehoiada, the priest, by the king's order, took a chest, and bored a hole in the cover of it, and set it before the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the Lord<sup>q</sup>. This was to gather the contributions of the people towards repairing of the Temple, then running to decay. These were of very ancient use. For we read, that A. D. 1201, 3. John, Eustace the abbot, coming as a missionary preacher into England, amongst other institutions, directed that a wooden box should be put up in every parish church, under the custody of two or three faithful persons, to receive the alms of the people designed for buying lights for the church, and for the burial of the poor. Ad hoc colligendum statuit in singulis ecclesiis parochialibus fieri truncum concavum sub custodia duorum vel trium fidelium hominum, ubi populus jactaret prænominatum æs<sup>r</sup>. They are now rarely to be met with, though formerly to be found in every church; for the 84th canon directs, that in every church should be erected a strong chest, with a hole in the upper part thereof, with three keys; one for the minister's keeping, and the two others for the churchwardens, to receive the alms and devotions of the people, to be distributed at stated times to the most poor and needy of their neighbours. But when, by act of Parliament, the poor were provided for by parochial rates and assessments, contributions of this sort were laid aside; and a poor's box fixed up in a church will be somewhat of a rarity to be found.

By the injunctions anno 1. Edw. VI. to the petty canons of Windsor, it was ordered, that the forfeit of absence from matins should be one penny halfpenny; and from either procession, communion, or evensong, the like sum, to be paid to the poor men's box<sup>s</sup>.

But besides this fixed and standing utensil, there was used in every church, (according to the conjecture of a learned divine well versed in ecclesiastical antiquity<sup>t</sup>;) to receive the offerings at the communion, a portable wooden box, with a long handle, carried about by a proper person, to gather the offerings of the communicants; which, in king Edward's and queen Elizabeth's Common Prayer, were ordered to be put into this, then called, the poor men's box. Now indeed these devotions are ordered to be collected in a decent basin; and the wooden hand-boxes are almost forgotten, unless in some churches they are made use of in gathering the money for briefs.

(2.) “ Mr. Abiel Benson, died 19th March, 172 , aged sixty-one years.”

(3.) Between the north and south door of the church : “ Mrs. Dorothy Benson, daughter of John Hart, gentleman, died May . . . . 1681, aged fifty-five years.”

Lastly, on a marble monument fastened to the wall facing the pulpit is this Latin inscription :

 “ Infelix maritus hoc Saxum posuit. Conjux charissima nunquam
 “ die Maij 1743, ætatis suæ 39.”

The two chancels are crowded with monuments and stones for the Crokes and their relations; all of which, that are of any account, have been before taken notice of; but I do not find any memorial of one of the ministers of Chilton in any part of the church or chancel.

In the steeple are only three bells; on the largest of which is Thomas Sanders, C. W. 1686; on the other two, only 1686.

All that I have more to observe of the church is, that it is dedicated to St. Mary; as is also Crendon, its neighbour<sup>x</sup>.

Of the Curates of the Parish Church of Chilton.

The advowson of Chilton was very early, both rectory and vicarage, tithes, great and small, swallowed up by the convent of Note-

For I find that some of the Greinvilles, in the reign of king Henry the Second, gave to Noteley, in Frankalmoigne, some lands in Chilton<sup>y</sup>; and that another of their descendants, viz. Eustache de Greinville, confirmed the benefaction of his ancestors; and also the grant of Walter Giffard, earl of Buckingham, of the parish church of Chilton to that abbey; which Greinvill (by the by) seems to have been lord of our manor, by taking upon him to confirm this last grant.

There is no question, but soon after this donation of the church, the monks got it appropriated to their convent; and so converted the whole income and profits of it to their own use. As for the cure of the souls, that devolved on some of their own members, who supplied the church, and took their turns of residing, or at least officiating, and so brought the whole revenue into the common stock of the abbey. This might very easily be done in Cherdsley, Crendon, and our Chilton churches, which lay so contiguous to the monastery, that on every occasion a canon might step out, and perform the office or duty, and soon return again to the convent; and thereby secure the profits of every kind belonging to the church, to their own body.

This was a constant practice of the monks, which I make no doubt they exercised here, and thereby entailed that scandalous state of poverty on the curates of this parish. This trade, I am certain, was carried on till the 18th of Edward the Third, 1344. for by an order dated that year, on the 7th December, Thomas le Beke, then bishop of Lincoln, gave commission to John Clifton, abbot of Dorchester, com. Oxon. of canons regular of Saint Augustine, to inquire and proceed against the monastery of Noteley, whether those religious do well supply the parish churches of Chilton and others; for hitherto they have been notoriously destitute of perpetual vicars. Thomas episcopus Lincoln abbati de Dorcestr. ad inquirendum et proce-

How the monks got rid of this inquisition, I know not. It is likely it might produce the pension of 10<sup>l</sup>. per annum, settled on the curate; which prestation subsists at this time; and which, being a fixed stipend, a dead unimprovable allowance in cash, and not an allotment in land, tithes, and such like commodities, that would keep up their intrinsic value in all seasons and times, by the excessive fall of money, is dwindled into such a pitiful allowance for the maintenance of a clergyman, that an ordinary handicraftsman receives as much more for his service in a year: not but that when it was first set out it might have been a plentiful, or even an abundant allotment: the mischief hath risen from the fluctuating valuation of money, which is so much fallen since that time, as to have sunk perhaps to a tenfold degree.

But I proceed to the curates, who were so called, because all the tithes and profits of the church being appropriated, and no perpetual vicarage endowed, the religious were obliged to find some proper person to undertake the cure of souls, and perform divine offices, with an appointed salary; who was thereupon called the curate; and such a living, in the language of the ecclesiastical courts was styled a curacy; as is this of ours at Chilton, and those of Cherdsley and Crendon, and the rest in this county anciently belonging to the abbey of Notley.

Of these curates I can exhibit but a short and imperfect list communicated to me by Browne Willis, esq.

Roger Chakenden occurs so in a visitation anno 1483. He was born (as is likely) in a parish of that name, in the hundred of Langtree, and deanery of Henley, com. Oxon. and derived his surname (as was usual) from the place of his birth; as did

Leonard Borstal, a native of a parochial village hard by, who occurs in 1525 ; and

Robert Tayler, in anno 1536, 27. Hen. VIII. There was one Robert Tayler, LL. B. who, in 1561, was prebendary of Welton Beckhall, in Lincoln cathedral ; but I cannot ascertain him to be the same with this our curate.

Ralph Gresswell was curate in 1545.

Randal Eaton, in 1598, 40. Eliz. and in 1615, 13. Jac. I.

Henry Stubbs, in 1617, 15. Jac. I. and

Thomas Saer, 1663. He quitted it for Ambrosden, com. Oxon. The next was,

Robert Hawkins, 1667. Of this gentleman's trial and acquittal at Aylesbury assizes, see before. The publishing of this trial is by Mr. Wood attributed to Sir Matthew Hale, who gives us the title of it thus ; viz. "The perjured Fanaticks: or the malicious Conspiracy of " Sir John Croke of Chilton, Henry Larimore, and others, Fanaticks, against the Life of Robert Hawkins, Clerk, and late Minister " of Chilton, occasioned by his Suit for Tithes, before Sir Matthew " Hale, Chief Baron of the Exchequer. Lond. 1685<sup>a</sup>." It was reprinted about the time of Dr. Sacheverel's trial, in the reign of queen Anne. This our Robert Hawkins was afterwards vicar of Beckly, in Oxfordshire ; which when or how he quitted, I have not found.

Edward Goode, A. M. was licensed curate here and at Crendon, on February 4, 1667-8. He died and was buried at Crendon, July 11, 1671.

William Evans was curate in 1673. He was of Magdalen College, Oxford ; and was created M. A. of that University on July 7, 1674<sup>b</sup>. About which time he resigned our curacy to his countryman,

Evan Jones, who was licensed October 20, 1674, and held it 1682. This gentleman was of St. Mary Hall, in Oxford ; and on July 2, 1679, commenced M. A.<sup>c</sup>

Thomas Lyndesay was his successor in 1685. He was the son of John Lyndesay, a native of Scotland, (of which name is a family dignified with the title of earl of Crawford,) and vicar of Blandford, in the county of Dorset. In 1672, aged fifteen years, he was entered of Wadham College, Oxford<sup>d</sup>; elected scholar in 1673, and created A. B. on April 6, 1676; and on March 13, 1678, A. M.<sup>e</sup> After holding our church a little while, by the favour of Dr. Thomas Sprat, (his fellow collegian, and perhaps tutor,) bishop of Rochester, he was made rector of Woolwich, in Kent; and not long after, chaplain to Henry lord Capel; and afterwards went into Ireland, with Sir Cyril Wyche, and William Duncombe, esq. the lord justices there<sup>f</sup>. On December 1, 1691, he preached a sermon before the society of Dorsetshire, on Gal. vi. 10. which he soon after published, being then chaplain to the earl of Essex. On July 1, 1693, he was diplomated D. D. by favour of the University of Oxford<sup>g</sup>; and in February following had the deanery of St. Patrick bestowed upon him<sup>h</sup>. He was first made bishop of Killaloe, in Ireland; and after was preferred to be archbishop of Armagh, and primate of all Ireland. In this exalted and important post he died at length in July 1724; when Dr. Hugh Boulter, bishop of Bristol, was put in his place<sup>i</sup>.

Thomas White held our curacy in 1707.

Nicholas Maud was curate in 1715.

Nicholas Lisson, in 1720.

Christopher Wells, in 1730 and 1732.

Of the Manor House of Chilton.

The present manor house belonging to Chilton was built in the year 1740, by Richard Carter, esq. one of the Welch judges, being chief justice of the counties of Glamorgan, Brecknock, and Radnor, in South Wales; who but a little time before had purchased this lordship of Edward Harvey, esq.

It is built partly on the scite of the old house, (some part of which is involved in it,) and partly in some new addition, erected and joined thereto.

The ancient manor house, the front of which is entirely pulled down and altered, was built in the form of an H. In the middle of the front, facing the ground entrance, was a porch, embattled and covered with lead, that advanced some feet from the house, and was ascended into by steps; and on its face, just over the outward door, had in capitals this inscription cut into the stone; viz. JEHOVA. TVRRIS. MEA. Next the street is a great portal, built of carved stone, with a small wicket on one side. Upon it are these sentences insculped in capitals; viz. DA GLORIAM DEO. DEVS NON DESERET; and above, in carved work thoroughly pierced, is this imperfect, OMNIA DESVP (i. e. Desup. desuper) “All from above.”

Of this kind of fancy in building Dr. Plot has given an eminent instance in an inscription in Roman capitals, instead of balisters, going round like a stone rail upon the wall of the court before Trent-ham house, the seat of the Levesons of Staffordshire<sup>k</sup>. (See also Tab. 24. p. 267.)

These foregoing mottos (which were not owing entirely to the taste of that age) shew the pious disposition of the founder; a property which the family was for a long time remarkable for: and as to the last, omnia desuper, I have seen it painted on glass in more churches than one, and especially in that of Beaconsfield, in this county, and more abbreviated than on the gate here; viz. ΟΙΑ DESVP. It seems to have been an abridgment of that passage in the Epistle of St. James; “Every good gift and every perfect gift is from “above,” ch. i. 17.; which text I find made use of by one of the chief justices in the 19th of Elizabeth, to usher in his speech or exhortation to some gentlemen of the long robe, that were then made and created sergeants at law<sup>1</sup>. Marcus Antoninus, the philosopher, and Roman emperor, is said to have taken for his word a Greek sentence of much the same import as this; viz. πάντα ἀνωθεν ῥεῖ<sup>m</sup> Omnia desuper fluunt: “All things flow from above.”

There were in the windows of several of the apartments of the old house, a great many arms of the Crokes and other families of their alliance, in painted glass; some of which may perhaps be preserved; but a great part (it is to be feared) was destroyed in pulling down the old fabric.

Of the Abbey of Nutley.

This abbey having been, for a long succession of years, patron of our church of Chilton, and owners of several lands in our parish, given to it in frank almoigne by several devout and well disposed persons, I shall improve this relation by giving a short account of this monastery of Notley.

Notley, Noteley, Nutley, Notesley, or St. Mary de Parco, as it was variously called, was a religious house, founded within the parish of

The precise place of its situation is at present well known by its ruins that subsist<sup>o</sup>; as also by the charter of the founder, who granted to it the park of Crendon, with the lands about, between the park and the water of Teame, and several other parcels of land; as also the mill of Grendham, (Crendon,) free and discharged from all service.

Crendon Park is even now well known by that name; as is the scite of Notley abbey; and the mill, of a long time called Notley Mill, seated on the water of Teame, i. e. the present Tame river, continues in its place and purpose, though of almost six hundred years' standing, since its first donation to those religious.

Walter Giffard, the founder, gave to it our church of Chilton. King Henry the Second gave the hermitage of Finemere; and by another charter confirmed all other grants<sup>p</sup>. Josceline de Bailul, bishop of Salisbury, who was consecrated in 1142, and died 1188, confirmed to it the impropriation of the church of Bradley; and made a declaration, that the dedicating of the house of leprous women should be no prejudice or detriment to the church of Bradley<sup>q</sup>. Paganus de Dourton gave the chapel of Dourton, and a yard of land there<sup>r</sup>. Geoffrey de St. Martin gave them land at Easington. King John confirmed all their donations; and by charter conferred the right of giving the pastoral staff of this abbey on William Marshal, earl of Pembroke, son of Rohesia, the sister or aunt of Walter Giffard, the founder<sup>s</sup>. William de Greinville gave them lands at our Chilton. As also did Reginald de Hamden, whose family were lords of Chilton and Easington.

At length they became possessed of several advowsons in this and the next county of Oxford; most of which are now curacies in esteem, as having had their incomes entirely engrossed by the religious, without any provision for a residing vicar, and the cure of souls being supplied by one of their own body; which was a common practice of those times. The churches they possessed in this county were Barton, Chetwode, and Hillersdon, in the deanery of Buckingham<sup>t</sup>; and Ashenden, Cherdsey, Crendon, our Chilton, Dourton, and Winchingdon Inferior, in the deanery of Waddesdon<sup>u</sup>; and in Oxfordshire, Stoke Lyne, in the deanery of Burcester<sup>x</sup>, and Caversham in that of Henley. They had likewise under their patronage the church of Maiden Bradley, com. Wilts, which is now a curacy vested in Christ Church, Oxford<sup>y</sup>.

I find this reckoned amongst the monasteries of the order of canons regular of St. Augustine, by Sir William Dugdale<sup>z</sup>; and as such, in the 22d of Edward I. A. D. 1294, when the king obliged all monasteries whatsoever to receive protection from him, we find it inserted in the catalogue; viz. The Abbot of Nutteley<sup>a</sup>. Mr. Willis saith of it, That Notley abbey was of the order of St. Augustine, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St. John the Baptist<sup>b</sup>. But Mr. Stevens, with more exactness, hath demonstrated it to have been an abbey of the regular canons of Arouasia, or Arroasia, who were a reformation of those of St. Augustine; and thus accounts for them, and their coming into England; viz. Arroasia is an abbey in the diocese of Arras, the head of the reformation of the regular canons, who retaining the foundation of the rule of St. Augustine, in order to correct the flesh, with its vices and concupiscence, banished flesh from their refectory<sup>c</sup>. Besides this, they did not wear shirts, but lay all night in their dormitory in woollen tunics: and providing against imminent dangers, added some other necessary and decent institutions, building them upon the aforesaid foundation.

Again he saith of them, That Arouasia was near Bapaume, in Artois; that Gervais was founder of the congregation, this abbey having been the head of twenty-eight monasteries. Their habit was white; they were austere, did eat no flesh, wore no linen, and kept strict silence. Again, he saith of them, after the regular canons of St. Augustine, came into England those of Arroasia, in the year of our Lord 1112.<sup>d</sup>

The following is the translation of the original charter of donation : viz. “ We Walter Giffard earl of Buckingham, and Hermengard the countess my wife, have given in perpetual alms, for the health of our souls, &c. to God, and St. Mary of the park, and to the abbot and canons of the park there serving God, all my park of Grendham, (Crendon,) and whatsoever is contained in the compass of the park, &c. and the mill of Grendham, (Crendon,) free and discharged of all service and exaction, to build to the honour of God, and the blessed Virgin Mary, a certain abbey of regular canons, according to the order and institution of St. Nicholas, of the church of Arroasia and Joreslenden, and for the maintenance of the canons there serving God<sup>e</sup>.”

For the following account I am obliged to Mr. Willis, History of Abbeys, vol. 2. p. 33. 34.

Osbert was the first abbot<sup>i</sup>, appointed (as is likely) by the founder.

Robert is met with in a deed dated twenty-five years after the foundation, anno Domini 1189. He died anno 1203, at which time, as I guess,

Edward might be elected abbot. He occurs anno 1221; as does John anno 1234. On whose resignation, anno Domini 1236,

Henry de Sancta Fide succeeded to this dignity. The next I find is

John Grendon, (so named from a place in this neighbourhood,) anno Domini 1252. in which year he was elected abbot. This abbot, in 1265. 49. Hen. III. was summoned by writ to the parliament to be held at . . . . .<sup>k</sup> He governed about sixteen years, and was then succeeded by John Gloucester, whom I find elected anno 1268. I am at a loss to ascertain the rest, especially before the year 1460, when

William occurs abbot. His successor, as I guess, was

Peter Caversham, (so named from one of the parochial villages whose church was in their hands,) who occurs in a deed of Chetwode, anno Domini 1480. He died anno 1503, and was succeeded by Richard Petyrton, anno 1503, who dying anno 1513, after ten years' government, was followed by John Merston, elected abbot April 9, 1513. He occurs abbot anno Dom. 1521. and again anno 1532. Soon after which he was succeeded by Richard Ridge, the last abbot; who anno 1533 was present at the convocation holden, on April 5, in the chapter house of St. Paul's, London; and was proxy for ten abbots or priors besides; viz. for Ralph, prior of Kyme; John, abbot of St. James's, near Northampton; Thomas, prior of Clawcombe; John, abbot of Mussen-den, (Missenden, com. Bucks.;) John, prior of St. Neots; Hugh, prior of the canons of Huntington; Edmund, prior of Stoneley; Thomas Ratcliffe, master of Burton St. Lazarus; Richard, prior of Ashby Canon; and William, prior of Burcester<sup>1</sup>. Anno 1534, on September 6, he with John Thame, and sixteen others, subscribed to the supremacy: anno 1536, articles of religion were agreed on in the convocation, and confirmed and published by the king's authority, which were signed (amongst the rest) by our abbot, viz. Richardus, ab. de Notley<sup>m</sup>. He seems to have been a man of a great deal of activity; and continuing abbot till the dissolution, he yielded up his convent December 9, 1539, with fourteen monks, as appears by the instrument of surrender extant in the Augmentation Office, and had a pension of 100l. per annum assigned him, as the rest of the convent had all of them pensions respectively, as follows, viz.

As to Valentine Bovende, or Bownde, the last prior, he was long since deceased, as appears by his will, (which I have seen<sup>a</sup>,) dated December 25, 1549, and proved April 17. following; in which he orders his body to be buried in Crendon chancel, of which parish church he styles himself curate.

What remains of the ruins of this abbey are the walls of the hall, which speak it to have been a stately building. It is eighty-eight feet in length, and about twenty-three in breadth, and vaulted underneath for cellaring. At one end of it are neat pilasters, and at the other are several handsome carvings. Adjoining to it are some arches, probably part of the chapter house; and not far from hence stands a pillar, heretofore belonging to the church, which was no doubt a noble structure; this abbey being the best endowed of any religious house in the county; though what sort of a fabric this church was, I could not learn, nor get any account thereof, save that the five great bells, anciently hanging in the abbey steeple, were removed to the parish church of Crendon, and put up there; since when they have been all re-cast, except the second, on which is this: In multis annis resonet campana Johannis.

As to the present abbey house, it seems to have been for the most part rebuilt since the dissolution, except the kitchen, and one or two other rooms: amongst which is to be reckoned the abbot's dining-room; the wainscot whereof, as I find, was fixed up by Richard Ridge, the last abbot. There are yet in being the initial letters of his name, viz. R. R. with a crosier; and over it, carved in the cornish in capitals, Time Denm, et recede a malo. Ricardus Ridge. Principium sapientie est timor Domini.

In the windows of the house are some old broken arms of the Staffords, patrons of this convent, and of king Henry the Eighth, and his third queen, Jane Seymour<sup>o</sup>.

Memorables of the Parish of Chilton.

This chapter is designed as a miscellaneous collection of several particulars, that could not so properly be inserted under any of the foregoing heads; and are here set down, without any regard to time, matter, or order; and just as they offered themselves to observation.

George Wren, gent. son of Thomas Wren, rector of Kelshal, in Hertfordshire, married Elizabeth daughter of William Croke of Chilton, in Bucks. esq. by whom he had an only daughter; and this George dying on February 22, 1709. an. ætat. 28. was buried at Kelshal<sup>p</sup>.

Thomas Croke, of Rykemersworth, gent. in Cashio hundred, was returned in a list taken in the reign of Henry VI. of those that could dispend ten pounds a year, and resided in the county of Hertford<sup>r</sup>.

A. D. 1747, George II. Thomas Kensey, esq. of Chilton, was high sheriff of the county of Bucks.

Richard Croke, public orator of the University of Cambridge, had been scholar to Linaere and Grocyn, and was excellently learned in the Greek tongue<sup>s</sup>.

Unton Croke, and Richard Croke the lawyer, afterwards recorder of Oxford, were amongst the commissioners of the parliament that met at Woodstock, to survey the manors and houses belonging to the crown in 1649, and were frighted with terrible apparitions, &c.†

Dorothy, daughter of John Theobald of Shepie, in the county of Kent, first married John Croke, Doctor of Laws, by whom he had an only daughter, Dorothy, first wife to Robert Honeywood, esq. &c. She died in the year 1575<sup>u</sup>.

Theophilus Higgons, son of Robert Higgons, was born at Chilton about 1578, and educated partly in Thame school; from whence in 1592, being fourteen years old, he was removed, and became student of Christ Church, Oxford, and Master of Arts in 1600, being of good esteem for his learning and ingenuity. Whilst at Christ Church he was looked upon as puritanically inclined, as well as a vigorous opponent of the Romish cause. At length he became chaplain to Dr. Ravis, removed from the deanery of Christ Church to the see of Gloucester, and from thence translated to London; where our Higgons became lecturer of St. Dunstan's, in Fleet-street; at which church there was a mighty resort to hear him, and he was highly applauded. But having unfortunately married, and not meeting with suitable preferment, he went over to the Romish church, and spent two years at Doway and St. Omer's; from whence his father, though he endeavoured it in person, could neither by persuasions nor his authority withdraw him. At length he was regained in 1610. by Dr. Thomas Morton, then dean of Winchester, and afterwards bishop of Durham. On which occasion he preached a public recantation sermon at St. Paul's Cross, on Ephes. ii. 4—7. and published, to shew his hearty reunion with, and humble submission to, the Church of England. Soon after this he was presented to the rectory of Hunton, a peculiar of the archbishop of Canterbury, in Shoreham deanery, not far from Maidstone, in Kent; where he lived, till he was sequestered and ejected in the grand rebellion, and forced to take sanctuary in a friend's house at Maidstone, where he died in 1659, more than eighty years old; and was buried in the church-yard, without either stone or monument to his memory. A fuller account of him may be seen in Wood's Hist. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 277. Wood's Athen. vol. 2. p. 240. 241.

Robert Croke, of the family of the Crokes of Chilton, in Bucks. was admitted Doctor of Physic in the University of Oxford, on May 1, 1644.<sup>x</sup> He was a burgess for Wendover in the parliament at Westminster the 3d Nov. 1640, 15. Car. I. and again in that of the 16th; but leaving it he retired to Oxford, and sat in the parliament there<sup>y</sup>. One Robert Croke was knighted by king Charles the First at Whitehall<sup>z</sup>; but whether the same with the former does not appear; (I believe not.) Our Robert Croke was again member for Wendover in the parliament of the 13th Car. II.; during the sitting of which he died; and Thomas Wharton, esq. (afterwards lord Wharton) was chosen to fill up his vacant place<sup>a</sup>. Quere, whether he was not of Chequers.

Walter Croke married Mrs. Mary Archbold, who died August 3, 1650, and was buried in the church of Austy, com. Hertford<sup>b</sup>.

CHAP. X.

The Manor of Borstall.

To the foregoing account of Chilton, I shall subjoin a few things of the neighbouring manor and lordship of Borstal.

This place is said to have taken its name from one Nigel, a forester of Bernewood, who, having killed a wild boar in the forest, had given him by the king, as a reward of his courage, a hyde of arable land, called Deer-hyde, on which he built a mansion for his residence, and called it Borestale<sup>c</sup>. I have been shewn, by the late Sir John Aubrey, bart.

over the chimney in the hall of Borstall House, a small piece of painting, that will favour and give countenance to such a tradition, or took its design from it.

However this be, it is said that Borstall was given by one of the Williams to Nigel aforesaid, together with the rangership of the forest of Bernwood, by the livery of a horn, which is still preserved, as a curious piece of honourable antiquity, and worthy to be preserved.

This tenure I find asserted so long ago as the year 1286; for upon an inquiry then made, it was thus found; “that John, son of “ Neal, held one hyde of land in Burstal, com. Bucks. of the king, “ in the forest of Bernewode, by serjeanty, (which is called Derhyde,) “ belonging to his bailiwick of the custody of the forest, from “ whence the said John is keeper of the fee.” Plac. Coronæ, com. Bucks. 14. Ed. I.<sup>d</sup>

If the contents of this inquisition be come down to us exact, with regard to the notation of time, we may suppose, that this John, the son of Neal, took also the name of Handlow; and being a knight, and residing at Borstall, was a great benefactor to the friars of St. Augustine at Oxford, to whom he gave a piece of land<sup>e</sup>, for building them a house, the grant of which was confirmed by king Henry the Third; that besides being ranger of Bernwood, he was also keeper of the king’s forest of Shotover near Oxford, in which county he had not a few lands; and that in 1269. he gave those friars square stones from his own quarry, and timber out of Shotover forest, towards building their inn and chapel at Oxford<sup>f</sup>. He died before the finishing of that work, and ordered his body to be there buried; leaving the perfecting of that work, and a library<sup>g</sup>, that he had begun for the monks, to his heirs. The inquisition before recited might be taken on the occasion of his death<sup>h</sup>.

His son was another Sir John Handlow, knight, who in the 6th of Edward II. had leave to make a castle<sup>i</sup> of his manor house at Borstall; of which there is a magnificent and entire gateway still remaining. He was a considerable benefactor to Queen's College, Oxford, as appears by this following account: "D. Johannes Handlow, miles, dominus de Borstal, secus Brekyl, vulgo Brill, in agro Buckinghamiensi, pro salute animæ propriæ, necnon animarum Matildis conjugis, sobolis suæ ac parentum, denique Edoardi Secundi, et Hugonis Dispensatoris natu majoris, fundum et messuagium Enhamiæ-Militis, in comitatu Hantoniensi locata, et præter ipsius ecclesiæ patronatum, annum decem librarum censum a manerio rediturum; in adjutorium (ut ipse inquit) foundationis Aulæ Reginæ (i. e. Queen's College) Oxon. transcripsit, cujus charta die Jovis proximo post festum Sancti Gregorii, xix. Edoardi III. data est<sup>k</sup>."

He died the next year after this donation, in 20. Edward III, 1346. and was buried (as were more of his family) at the Augustine friars, Oxford. He had by Mand his wife a son, Richard, who deceased in the life-time of his father, and left a son, Edmund, and two daughters, Elizabeth, married to <sup>1</sup>Sir Edmund Delapole, and Margaret, to Gilbert Chastelein. Edmund died in his minority; and his estates then fell to his sister Elizabeth married to Delapole, who had by her a daughter, named Catharine, married to —James, esq. Berks. who had a daughter, Christiana, married to —Rede, esq. from whom came Edmund Rede, esq. lord of Borstall, which Edmund, A. D 1456. by a solemn procession<sup>m</sup>, was received at Oxford by the Augustine friars, as their founder.

Edmund Rede, son of Christiana James, (daughter of Robert James, of Wallingford, by his first wife Catharine Delapole,) was by virtue of the foregoing descent possessed of many of the lands and possessions of the said Sir John Handlow; and especially of our manor and lordship of Borstall; and also of the royal liberties by hereditary right granted to the said Sir John, and of which he died possessed.

This our Edmund, in 1426. the third of Henry VI. was one of the witnesses to an agreement between the prior and convent of the Holy Trinity in Wallingford<sup>n</sup>, and the mayor and corporation of the borough, about their several rights and privileges, which were then amicably adjusted. In the year 1434. John Ormesby being enfeoffed by Cicely, the late wife of John Rede, in the manor of Standelf<sup>o</sup>, in the parish of Pirton, com. Oxon. conveyed it by a deed to Edmund Rede. Anno 1438, he gave to the abbot and convent of Dorchester in Oxfordshire the sum of twenty pounds, for their daily prayers for his good estate during his life, and of several of his friends, and an anniversary for ever for their souls, after their decease, on the feast of St. Julian<sup>p</sup> or within six days after. This daily service was to be performed during their lives<sup>q</sup> at the altar of St. Mary in the said church; and on the anniversary in the chapter house in the presence of the convent, their names and obits, as entered in the register, were to be read, for the perpetual remembrance of the benefaction. In the 17th of Hen. VI. he was high sheriff of the conjoined counties of Oxford and Berks. and again in the 29th of that reign<sup>r</sup>. His arms are said to have been, gules, a saltire between four garbs Or. These arms, with a distinction of houses, are still borne by the families of the Reads of Oxfordshire; of which there are two branches; one of the degree of Baronet, and the other of that of Esq. seated at Ipsden, by the Ikenild-Way, not far from Goring. In 1440. Richard Marmyon, of Stoke Marmyon, in com. Oxon: confirmed to him a moiety<sup>s</sup> of the manors of Chakynodon and Stoke Marmyon, and other lands in the county of Oxford. The same year it was agreed between our Edmund Rede, esq. lord of the village of Standelf, and Henry Ferfote, vicar of the church of Pyrton, that whereas the vicar was bound to maintain a capellane to officiate three days in a week, viz. Sunday, Wednesday, and Friday, in the chapel of Standelf; the said village being then left desolate of inhabitants, the said Edmund Rede did consent, for the greater ease of the vicar, that he should only there officiate one day in the week, by himself or a curate. But whenever the village should be again fully inhabited, then the vicar should be re-obliged to his former duty. But this fulness of inhabitants (I believe) did never arrive, and the chapel within these last fifty years hath been shamefully abused, and lies at present (the steeple excepted) almost in ruins, as may be seen by a sketch of it taken in 1745. Anno Dom. 1441. 29 Hen. VI. a suit depending between Edmund Rede, esq. and John Werefield, gent. of Wallingford, (who had been one of the representatives of that borough<sup>t</sup>, in almost every parliament from the first to the fifteenth of Henry the VIth.) concerning certain tenements in Wallingford, and especially a principal messuage lately belonging to John Hamden, esq. was referred<sup>u</sup> to the arbitration of Richard Restwold and William Marmyon, who adjudged the said messuage to Edmund Rede, and made a final agreement between them. A. D. 1452. Richard Poppe, clerk, and John Werefield of Wallingford, gentleman, quit claimed to Edmund Rede, esq. all right and title to a pigeon-house and garden adjoining, in the parish of St. Peter, and St. John in Wallingford<sup>x</sup>, extending from St. Jony's ditch to the garden of the said Edmund. The next year, viz. 1453, Richard Marcham of Wallingford, and Isabel his wife, granted to Edmund Rede, esq. and other feoffees, a fishery in Wallingford, which had formerly belonged to Robert James, son and heir of John James, and Christiana his wife. Our Edmund also, anno 31 Hen. VI. gave two acres of arable land in the village of Clapcote, to the priory of St. Trinity in Wallingford<sup>y</sup>, in exchange for a yearly rent of two shillings, issuing from a certain garden within the town of Wallingford; also in the year 1461. 1 Edward IV. the manor of Standelf, and other lauds in the county of Oxford, were confirmed to Edmund Rede, by deed dated July 12. that year<sup>z</sup>.

When this our Edmund died, I have not found; but by his wife Agnes he had a son and heir named William; but I have not sufficient authority to carry on the descent any farther, and shall only observe, that this seat, manor, and lordship of Borstall, in process of time, through several heirs females of divers names, came to the Dinham<sup>a</sup>, and from thence by one of the daughters of Dinham<sup>b</sup> to the family of Lewis, of Wales; by a daughter and heir of whom I presume it came to the knightly family of Aubrey of Llantithred, in the deanery of Llandaff, and kindred of Denis Powys in Glamorganshire, in North Wales.

Aubrey is an ancient name, deduced from the German Alberic, and in Latin, Albericus. It was a Christian name of frequent use in the family of Vere, earls of Oxford, from the first that came into England with the Conqueror in 1066, to the last that died in 1703; and in time became a family name, as have several that anciently were used as a prænomen; such as Godfreio, Arnold, Tristram, Baldwin, Merrie, Cuthbert, Patrick, Everard, Theobald, Josceline, and a multitude more. It is an ingenious conjecture of Mr. Camden's<sup>c</sup>, that the king of the Goths, who sacked Rome A. D. 410, was of this name, and that the Roman writers softened it into Alaricus, which the old English Saxons turned into Alric, the Romans into Alberic, by the modern English made Aubrey.

Of this family was Sir John Aubrey, knight, seated at Llantithred House in Glamorganshire<sup>d</sup>, who on July the 23d, 1660, was created a baronet of England. Of the same name (perhaps his son) was Sir John Aubrey, also of Llantithred, bart. who had a daughter, named Elizabeth, married to Ralph Freeman, esq. of Abseden in Hertfordshire, who brought him three sons and six daughters; viz. Ralph, William, and Aubrey; Elizabeth, married to Robert Elwes of Shroocking, esq. Margaret, to Robert D'Oilly, esq. (brother to Sir

This last Sir John Aubrey married three wives, and had issue by each; viz. two sons and three daughters; and dying about Easter, 1743. was buried at —— leaving his estate in Wales to his eldest son, Sir John, and the lordship and manor of Borstall in trust to John, then a minor of about six years old, the eldest son of his second son Thomas Aubrey, esq. by Martha, the eldest daughter of Richard Carter, of Chilton, esq.

The arms of Aubrey, as painted in glass in the windows of the hall of Borstall House, are azure a chevron, between three eagles' heads erased Or. The arms of Ulster on the chevron, the crest on a torse azure and Or an eagle's head erased. The motto, SOLEM FERO.

The entrance of this house of Borstall is remarkable for a strong ancient gateway, passed through over a bridge, which it is likely might be built so long ago as anno 1313. 6 Edw. II. and appears at present in its kind an old entire, and grand piece of building. There are also some works yet to be seen, encompassing the garden, raised in the times of the civil wars, when this house was made a garrison for the king, for whose defence it was very early fortified, and bravely defended for some time. But A. D. 1644, in the Spring, when King Charles I. taking the field, to strengthen his army, had drawn out the garrison at Reading, it was thought of no purpose to keep lesser garrisons at less distance from Oxford; and so the garrison at Borstall House, reputed a strong place, upon the edge of Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire, was ordered to demolish the works and fortifications, and retire, and join the royal army.

This was no sooner done, than the garrison of the parliament at Aylesbury seized and put a garrison into it, which became very troublesome to the city of Oxford, by hindering provisions from being brought to it. Upon which the lords at Oxford resolved to retake this post: and under the conduct of Colonel Gage, (who had the command of one of the quarters of Oxford, under Sir Walter Aston the governor,) with a party of foot, three pieces of ordnance, and a troop of horse, by break of day appeared before the place; and in a short time having gained the church and out-houses, battered the great house itself with his cannon, till the defendants beat a parley, and surrendering the house with the ammunition, one piece of cannon, and great quantity of provision, had liberty to depart with their arms and horses. This strong post obtained had a garrison left in it by the colonel, which not only defended insults on Oxford on that side, but very near supported itself by contributions drawn from the adjacent parts of Buckinghamshire, besides the prey it frequently took from the neighbourhood of Aylesbury; and Sir William Campion<sup>f</sup>, knight, was constituted governor here, and made a brave and resolute defence against the attacks of the parliament forces; for anno 1645. Fairfax led his army on June the 6th. from the leaguer of Oxford, to attack Borstall, which was bravely defended by the royalists, especially<sup>g</sup> by Sir William Campion, the governor; so that the attack was made in vain; they were beaten off with the loss of officers, as well as soldiers. And again the next year, Fairfax, in order the more effectually to distress Oxford, (which he was determined to carry by siege,) blocked up the neighbouring garrisons, to prevent their sending it any succours or relief; and amongst the rest, our Borstall House; and previous to it, sent a summons to the governor in these terms:

“ SIR,

“ I doe by these summon you to deliver up the garrison of Borstall House into my hands, for the use of the parliament; you may have honourable terms for yourself and all within your garrison, if you seasonably accept thereof. I desire your answer this day.

Notwithstanding this summons of Sir Thomas Fairfax, which was soon followed by actual force, the loyal and valiant governor bravely resolved not to surrender ; nor could he be prevailed on to give it up, till Oxford was lost ; upon the fate of which it chiefly depended.

It might be during these times of trouble that perhaps one of the crosses at this place might be pulled down ; as I saw some years since a part of it to lie close by a pond, some distance from the church and great house, in the highway towards the south, though there was one left standing in the church-yard, almost entire.

There is observable in this lordship of Borstall, a fine decoy for wild ducks, a matter of good ingenuity, as well as curiosity, and of greater advantage. These duck traps, or decoys, are said to have been first erected amongst us in England, by Sir William Woodhouse, knight, of Wexham,<sup>h</sup> in Norfolk, and founder of the family there, who was the Jester of King James the First.

A GLOSSARY

THE ORIGINAL, THE ACCEPTION, AND OBSOLETENESS.

THE RISE, PRACTICE, AND ALTERATION OF CUSTOMS, LAWS, AND MANNERS

A

ABUNDA. A mete or bound. Juxta ripam de Charwell usque ad metas et abundas ibidem per me concessas, i. 294. from Sax. bans a bond, from bindan to bind. Hence hat-band, wrist-band, neck-band: to bound, to rebound: a ban, an enclosed field, or limited piece of ground. The ban of a house or a mill, the close or back-yard adjoining to it. A bandog, a mastiff kept close, or tied up. A bandore, or veil of a widow to bind over or cover her head and face. A horse-bin, which in Kent is that apartment of a stable where the chaff and cut meat is secured by a partition of boards. A bin or bing, a safe, an aumbry or cupboard in a buttery or larder. The kiln of the furnace, wherein they burn their charcoal for the melting of metals, is commonly called the bing; and the cistern, into which they throw their crystallized alum for the water to drain from it, is called a bing at Whithy in Yorkshire. A bind of cels, is a string or stick of cels. A binne of hides or skins, is in some countries a quantity for common sale, consisting of thirty-three skins, or hides.

ABUTTARE<sup>a</sup>. To abutt, vide Buttes. Abuttat super prædictam terram, i. 572. In a terrier, or description of the site of land, the sides on the breadth are said to be adjacentes, lying or bordering, and the ends only in length are abuttantes, abutting or bounding; which in old surveys they sometime expressed by capitare, to head, or the head-land so bounding. As in the rental of Wye in Kent, belonging to the abbey of Battel in Sussex, Tenant ucto acras juxta Goreswall capitantes ad prædictam wallum, Customar. de Bello. f. 241. Hence to go about was properly to go round by the end instead of striking across the middle.

ACOLYTHUS. An acolyte, who in our old English was called a colet, from which office came the family of dean Colet, founder of Paul's school. An inferior church servant, who, next under the sub-deacon, waited on the priests and deacons, and performed the meaner offices of lighting the candles, carrying the bread and wine, and paying other servile attendance. Vacante ecclesia de Ambresdon, rector et conventus de Asherugge Johannem de Capella Acolythum præsentarunt. i. 493.

ACRA. An acre, from Sax. Æcrep, a field. The word at first signified not a determined quantity of land, but any open ground, especially a wide campagne; and that sense of it seems preserved in the names of places, Castle-Acre, West-Acre, &c. in com. Norfolk. When the word was applied to the measure of ground, the quantity was still various, but determined by the statutes of 31 Edw. I. and 24 Hen. VIII. c. 4. One acre to consist of eight score perches, forty in length and four in breadth, or so in proportion; though the perch still differed in different counties. Vide Perch. At the great doomsday inquisition, the common pasture seems measured by hides, the arable land by carucates, and the meadow by acres, i. 88.—Exceptis virgis et buttis, quarum quatuor virgæ faciunt unam acram, et aliquando plures, similiter aliquando quatuor buttes, aliquando quinque, aliquando sex, aliquando septem, aliquando octo faciunt unam acram, videlicet secundum quantitatem earundem in longitudine et latitudine. ii. 187.

ACQUIETARE. To acquit or discharge, or to testify the receipt of a debt by giving an acquittance. Pro ista donatione et concessione acquietaverunt fratres prædicti de quinque marcis argenti. i. 175. It was the common forms in deeds of gift, and other conveyance. Nos autem—warantizabimus acquietabimus et defendemus in perpetuum.—Pro hac autem warrantia acquietantia et defensione. Hence to quit any claim or pretension; to get quit of any danger or trouble. Quite, perfectly, entirely, as, quite dead, &c. Quotted, satisfied and cloyed, as, his stomach is quite quotted.

ACTIONES. The whole process and transaction of a gift and charter, and other formal rites and solemnities of a public conveyance. So in the donation of Muswell in Ambrosden to the abbey of Missenden. Affuerunt hiis actionibus præsentēs et testes, i. 104.

ADRAMIRE, adramire, arramire, arramare. To arraign, i. e. to appeal to the law, to offer proof for the claim of right, to proceed to an assise or trial, and stand to the verdict of a jury. So, to arraign a writ of novel disseisin, i. e. to prefer such an action, and prosecute the issue of it. To arraign an assise, i. e. to make plaint, to open the cause, and sue for justice. To arraign a criminal, i. e. to indict and bring him to his trial. Dr. Cowel would derive this term from the French arranger, to dispose or set in order, which conjecture is approved and justified by the latter editor of that interpreter. But the more learned

Sir Henry Spelman refers it to the old French word arramir, to swear or take a solemn oath; as if arramire assisam were to appeal to the oaths of witnesses, and to the verdict of a jury. But indeed I rather think that adramire was at first a contraction of ad arma ire, because the old legal trial, both for the title of estates and the charge of crimes, was by solemn combat or duel, when arramire or arramare was to alarm or call the accused person to a decisive trial at arms. And because the champions were upon the first challenge to swear that they would put themselves on this military issue; and at the time and place of combat were again to take formal oaths to observe the stated laws of the camp; therefore arramire was to swear, but in a secondary sense, as solemn swearing did attend and relate to their solemn fighting. When this barbarous custom of determining a cause by arms and blood was succeeded by the more civilized way of assise or trial by jury, temp. Hen. II. then the word was continued when the method was altered, and arramire versus aliquem was to appeal for justice against a person, and to sue for the benefit of a public trial. And arramire reum was, to arraign a criminal, and offer proof for the conviction of him. Thomas abbas de Eghesham in curia hic adramivit versus eos de advocacione ecclesie de Southorn, i. 501.

ADVOWSON of Churches. No church legally consecrated without an allotment of manse and glebe, made generally by the lord of the manor, who thereby became advocate or patron of that church, i. 314. So as the lordship of the manor and patronage of the church were rarely in different hands till advowsons were unhappily given to religious houses, i. 389. During a controversy for the right of patronage, the diocesan presented to the church salvo jure utriusque. So in a suit depending between William earl of Sarum and the abbot of Barlings, for the advowson of the church of Middleton, i. 269. So Hugh bishop of Lincoln presented to the church of Godington, in a dispute of title between Thomas de Camvill and the abess of Alveston, i. 271. When two several persons presented their respective clerk, an inquisition was directed from the archdeacon to be executed within the parish, and returned into the court, i. 492. No such inquisition, if the right were apparent, Nulla inquisitione in hac parte capta, quia Domino constabat de jure patronatus, ii. 152. When the king presented a clerk upon a false title, the bishop instituted the other's clerk, but with great deference to the king's pretended title, and obliging the clerk so instituted to an oath of resignation, if the king's right should afterward appear. Post institutionem suam prædictam juravit tactis sacrosanctis evangelis quod si contingerit dictum regem erincere jus patronatus ecclesiæ memoratæ (i. e. de Ambresdon) illam sine coactione aliqua resignaret, i. 493. If the patron presented not within six months, there was a lapse to the bishop, Dicunt etiam quod tempus semestre nondum elapsum est, i. 502. The king and other guardians presented in the right of wards, i. 269, 270. When the right of advowson was determined by law, a writ lay to the bishop to admit the right clerk, Concessum est quod prædictus Thomas abbas habeat breve episcopo Lincoln. quod ad præsentationem ipsius abbatis ad prædictam ecclesiam idoneam personam admittat, i. 502. The advowson of churches, in such manors as were held of the king in capite, not to be given by the lords to religious or charitable uses without inquisition ad quod dampnum, and licence of the king. Trials for right of advowson were in courts Christian, ii. 352. To prevent litigious suits for the title to benefices, the rural deans took an account of the names and number of the parish churches within their respective districts; what the Christian name and surname of the several incumbents, the time of their collation to such benefices, by what title they held them, whether by institution, commendam, or custody; of what age they were, and in what orders; whether beneficed in more than one church; the name and quality of the patrons; and the value of every benefice by the last taxation. This register was distinctly transcribed, and a fair copy delivered to the diocesan, by him transmitted to the metropolitan in the next provincial council, ii. 361. Vide Patron.

Advowson of Religious Houses. As those who built and endowed a parish church were by that title made patrons of it, so those who founded any house of religion had thereby the advowson or patronage of it. Sometime the patrons had the sole nomination of the prelate, abbot, or prior; either by investiture or delivery of a pastoral staff; as William Mareschal, earl of Pembroke, to the abbey of Notley, com. Buck. i. 205. Or by bare donation or presentation to the diocesan; as Reginald, earl of Bologna, in his charter to the priory of Cold-Norton, Von hoc autem prætermittendum est, quod domus illa de nostra donatione est, et nos ibi priorem apponere debemus, i. 227. If a free election were left to the religious, yet a congé d'élire, or licence of electing, was first to be obtained from the patron, or in his absence out of England, from the seneschal or steward of his barony. So in the nunnery of Stodley, Th. de S. Walerico, son of the founder, thus provided, Nec est prætermittendum, quod quotiescunque priorissam eligere contigerit ad eundem prioratum, de scriptis priorissam de assensu meo vel seneschalli mei, si in Anglia non fuero, eligere licebit. Cum autem electa fuerit, ad præsentationem meam vel seneschalli mei si in Anglia non fuero domino Lincoln. episcopo debet presentari. Mon. Ang. i. 486. When the title of patronage was in dispute, the religious applied themselves to which they pleased of the contending parties; so the monks of Notley asked licence of electing their abbot from the lady Mand de Mortimer, whom they presumed to be their patroness, though the earl of Gloucester claimed that right, i. 443. The patronage lapsed to the lord of the honour, if the family of the founder was extinct; so Edmund earl of Cornwall became patron of the nunnery of Goring by no other title, than as that house was situate within the honour of Walingford, i. 469. On the death of the prelate or governor, the lands escheated to the patron, as lord of the fee, and were to be compounded for by relief, heriot, and other burdens of military service, unless their endowment was frank-almoin, or such right in the fee was expressly renounced; as Edmund earl of Cornwall in his charter to the college of Bonhommes, at Asherugge. Ita quod cedente vel decedente rectori ecclesiæ de Esserugge prædictæ, quod nos vel heredes nostri—nullatenus habeamus ingressum in prædictis maneriis seu advocationibus ecclesiarum prædictarum sive in aliquibus suis pertinentiis quicquam nos intromittamus tem- pore vacationis quo carebunt rectore, sed semper in manibus ipsorum fratrum tam tempore vacationis quam aliis temporibus remaneant, ne statum suum in aliquo mutant, i. 439. In the vacancy of any religious house, the patron presented to the churches of which the religious had the advowson, Lucia de Arderne recognovit advocacionem illam (i. e. ecclesie de Souldern) esse jus predictae abbacie de Egnesham et post mortem ejusdam Gilberti abbatis vacante predicta abbacia quidam Richardus de Gravesend quondam Lincoln. episcopus loci illius ordinarius, et advocatus predictae abbacie contulit illam ecclesiam cuidam Galfrido de Stokes clerico suo, i. 501. When an abbey of royal foundation was engaged in great debts, at the next vacancy the king took the abbey into his hands, and committed the custody to some steward, to receive the profits and discharge the said incumbance, i. 513.

AFRICANA<sup>b</sup>. A turkey; either from Africa, the country from whence they were brought into these northern parts, or perhaps from the old Latin afra, a bird. Afras aves esse aiunt, Lat. Gloss. MS. Sex Africanae faeminae, i. 405. A certain number of this sort of fowl was frequently reserved among the provisions paid to the lord from his customary tenants.

AGILLARIUS. A heyward, i. e. a herdward, or keeper of the herd of cattle in a common field, sworn at the lord's court by solemn oath, of which the form is delivered by Kitchin, of Courts, f. 46. Quoddam pratum viride quod vocatur heywards-mere, eo quod pertineat ad officium agillarii domini Lestraunge, i. 191. Which pratum viride was, I believe, the same with what is now called Tadbury balk, or the Edburg way balk, in the field of Bicester King's end, of which the grass or herbage is still the right and profit of the tithing-man of King's-end. The office of agillarius was of two sorts; first, the common heyward of a town or village, to supervise the greater cattle or common herd of beasts, and keep them within their due bounds: he was otherwise called bubulcus, cowward, (which is turned into a name of reproach, a pitiful coward;) who, if he was a cottager or other servile tenant, was exempted from the customary works and labours, because he was presumed to be always attending on his herd, as a shepherd on his flock, who had therefore the like privilege. Sunt ibi xvi. cotarii, quorum alii sunt bubulci domini, alii sunt pastores, qui si non essent, deberet quilibet unum opus singulis septimanis per annum. Cartul. Glaston. MS. f. 40. Secondly, the agillarius of the lord of a manor, or of a religious house, who was to take care of the tillage and harvest work, to pay the labourers, and to see there were no encroachments or trespasses committed, &c. The same in effect with that officer who is called the fields-man and the tithing-man. Et in solutis diversis hominibus et feminis primo die Julii conductis ad sarculandum diversa blada ut patet per talliam contra agillarum hoc anno xvi. sol. x. den. ii. 255. His wages in 3 Hen. VI. was a noble. Et in stipendio Roberti Clerk, agillarii hoc anno xiii. sol. iv. den. ii. 257.

AGISTATOR. The agister in a forest, from the Fr. gister, to lie and feed for a certain giste or rate paid to the king. Agister, in the modern French adjouter, to receive in cattle to be so pastured or gisted, to keep them within their bounds, and deliver them to the owners upon the payment of such terms for their feeding. Agistare forestam was to take in cattle to pasture within the bounds of the forest for one month, viz. fifteen days before Michaelmas, and fifteen days after, when the running of cattle would be no prejudice to the game. Agistator was the forest officer, who was to take account of the cattle so agisted, whether they belonged to tenants within the forest, who had free gistment, or to neighbouring inhabitants, who paid a common rate. The agistatores, in an old version of Charta de Foresta, are called gyst-takers, or walkers. Omnium regardatorum et agistatorum forestae predictae, i. 295. Homines sui reddent pannagium dicto manerio cum agistamentum acciderit, i. 323. Eorum animalia agistata fuerunt per duos annos jam elapsos, et solvent Joh. Appulby pro agistamento xiii. sol. iv. den. ii. 139. Hence our graziers now call the foreign cattle, which they take in to keep by the week, gisements or juicements, (pronounced like the joices in building, corrupted from the French adjustment, the cross pieces of timber that are adjusted or fitted to make the frame of the floor.) And to gise or juice ground, is when the lord or tenant feeds it not with his own stock, but takes in other cattle to agist or feed in it. All glossographers agree to derive this word from the French gister, to lie, gest, a bed, &c. But I rather think agistamentum bears relation to ager, the field or feeding place of cattle, and might be the same as agrarium, agerium, agroticum, the profit of feeding cattle upon such a ground or field. Unless it were so, I cannot imagine why the duty or levy for repairing the banks and walls in Romney-marsh was called agistamentum, and the laying such a proportion of this duty upon the several estates was called agistatio. Tunc sequitur numerus omnium agrorum infra dictum mariscum. Et etiam agistatio tam in magna wallia de Apuldre quam in parva wallia ad quantitatem terrarum. Ordinatio Marisci de Romney, p. 20.

GLOSSARY.

ALTA VIA. A highway, or common road. Item alta via et generalis inter Brethull et Pidintu maneria domini regis omnino esset astoputa; which was adjudged a trespass against the king and county, i. 353. Critics might dispute whether the Latin altus gave name to, or was borrowed from, the British al, high, or alt, the ascent of any mountain, as Alpen, the Alps, from al, high, and pen, a head or top. Whence Alpes passed into an appellative for any mountainous or rising places; as high gave a common name to a highal or hill.

ALTARAGIUM. The profits arising to the priest from the people's offering at the altar. Out of these customary dues the religious assigned a portion to the vicar: so the prior and canons of St. Frideswide, De præfate ecclesiæ nostræ (i. e. de Oakle) et capellarum ejusdem altaragiis, ut teneantur congruam portionem reservatam eidem vicario de qua valent commodè sustentari, ii. 86. Sometime the whole altarage was allotted to the vicar, Habebit vicarius de Cestreton totum altaragium, ii. 203. The regular and secular priests invented a great many pretty arts to augment the altar-offerings; among other, this one was so ludicrous, and conveyed such thoughts of impurity, that it was expressly prohibited by the great reformer of his age, Bishop Grosthed. Audivimus autem unde non medicriter dolemus,—quod quidam sacerdotes hujus lucri plenas injungunt pœnitentias, quales sunt, quod mulier cognita a viro post partum ante suam purificationem deportet deinceps oblationem ad altare cum qualibet muliere purificanda in eadem parochia—quod penitus inhibemus. Constit. Roberti Episc. Lincoln. MS. f. 3. Since the Reformation, several disputes arose what dues were comprehended under the title of altaragium, which were thus remarkably determined in a trial in the Exchequer in Michaelmas term, 21 Eliz. on Thursday, November 12. Upon the hearing of the matter betwixt Ralph Turner, vicar of West Haddon, and Edward Andrews, it is ordered, that the said vicar shall have, by reason of the words (altaragium cum manso competententi) contained in the composition of the profits assigned for the vicar's maintenance, all such things as he ought to have by these words, according to the definition thereof made by the Reverend Father in God John Bishop of London, upon conference with the civilians, viz. David Hewes, judge of the Admiralty, Bartholomew Clerk, dean of the Arches, John Gibson, Henry Joanse, Lawrence Hewes, and Edward Stanhope, all doctors of the civil law: that is to say, by altaragium, tithes of wool, lambs, colts, calves, pigs, goslings, chickens, butter, cheese, hemp, flax, honey, fruits, herbs, and such other small tithes, with offerings that shall be due within the parish of West Haddon.

And the like case was for Norton in Northamptonshire, heard in this court within these two or three years, upon the hearing ordered in the like manner.

Which judgment, I presume, was grounded on these and the like authorities. Vicarius de Colingham habeat totum altaragium, exceptis decimis fœni et nutrimentum animalium provenientium de dominico domini regis. Mon. Ang. tom. 3. p. 139.—Ita quod prædictus vicarius—prædictis oblationibus et conventibus, non Haddis aut garl is nisi plantatis aut pede fossis ad altaragia communiter spectantibus contentus, &c. Will. Thorn. cap. 30. § 4, &c. Yet it seems to be certain, that the religious, when they allotted the altaragium in part or whole to the vicar or capellane, meant only the customary and voluntary offerings at the altar, for some divine office or service of the priest, and not any share of the standing tithes, whether predial or mixed.

AMASIA. A mistress or concubine, ab amando, as amorous, amiable, &c. Henricus primus filius Williclmi Bastard dedit Editham filiam Forne Amasiam suam Roberto de Olleio secundo in uxorem, i. 119.

AMERCIAMENTUM. A pecuniary punishment imposed upon offenders a la mercie, at the mercy of the court, and therefore in our law cases is frequently called misericordia: and therefore this difference is commonly stated between finis and amercements; finis are punishments certain and determined by some statute; amercements are arbitrary impositions proportioned to the fault, at the discretion of the court. If the amercement were too grievous, there was a relief to be sued by a writ called moderata misericordia. The amercements in county courts or the assizes held by itinerant judges, were sometimes granted by the king as a special profit and privilege to a servant or favourite: so king Hen. III. to his brother Richard, earl of Cornwall, i. 308. The amercements in the view of frank-pledge or court-leet, were due to the lord, and received by his bailiffs, ballivi comitis Gloucestrie venient quolibet anno semel ad tenendum visum Franciplegii in eodem manerio, et asportabunt omnia amerciamenta inde proveniencia, i. 450. A common privilege that persons should be amerced by their peers or equals: so in the lords court within the manor of Hedington,—Quoties contigerit aliquem predictorum hominum pro aliquo delicto quoquo modo amerciari in eadem curia, per pares suos et non per alios amercientur, et hoc secundum modum delicti, i. 454. Amerciamenta ille-vabilia, were such amercements as through poverty or escape of the persons became desperate debts, and were deducted in the accounts of the bailiff or steward, or collector of rents and dues. The prior and canons of Burcester to the receiver of their rents at Kirtlington,—In allocatis eidem pro amerciamendis ille-vabilibus hoc anno vi. den. ii. 251, 252.

ANABATA. Anaboladium, a Gr. ἀναβαλ-λῆσαι, to cast over or cover. A cope or sacerdotal vest to cover the back and shoulders of the priest. Et in bolt rubei say apud

ANCA<sup>c</sup>. A goose, generally female, in distinction from the gander, which in the north they call a steg. Anca seems a corruption from anserina,—Cum decima ancarum et ovorum—porcellos, ancas, ova. Anca, ancus, was the thigh or hind leg. Affer quatuor panes, affer ancum porci, i. e. a leg of pork. Hence a hanch of venison, up to the hanches in dirt; and hence with some allusion, to have a hank upon, to hanker after.

ANNIVERSARIUM. An anniversary, called by our forefathers a year-day and a mind-day, i. e. a memorial-day. The yearly return of the day of death of any person, which the religious registered in their obitua or martyrology, and annually observed in gratitude to their founders and benefactors. It was sometime made an express condition in a charter, as by Yoland, countess of Dreux, to the abbey of Brucil,—quod singulis annis post obitum meum anniversarium solempniter celebrabunt, i. 267. Reginald de Pavelly, founder of the abbey of Lisle-Dieu, in the diocese of Rhemes, had his anniversary there observed October 29, which practice of the religious was a great advantage to the history of men and times. A pietance, or portion of meat and drink, was sometime granted for this purpose. Henry, vicar of Weston, gave six shillings yearly rent to the abbey of Oseney,—quos quidem attornavi ad unam pietantiam faciendam in conventu Osneiensi annuatim in perpetuum in die anniversarii mei obitus pro anima mea, i. 400. This was one of the trading arts of the religious, who frequently sold the purchase at very considerable rates. Edmund Rede, Esq. gave largely to the abbot and convent of Dorchester for their sale of this privilege,—Unum anniversarium novem lectionum videlicet placebo et dirige semel in anno, ii. 328. Whatsoever was given to this use was forfeited to the crown by stat. 1 Edw. VI. cap. 16. The surviving relations made customary offerings at the altar, at every return of such anniversary, in gratitude to the memory, and in charity to the soul, of their departed friend: this the religious did sometimes assign for a part of the vicar's maintenance, Omnes oblationes in nuptiis, purificationibus, anniversariis, in cera, pecunia, ovis, aut fructibus, ii. 81.

ANTECESSOR. The word not so often applied to the ancestor of a family, as either to the pre-possessor of an estate, or the predecessor in an office. Sicut antecessores sui tenuerunt melius de me et antecessoribus meis, i. 98. Alexander Episcopus Lincoln, &c. sicut antecessores nostri eam præfatæ ecclesiæ de Egnesham dederunt et concesserunt, i. 122.

APPENDICIA. The same as pertinentiæ, the appendages or appertenances of any estate. So Simon, earl of Northampton, gave to the Knights Templars, Meritonam cum omnibus appendiciis suis, i. 150. Hence our pentices or pent-houses, appendicia domus, a pent-stock, &c.

APPELLATIO. An appeal from some sentence or jurisdiction to a presumed higher judicature; which appeals were frequent, both from the civil magistrates to ecclesiastical powers, and again from the courts Christian to the common law. This liberty of appealing was expressly renounced, to make some compacts the more firm and unalterable. So the prior and convent of Burcester, upon a bargain with the abbot and convent of Oseney; Renuntiantes in hoc facto omnibus impellationibus super hoc habitis, appellationibus, in integrum restitutioni, regiæ prohibitioni, et omni alii remedio juris canonici et civilis, i. 490. Appeals to Rome, when made common, were so great an interruption of all justice, that they were forbid, and severely punished. So when Gilbert de Segreve, archdeacon of Oxford, in 34 Edw. I. appealed from the king's court to the pope, he was summoned to Westminster, and obliged to renounce his appeal by oath, and to find pledges for appearing at the next parliament, i. 504.

APPROPRIATIO. The granting a parochial church, or the great tithes and better profits, ad proprios usus, to the proper uses of some religious house, to enjoy for ever; whence they called it perpetuum beneficium. The prior and convent of Burcester had two parts of the great tithe in Compton-Basset appropriated to them, nomine perpetui beneficii, i. 288. In this manner was the illegitimate birth of most appropriations: the lay patrons devoutly and (as they thought) innocently resigned their right of advowson to religious houses, who by their interest and money procured from the popes and bishops the annexation of all tithes and profits to themselves, i. 440. They had many artificial pretences to allege to the pope and the diocesan, to extort their consent, ii. 117. The methods of appropriating, and the fatal abuse of thus robbing church and clergy, discoursed at large, ii. 42. The appropriators often enroached upon the remnant of the vicar; for which invasion of right the stout vicar of Ellesfeld, in 24 Ed. I. entered an action against the prior and canons of St. Frideswide, i. 462. A canon or other religious, who was not a monk, by the pope's indulgence, could hold a vicarage with his station in the convent; Provisio tamen quod ecclesia (scil. de Acle) per idoneum canonicum domus vestre prædictæ (scil. S. Frideswidæ) prout sede apostolica vobis est indultum, et antiquitus extitit consuetum, deserviat: qui quidem canonicus tanquam vicarius perpetuus a loci diocesano curam animarum recipiet, i. 536. Unum de canonicis nostris ut olim fuisse dignoscitur rite electum et ad ejusdem ecclesiæ vicariam legitime institutum accepimus, ii. 8. The religious took advantage of the vacancy of a church, and then prevailed with the patron to appropriate, and give them immediate possession: so Robert Gait, in the time of Hugh Wells, bishop of Lincoln, gave the vacant church of Hampton-Gay to the abbot and convent of Oseney, and then notified it to the bishop, desiring him to give them admittance; Noverit discretio vestra quod defuncto G. persona ecclesiæ de Hampton meandem ecclesiam vacantem dedisse et concessisse in perpetuam elemosinam abbati et conventui de Oseney, i. 579. At other times the religious obtained leave to appropriate a church of their own patronage, when it should next be vacant, and then, impatient for their prey, bought out the incumbent, or got it void by resignation or exchange, ii. 1. One great mischief of appropriations was this; in the ordination of a vicarage, the altarage, or voluntary oblations, were often divided between the vicar and the religious, which soon lessened the charity and piety of Christian people, who grew less free in their offerings, when they found a great share must go away from the parish priest, to whom they designed that bounty, ii. 81. The religious very apt to oppress the vicar, by throwing procurations and other burdens on them, and particularly when they had covenanted to maintain a capellane in some chapel of ease within the parish, they shifted off that charge, and cast it on the vicar, ii. 272. That the bishops might not lose by granting their assent to appropriations, they sometime compounded with the religious for an annual pension to answer the dues that might otherwise arise to their see from the succession of rectors: so in the appropriating of Merton to the abbey of Eghesham; Reservamus insuper nobis et successoribus nostris episcopis Lincoln. nomine recompensationis indemnitate et commoditatis que de dicta ecclesia obvenire solebat in singulis vacationibus ejusdem, et poterit verisimiliter obvenire, pensionem annuam viginti solidorum ex causa consimili, ii. 119. One great and popular pretension of appropriating benefices to the use of the religious was, to enable them the better to relieve the poor; and in the form of appropriation it was sometimes expressly ordained, that a perpetual portion should be allotted, at the discretion of the bishop, to relieve the indigent parishioners: so when the church of Charlton-upon-Ottmoor was given to the nuns of Henwode, com. Warwick; Et etiam pro recreatione pauperum parochianorum ipsius ecclesiæ alia perpetua portio moderanda arbitrio diocesani loci deputari debet, ii. 176. 204. After the statute of mortmain, the religious still carried on their gainful trade by obtaining a dispensation from the king: so in the appropriation of Merton to the abbey of Eghesham, p. 482. Vide Vicarage.

APPROPRIARE ad honorem. To bring a manor within the extent and liberty of such an honour. Petrus de Asherugge tunc seneschallus honoris sancti Walerici appropriavit dictum manerium ad honorem sancti Walerici, i. 474.

APPROPRIARE communam. To separate and enclose an open common, or part of it. Quod possint sibi appropriare et includere pro voluntate sua tres acras prædictæ placæ, i. c. in communi pastura, i. 479.

APPRENTICIUS. An apprentice or young person bound by indentures to a master, who, upon such covenants, is to teach him his mystery or trade. In 12 Edw. III. confirmavi Willielmo fratri meo

apprenticio apud London. ii. 72. This, I think, is the oldest authority for the name of a servile apprentice: at least I have met with no mention of them till the beginning of the next reign, when Henry de Knighton sub an. 1381. apprenticii quoque relictis magistris suis illuc accurrebant. And Tho. Walsingham, in Ric. II. p. 301. De Londoniis multi apprenticii, plures servi, sumptis albis capuciis, invitis magistris et dominis sunt profecti. The students and professors of the common law had the appellation of apprentitii ad legem, apprentitii ad barras, juris regni apprentitii: of which titles see Selden's Notes on Fortescue, p. 2.

ARCHIDIACONUS. Archdeacons were at first employed by the bishops in more servile duties, and always in subservience to the urban or rural deans of Christianity, to whom they were as much inferior as their order of deacon was to that of priest; till by the advantages of a personal attendance on the bishop, and a delegation to examine and report some causes, and a commission to visit some remoter parts of a diocese, their power and dignity was advanced above the archpresbyter or dean, ii. 348. Archdeacons within the diocese of Lincoln collected the spiritualities of the bishop, and paid him some pensions or portions out of their office; Summa redditus de quo archidiaconi respondent episcopo Lincoln. per an. ccxvii. xvis. vii. i. 506.

ARGENTUM ALBUM. Silver coin, or current money. By doomsday tenure some rents to the king were paid in argento albo, common silver money; others in libris ursoris et pensatis, in the metal and full weight. So the king's manor at Brehull; Reddit per annum xxviii. libras de albo argento, et pro foresta xii. libras ursoris et pensatis, i. 230. Hence in the next age that rent which was paid in money was called blanchfearm, now the white-rent; and what they paid in provision was termed black-mail.

ARIETUM levatio. An old sportive exercise, which seems to have been the same with running at the quintan, or quintal, which was to fix a post perpendicularly in the ground, and place on the top of it a slender beam turning on a spindle, with a slob or flat board at the one end, and a bag of dirt or sand on the other; that while the rider strikes at the shield or board, he must shew his strength and dexterity to escape a blow from the turn of the other end. This sport might be called arietum levatio, because such violent manner of riding at and striking did seem to resemble the Roman ways of playing their battering rams; or rather because the shield or board upon the striking end was made in the fashion of a ram's head; or because they fastened the horns of a ram at the returning end, to make the blow more comical. This customary English sport, practised usually at weddings, was either so ludicrous or so dangerous, that it was often forbid by ecclesiastical authority. Among the inquiries to be made by the archdeacons within the diocese of Lincoln, an. 1232. Au ulicubi leventur arietes, vel fiant scotulla, vel decertetur in praeundo cum vexillo matricis ecclesiae. In the synod at Worcester, an. 1240, can. 38, a strict command was given, Ne intersint ludis inhonestis, nec sustineant ludos fieri de rege et regina, nec arietes levare, nec palestras publicas. There be two other authorities that seem more directly to imply it was the same with the quintan. A constitution of that great preserver of church discipline, Bishop Grossthead, commands, that in every church should be published a prohibition, Ne quisquam levet arietes super rotas, vel alios ludos statuat, in quibus decertatur pro bravio, nec hujusmodi ludis quisquam intersit. And another constitution of Walter, bishop of Durham, an. 1255, Insuper interdiciamus levationes arietum super rotas, et ludos quibus decertatur ad bravium exequendum. In both which injunctions, the expression of levare super rotas seems to determine it a versatile sport, like a beam or rafter turning equilibrated upon a pole or post erect. And the bravium, or prize, which was to be given to the victor, is so described in the Quintal, by Mat. Paris, sub an. 1253. Eo tempore juvenes Londinenses statuto pavone pro bravio, ad stadium quod quintana vulgariter dicitur, vires proprias et equorum cursus sunt experti. From whence I am apt to conclude, that quintana and arietum levatio were the same manly exercise, or at least that the latter was but a varied improvement of the former, i. 28.

ARMA DARE. To make a knight. An. 1144. 9, 10. King Steph. Ego Brientius filius comitis quem bonus rex Henricus nutrit, et cui arma dedit et honorem, i. 138.

ARMA CAPERE. To be made a knight. An. 1278. 5, 6. Edw. III. Ad die quo dictus comes (scil. Henricus de Lacy) arma militaria a domino Henrico rege patre nostro cepit, i. 408.

ARMIGERI. Not only a title of dignity, but the common appellation of servants, especially in convents. I suppose the better sort of servants, yet such as wore liveries in the priory of Burcester, where, in 4 Hen. VI. the prior and bursar accounted; Et in blodeo panno empto pro armigeris et valectis prioris de Johanne Bandy de magna Tue, ii. 256. This is the same servile office which by Sir Henry Spelman is called quædam species armigerorum, in the abbey of Battle, com. Suss. where the abbot and convent granted to Hugh Fraunceis armigero suo, a yearly pension or wages, and a customary livery; Ac etiam liberaturam nostram, de secta armigerorum nostrorum, quotiens nos liberaturam generalem dare contigerit. Necnon tabulam suam infra idem monasterium in aula nostra prout alicui armigerorum nostrorum ibidem deservitur seu deservietur, dum tamen idem Hugo Fraunceis nobis et successoribus nostris suum congruum servitium medio tempore, corporis sui valetudine durante, realiter exhibeat. Possibly these armigeri of the religious (like the military armour-bearers) might be their retinue of the better rank, who carried their banners in any public procession, and attended in some other of the more gentle offices; as our bedelli armigeri, esquire beadles.

ARRERAGIUM. Arrcars, or debts unpaid within the due time. From the French urrier, a retro, behind. Faciatis habere feodum suum una cum arreragiis suis, i. 408. Omnimoda computa et arreragia computorum ac relevia exitus et alias forisfactus sive forisfacturas et alia debita quæcunque, ii. 110. Respondent de arreragiis ultimi comiti, ii. 248. Hence the rear of an army, the rier-land, the rier-county, or some place appointed by the sheriff after the end of his office to receive the king's arrears.

ARTICULUS. An article or complaint exhibited by way of libel in a court Christian; Possint eos et eorum successores per omnem censuram ecclesiasticam ad omnium et singulorum præmissorum observationem absque articuli seu libelli petitione, et quocunque strepitu judiciali compellere, i. 490.

GLOSSARY.

ARURA pro Aratura. Ploughing. Una arura, one day's work at the plough; Tenet in bondagio et debet unam aruram in yeme, et unam sarculaturam, i. 575. Hence in Wiltshire to ear is to plough, and earring is a day's ploughing.

ASSARTUM, essartum, exartum. A piece of land within the limits of a forest, grubbed up or divested of the wood and trees, and converted into tillage. Manwood derives it from an old French word, assartir, to make plain. Spelman thinks essartum was from the Latin exertum, pulled or rooted up. Some derive it a sarriendo, weeding of fields. Skinner runs into more fanciful conjectures, a Lat. exarturare, i. e. artus seu ramos arboris descendere, arborem detruncare, vel si malis a Lat. exsaltuare, (i. e.) saltum in agrum cultum transmutare, facili sane l in e transitu. Mr. Somner is much more rational and happy, who thinks exartum to be a contraction of exaratum; to which opinion the learned Du Fresne inclines. *Alii denique ab exaro, unde exaratum, ager exaratus, præscissus, et per contractionem exartum, uti scribi passim in vetustioribus chartis observare est. Quam ultimam sententiam fulciunt tabulæ veteres in chronico Besuensi, an. 5. Ludov. Imp. p. 513. ubi exaratum scribitur. Edificiis desuper positis, campisque, pratis, sylvis, exaratis, pomiferis, &c. Simon de Gerardmulin confirmed to the abbey of Missenden the chapel of Holy Cross in Pidington, et totum assartum quod adjacet, i. 147. Reddendo pro prædicto assarto unum denarium, i. 247. Land not to be assarted within the bounds of a forest without licence from the king, nor could that be obtained without a previous inquisition ad quod dampnum. Jurati dicunt quod foret dampnum et valde nocumentum foreste, si tres acre assarte essent in quadam plana que vocatur Fernhurst in foresta de Bernwode, i. 353.*

ASSISA ab assidendo, originally a court wherein the judges, as assessors, did hear and determine any cause. Thence the word assisa was translated to signify an ordinance or statute-law, a trial, a jury, a writ, &c. We now apply the word to no other court of judicature but the county courts held by the itinerant judges, called the assises.

ASSISA MAGNA. A more solemn trial by a jury of twelve or more knights; to be elected and returned by four other knights, to give their verdict in a cause prosecuted per breve de recto, i. e. where the dispute lies not of the bare possession, but of the right and property; distinguished from the assisa parva or minor, where the question is only of possession, in which the jury were twelve ordinary legal or free men, returned by the sheriff. Roger de Anjory quit claimed to the abbot and convent of Oseney two knights fees in Weston; *Unde eos implacitavit in curia domini regis per breve de recto, et prosecutum est quousque dictus abbas et conventus posuerunt se super magnam assisam, i. 362. Johannes de Hundlo defendit jus suum, et ponit se in magnam assisam domini regis, ii. 14. In a great assise the sheriff returned four knights of the same county by the king's precept; *Vice comiti Oxon. per breve nostrum de judicio preceptum fuit quod venire faciat coram vobis quatuor milites de com. predicto, ii. 67. Which four knights were to appear in court at a day prefixed, and there, in presence of the plaintiff and defendant, or their attornies, were to elect out of themselves and others, twelve, thirteen, or sometimes sixteen knights, to be summoned against another day of hearing; Quatuor milites in propriis personis suis venerunt et super sacramentum suum in presencia parcium predictarum elegerunt de seipsis et aliis sexdecim milites, ii. 122. Ponit se in magna assisa domini regis—et offert domino regi dimidium marcam pro inquisitione seisini predictæ,—dies datus est partibus predictis,—ad audiendam electionem magne assise dom. regis, et tunc venerunt quatuor milites ad faciendam electionem illam, ii. 116. The twelve or more knights elected by the first four, were to be all such as held lands and tenements within the county, or else incapable to serve on the jury; *Quidam illorum de terris et tenementis que tempore electionis predictæ in com. predicto habuerunt, se totaliter dimiserunt, ii. 68. If between the election of knights and the time of trial, any of them were dead, or sick, or dispossessed of estates within the county, others, by the king's precept to the sheriff, were to be elected in their room; Si vobis constiterit aliquos de predictis militibus sic electis mortuos esse, sive de terris et tenementis suis predictis se dimisisse, sive perpetuo languidos esse, ut est dictum, tunc loco eorum alios legales milites

GLOSSARY.

ejusdem com. eligi et ulterius in eodem negotio facere, ii. 68. If the jurors so elected refused or neglected to appear, the sheriff was commanded to distrain their goods and chattles, and arrest their persons, and bring them into court; Precipimus tibi—quod distringas Edmundum de Cornubia militem, &c. electos in curia nostra—per omnes terras et catalla sua in balliva tua—et quod habeas corpora eorum coram justiciariis nostris apud Ebor. ii. 68.

Assisæ judicium. Judgment of the court given against plaintiff or defendant upon default; Ipsi non veniunt ad hunc diem, unde judicium assisæ capiatur versus eos per eorum defaultam, i. 501.

Assisa forestæ. The laws or particular orders of the forest established in an assise or court, held by the forest officers, Johannes filius Nigelli habet in bosco domini regis housbore et hepbore cum omnibus feodis forestario pertinentibus secundum assisam forestæ, i. 375. Priorissa de Littlemore devastavit boscum suum de Shottore contra assisam forestæ, ii. 141.

Assisa ultimæ præsentationis. Assise of darrein presentment. A trial for the right of patronage, by inquiring who took the precedent turns of presentation for the more easy discovering and fixing the property of the advowson; Thomas abbas de Egnesham per attornatum suum optulit se versus Luciam quæ fuit uxor Thomæ de Leuknore et Petrum de Schervyndon quod essent hic ad hunc diem audituri assisam ultimæ præsentationis, i. 500.

Assisa panis et cervisie. The power or privilege of assising or adjusting the weights and measures of bread and beer. As the weight of bread prescribed by the Vice-Chancellor, and supervised by the clerk of the market, is still called the size of bread, so half a crust, or a farthing bread, in Oxford, is in Cambridge called a size of bread; and a servitor is there a sizar, or one who is to live upon such an assised allowance. Hence to size, i. e. to match cloth, silk, &c. to get more of the same assise or proportion. Hence size, for height and stature, of a middle size. Sizely, in the north, is proud and coy, &c. Sir Ric. d'Amory, in 18 Edw. II. was sysor, or had the assise of bread and beer within the city and suburbs of Oxford, for the yearly rent of one hundred shillings; but on complaint of the university and city, the king granted back that privilege to the mayor and vice-chancellor, i. 564.

Assisus. Dimised or firmed out for such an assise or certain rent in money or provisions. Terra assisa was commonly opposed to terra dominica; this last being held in demesne, or occupied by the lord; the other let out to inferior tenants. So among the lands of the Knights Templars belonging to their preceptory of Sandford; Apud Covele de dono Matildis reginæ habentur quatuor hidæ, quarum duce sunt in dominico, et duce assisæ ab hominibus, i. 197. Apud Meritone duce in dominico, et quinque assisæ ab hominibus, ib. Hence redditus assisus, the set or standing rent. Sunt ibidem de redditu assiso, xls. i. 444. Summa reddituum assisorum de manerio, i. 506. Hence to assess or allot the proportion and rates in taxes and payments by assessors in assessment.

Association. On the death of king Edward I. Henry Lacy, earl of Lincoln, Anthony Bee, bishop of Durham, and divers others, barons, entered into a solemn association to defend king Edward II. and the rights of his crown, i. 507. In 5 Edw. II. Thomas, earl of Lancaster, and several peers, associated by solemn oath to relieve the oppression of holy church, and to recover the just liberties of the kingdom, i. 520.

Attachiare. To attach or seize upon. Attachiare bona, to distrain goods. Attachiare personam, to arrest a person. From the Fr. attacher, to attack or take into custody, which the learned Du Fresne supposes derived from the old Gallic tasca, taschia, the rent of land or tenement, from the British tase, tribute, tascyd, collector of the tribute, (whence our tasque, or imposed labour; a tasquer, or day labourer; a tasque-master, &c.) So as attacher was no more at first than to gather rent, or collect tribute, or else upon refusal to take it by force, as a debt and forfeiture to the state; Tibi precipimus quod ipsum Ychelum attachies, ita quod corpus ejus habeas coram baronibus, i. 468. Robertus Frere et Joshua Philhppes attachiati fuerunt, quod transierunt cum carectis suis ultra pratam domini de Langeford, ii. 86.

Attachiamenta bonorum. A distress taken upon the goods of persons sued for personal estate by the legal attachiatores or bailiffs, and kept in their custody as a security to answer the action. It was a privilege granted to the abbot and convent of Oseney, to have the attachments of all their tenants quit claimed or released; Omnia attachiamenta hominum nostrorum et plegiorum suorum habenda quietam clamata sunt, i. 275.

ATTACHIAMENTA forestæ. All timber toppings and other vert felled or cut within the liberties of a forest without the view of the verdor and licence of the king, were forfeited, and to be attached by the forestar; Nichil de boscis prædictis capere poterunt nisi per liberationem forestarii—absque attachiamento et impedimento forestarii prædicti, i. 529.

ATTACHIAMENTA de spinis et bosco. The privileges granted to the officers of a forest to take to their own use thorns, brush, and windfall trees within such precincts. So John Fitz-Nigell, forestar of Bernwode; Debet habere feodum in bosco domini regis videlicet attachiamentum de spinis de bosco suo, et de bosco qui vento prostituitur, i. 295.

ATTORNARE rem. To attourn, or turn over money and good, i. e. to assign and appropriate them to a certain use; Quos quidem quatuor solidos—attornavi ad unam pietantiam faciendam in conventu Osneiensi, i. 400.

ATTORNARE personam. To depute a representative or proxy, as in trials at common law, the plaintiff or defendant retained attornatum suum, positum in loco suo ad lucrandum vel perdendum, i. 580.

AVERIA. Cattle. Sir Henry Spelman deduces the word from the Fr. ovre, work, as if chiefly working cattle; but more probably from avoir, to have or possess, the word sometime including all personal estate, as catalla did all goods and chattles: but commonly taken for all kind of stock or feeding cattle; Ad introitum et exitum cum averiis meis et suis, i. 265. Communem pasturam ad averia sua, i. 320. Propriam habet communam ad omnia averia in sylva dictorum prioris et conventus, ii. 128. In Northumberland they now say a false aver, for a sluggish horse or lazy beast, perhaps from averia; yet the honoured Spelman rather derives it from the old Lat. affri, or affra, country horses, and cites the proverb, A false aver or afer. In the north they likewise use average for what in Kent we call the gratten, in other parts the eddish, in Wales the adlodh, the roughings, the stubble and pasture left in corn-fields after the harvest is carried. From averia comes averare, which Spelman interprets to carry goods in a waggon, or upon loaded horses; but it seems rather to drive cattle to a fair or market; Omnes homines (i. e. de Kyngston) debent ter averare ad Bristoliam. Cartul. Glaston. Abbot. MS. f. 40.

AVER-CORN. A reserved rent in corn paid to religious houses by their tenants or firmers, which Mr. Somner deduces from the Fr. ovre, or ovrage, work, as if corn drawn to the lord's granary by the working cattle of the tenant. But it seems more natural (like averia) from avoir, to have or receive such a quantity of corn. I suppose it owing to the Saxon Cýpic-precæt, or church-scot, a measure of corn brought to the priest on St. Martin's day, as an oblation for the first-fruits of the earth. Under this title the religious had a reserve of corn paid yearly, as in an inquisition of the estate of the abbey of Glastonbury, an. 1201, 2 king John; Waltone reddit in gabulo assiso iv. lib. xvi. sol.—de churchscet ii. summæ et dimid. frumenti. Cartul. Abbot. Glaston. MS. f. 38. Which churchscet, by a Norman epithet, might easily be called aver-corn. Possibly from hence the northern word havers, oats, the like aspirate as in haver de pois, for avoir du poids. But more probably from a German original, habern, oats, in the high Dutch.

AUDITORES. Those religious in a convent who were deputed to state, examine, and pass the house accounts; Computavit coram dominis—auditoribus deputatis, i. 405. Hence the auditors, auditory, audit-house, audit-time, in cathedral and collegiate bodies.

AVES DICH. A corruption of Offa's ditch, which seems to have been at first the boundary between the West Saxon and Mercian kingdoms, and afterwards maintained to keep off the incursions of the Danes into these parts, from Northampton and other quarters. It appears to have been continued from Wansdike in Wilts, to Mixbury, com. Oxon, i. 54. A dike, in the north, is a ditch to a dry hedge, where the wet ditch is called a sough. From dike comes the southern doke, a deep furrow in arable land, or any sudden fall of ground.

AUXILIUM petere. To pray aid in a suit or cause, i. e. when an inferior tenant is impleaded, and not capable to defend the right in his own name, he prayeth aid of the superior lord to assist and justify his plea; Johannes de Handlo implacitatus de manerio de Pidington—dicit quod ipse non potest predicto priori sine ipso domino rege inde respondere, et petit auxilium de ipso domino rege, ii. 12.

AUXILIUM curiæ. A precept or order of court for the citing or *sub pœnâ*ing a party; Vocat inde ad warrantiam Johannem Sutton de Duddele chevalier et Isabellam uxorem ejus, ut habeat eos hic in Oct. S. Michaelis per auxilium curiæ, ii. 112.

AUXILIUM facere alicui in curia regis. To be another's friend and solicitor in the king's court; a fiduciary office, solemnly granted by some courtiers to their dependants in the country; Sciant præsentis et futuri quod ego Bernardus de S. Walerico concessi Rogero de Bercheley et hæredibus suis auxilium et consilium meum in curia domini mei regis Angliæ, i. 174.

AUXILIUM regis. Vide Scutagium.

AUXILIUM vicecomitum. The aid or customary dues paid to the sheriff for the better support of his office. Prior de Kime, com. Linc. tenet duas carucatas terre in Thorpe per servitium xl. denariorum per annum ad auxilium vicecomitis. Mon. Ang. tom. ii. 245. a. An exemption from this duty was sometime granted by the king as a special privilege. So king Henry II. to the priory of St. Osith, of Chich. in Essex, Sint ipsi et omnes homines sui liberi et quieti de auxiliis vicecomitum et præpositorum hundredorum, ib. tom. ii. 184. So king Henry II. granted to the tenants within the honors of Walingford and Bercestred, ut quieti sint de auxilio vicecomitum et servitium, i. 157.

AYSIAMENTA. Easements, from the Fr. aîse, easy; or from the Sax. Eað, easy or ready, which Chaucer calls cith and eth; and the Northumbrians still use ceth, the Welsh esmwyth. In grants of conveyance and demise, aysiamenta did include any liberty of passage, highway, water-course, or other customary benefit, for the ease and accommodation of the owners or inhabitants of any house, or the tenants of any land; Quiete bene in pace et jure hæreditario in omnibus aysiamentis infra villam et extra ad dictum messuagium—pertinentibus, i. 272. Cum omnibus pertinentiis suis valoribus et aysiamentis, i. 323. Hence a house of office is called an easement, commonly a house of ease.

AXATIO carectæ. Putting on the axle-tree of a waggon; Et in uno axe empto cum axatione unius carectæ, ii. 253.

B

Baius equus. A bay horse. From Lat. badius, Gr. βαῖδιος, a βαῖς, and βαῖον, a bough, or branch of a palm-tree; so as badius was coloris Phœnicei; Et de uno equo baiio empto de Wilhelmo Salt, ad stabulum prioris xxvi. sol. viii. den. ii. 255. Hence baiard, an appellation for horse. Prov. None so bold as blind bayard. Or, in Chaucer's phrase,

He ben as bold as is Bayard the blind.

Hence Bayard's-watering, Bayard's-green, &c.

BALLIVA. A bailiwick; from the Fr. bailler, to deliver or commit. Ballivus was the person to whom an authority and trust was committed within such a district; balliva was the whole district within which the said trust was to be executed. A whole county was so called in respect of the sheriff; a whole barony, in respect of the lord or baron; a hundred, in respect of the chief constable; a manor, in respect of the steward; a circuit of villages and hamlets, with respect to the capital manor, where the religious held their court, or had a mansion-house. So the abbot and convent of Oseney had their balliva de Weston, which contained Weston, Blechesdon, Burcestre, Chestreton, Wreechweke, Bucknell, Audley, Arncote, and Northbrook, i. 83. The circuit within the liberties of the constable of the castle of Wallingford, called by him balliva mea, i. 155. The sheriff of every county had two itinerant bailiffs, who were to execute writs and judgments, &c. Johannes Landels, vicecomes Oxon. dilectis sibi Johanni de Baldindon et Roberto Louches hac vice ballivis suis itinerantibus salutem, ii. 125. The secular clergy sometimes took these mercenary offices, prohibited by a constitution of the excellent Bishop Grosthead; Ad amputandum quoque omnem cupiditatis speciem inhibemus firmiter non solum ordinaria sed speciali auctoritate apostolica, ne beneficiati vel ad sacros ordines promoti sint vicecomites vel justitiiarii seculares vel ballivas teneant, unde laicis potestatibus obligantur ad ratiocinia de ballivis eisdem reddenda. Constit. Rob. Episc. Lincoln. MS. Vide præpositus.

BARROW. A large hillock, or mount of earth, raised or cast up, which may seem to have been one of the Roman tumuli or sepulchres, i. 24. From the Sax. boep̃, a raised heap of earth, or rather from beapu, beopa, which was commonly taken for a grove or toft of trees on the top of a hill. From the old Gallic bar a high place, from whence several towns in Italy and France, from their lofty situation, had this name of bar and bari. One of the most noted mountains in North Wales is called Berriw. Hence the bars, properly a partition set upon rising steps. The bar or gate of a city, as Temple-Bar in London, Bootham-Bar in York. The barriers or mound to fence off the crowd in military sports.

BAS-CHEVALIERS. Low or inferior knights, as distinguished from barons and bannerets, who were the chief or superior knights, i. 542. Hence we now call our bare simple knights inferior to baronets, knights bachelors, i. e. Bas-Chevaliers. Which in all likelihood gave name to the academical degree of Bachelors, as a quality lower than that of Masters and Doctors. So in France they call the suburbs the basville, or the inferior town. The learned Spelman very rationally derives the opprobrious name of bastard from the Fr. bas, and Sax. ƿeoƿt, rise or original, as a person of a base and vile extract. The same termination remains in upstart, a fellow of a new and late rise.

BASSE. A collar for cart-horses made of flags; In tribus coleris, uno basse, cum tribus cupistris, emptis apud Sterisbrugge, ii. 253. Hence the round matted cushion of flags used for kneeling in churches is called basse, in Kent a trush.

BATELLUS. A boat or small marine vessel. It is a very frivolous conjecture of Dr. Skinner, Nescio an nostrum boat ortum sit a Teut. Bott nuntius q. d. cymba inter- nuntia classis. It is more certain, the Lat. tatus, Hispan. batel, Ital. batello, came from the Sax. bat, and that from the old Brit. bád, which in present Welsh and Irish is a boat. Possessiones, naves, batellos, ac bona et catalla sua quæcunque, ii. 375. Hence a bottom, which is still a common word for a marine vessel of burden, a good bottom: whence the naval term of bottomry, when the master of a ship borrows money upon the credit of his vessel, or a safe voyage. Botellus the lower part of the belly, which we now call the bottom of the belly; Si stomachus vel botellus perforatus fuerit, ita ut sterqus per vulnus exierit. Leg. Frison, tit. 22.

BEAUMONT. Bellus Mons, Fair Mount. Several places of ascent and fair prospect were so called by the Normans. As the king's house in Oxford: the plat of an old fortification at Mixbury, &c.

BEDELLUS. A bedell, or cryer. Sax. býðel, a býðde, to publish, as to bid and forbid the banns of matrimony, bidding of prayers. Hence the university bedels, the bedell of beggars. The rural deans had their bedels, which we now call apparitors and summoners, to cite the clergy and church officers to visitations, and execute the orders of the court Christian, ii. 363.

BEDRIP, Bedrepe, Wedbedrip. From Sax. biddan to pray, and repe, to rip or cut corn. So as bedrepe was the customary service which inferior tenants paid to their lord in cutting down their corn, or doing any other work or labour in the field. It chiefly related to the days of work in harvest; Tenentes de Ewel debent venire in autumpno ad precariam quæ vocatur a la Bedripe. Placit. 10. Hen. III. Ernaldus caretator tenet unum messuagium et duas acras terre in duobus campis (scil. de Pidington) et reddit per annum duos solidos et alias consuetudines ad bedrepium in autumpno, ii. 138. From the Eng. bidding or praying, it was called in Lat. precaria, which did likewise comprehend any days or season, when the said servile tenants, as leadsmen, were to perform any duty or labour for their lord, which were commonly called bind-days, i. e. bidden days, when ad preces domini, at the heads, or petition of the lord or his steward, the tenants were to give their customary attendance and labour, Debet venire quolibet anno ad duas precarias carucæ cum caruca sua, Custumar. de Bello f. 60. Called also precatura and preces, which were at any indefinite time, Quilibet carectarius manerii debet arare tres acras et dimidiam inter festum Sancti Michaelis et Sancti Martini: et in vere debet arare bis ad precaturas, et in aestate, &c. Quilibet debet arare ad duas preces in hyeme, et ad duas preces in vere. Cartul. Abbat. Glaston. MS. f. 40. And therefore the more solemn bedrip in harvest was called magna precaria, to distinguish it from the other bidden-days in any different season, and different work; Johannes Boyland tenet unum cotagium, et debet invenire unum hominem ad magnam precariam in autumpe. Custumar. de Bello. f. 97. It was likewise called wedbedrip, from the Sax. peð, a covenant or agreement, (whence to wedd, wedding, wedded husband, &c.) as if a league or compact made between the lord and tenant; Robertus filius Nicholai Germain tenet unum messuagium et dimidiam virgatam in bondagio ad voluntatem domine, et debet unam aruram in yeme, et unam sarculaturam, et debet wedbedrip pro voluntate domine, i. 575. Alicia que fuit uxor Ricardi le Grey—faciet unam sarculaturam et unam wedbedripam et levationem feoni, i. 576. Hence a bedde-ale, or bid-ale, was an assignation made for neighbours to meet and drink at the house of new married persons, or other poor people, and then for all the guests to contribute to the house-keepers.

BELLUM Duellum. Duel, or combat. An old customary way of trial by arms, wherein the appellant or challenger, and the defendant or acceptor, were at a fixed time and place to engage in single combat, either by themselves, or by their deputies, and the cause was adjudged to the conqueror. This fierce practice was allowed and confirmed by the laws of Will. the Conqueror, cap. 68, 69. and those of Hen. I. cap. 45, 49. and some new orders prescribed for the regulation of it. Leg. Hen. I. cap. 59. So that it is an evident mistake in the late ingenious author of an Introduction to the History of England, that William the Conqueror endeavoured to abolish two ancient forms of trial used among the Saxons with great reverence, even during their Christian worship.—These were the trials ordeal and of camp fight. p. 246. Both these sorts of trial this King abolished as unchristian and unjust, and reduced all causes to the judgment of equals, or of a jury of twelve neighbours, and by legal forms, p. 249. When it is certain, the trial of camp-fight, or duel, was no custom peculiar to the Anglo-Saxons, but was the practice of most northern nations, especially of the Franks and Normans, and was indeed introduced by William the Conqueror, not found here as an ancient usage, much less abolished by him. He made no one order to cancel or to restrain it, but made an express law to license and authorize it. Before the conquest not one law or one example of this practice, but after the conquest some public laws, and very many precedents; Hoc genus (i. e. duelli) a Normannis (cum Anglis illis antiquariis antea ignotum erat) inductum est. Antiq. Britan. i. 103. Duellum, singulare certamen intellige, quod genus examinis, cum in Anglo-Saxonum monumentis, quod sciam, non occurrat, Normannicorum successoribus, ut verisimile est, debemus, a quibus e Normannia post conquestum, ut vocant, huc adductum reor. Somneri Gloss. in voce Duellum. I wonder Sir W. T. could fall upon such an ignorant error; but thus it is to write history without stating any times, or producing any authorities. This is to invent, not to relate. Alas, history is a very sacred subject; and though matters of opinion may admit of desultory essays, yet matters of fact must be delivered with great integrity and judgment. This camp-fight, or duelling, was of two sorts; either by court military in cases of felony or treason; or by court civil for the trial of estates: both these are antiquated, but never really abrogated. Of the latter sort, there was a solemn allowance, an. 1571. 13. Eliz. in the case of Simon Low and John Kime, plaintiffs, and Thomas Paramore, defendant, for the manor and lands in the Isle of Hartie, near Sheppey in Kent. Of the former kind, the last example was in 6. Car. I. between Donald Lord Rey, appellant, and David Ramsey, esq. defendant. But in both these instances, after a great many formalities, the matter was referred, without proceeding to actual fight. In the ninth of King Stephen, Brien Fitz-Count, lord of Walingford, sent a challenge to Henry Bishop of Winchester written in red letters, and concluding thus, Ea que in hac scripto assero contra Henricum nepotem regis Hen-

rici episcopum Wintonice præsto sum probare vel bello vel iudicio per unum clericum vel per unum laicum, i. 138.

BENEVOLENTIAM regis habere. To purchase the king's pardon and favour, and be restored to honour and estate. Thomas de S. Walerico dat regi mille marcas pro habenda benevolentia regis, et pro habendis terris suis unde disseisitus fuit, i. 239.

Beopn. A Saxon epithet of dignity and eminence. Bernwode, com. Bucks. seems to have been so called, as a forest of the greatest remark, i. 37.

Bepn. A barn, granary, or grange. The learned Fr. Junius judges it to be compounded of bepe, barley, and epn, or capn, a place, or repository: and asserts it to be so written, where it frequently occurs, in the Saxon Gospels, bepepn, and sometimes separately bepepn, which Spelman writes bepeun. So bepe-pic, a grange, or the tillage of corn; bepe-zapol, a tax on corn; bepe-ton, a name given to those villages where the religious had a common granary. But it is a fond conjecture of Dr. Skinner, that Burcester, com. Oxon. was Bepn-ceapten, or Barn-Cestre. When though I inclined to believe, it bore some relation to the first bishop of Dorchester, and might be possibly Birini-Castrum; yet I rather think it was originally Buri-Castrum, or Castrum ad Burum, from the bury or rivulet on which it stands, and which still retains the name of the Bury, though commonly the Rea: especially because the east-end of the town, now called Market-end, before the grant of a new market by Hen. VI. was always called Bury-end.

BERCARIA, berqueria, berkeria. A sheep-fold, sheep-cote, sheep-pen, or other inclosure for the safe keeping a flock of sheep. Abbreviated from berbicaria, from berber, detorted from verrex. Hence Lat. berbicus, a ram, berbica, an ewe, caro berbecina, mutton, berbicarius, bercarius, Fr. berger, a shepherd. James le Bret of Bigenhull gave four short ridges or butts of land to the priory of Burcester, ad faciendam berkeriam sive quicquid eis melius placuerit. i. 405. John de Charlton and Christian his wife gave to the abbey of Oseney a piece of land in Hokenorton, upon which stood the Berchery of Sutton, i. 497. Summa re- dituum porcoriarum et berciarum si fuerint ad firmam vs. vid. i. 506. Et in Johanne Leseby faciente sepes apud bercariam de Wrechwyke et Crokewell, xiii. den. ii. 257. Quidam bercarius de Ambresdon tenet terras in Wrechwyke, ii. 101. Hence the word bercen or barken, which is now commonly used for a yard or back-side, in Wilts, and other counties. But it first signified the small croft or close, where the sheep were brought up at night, and secured from danger of the open fields.

BERIA, berie. Most of our glossographers in the name of places have confounded the termination of berie with that of bury and borough, as if the appellative of ancient towns. Whereas the true sense of the word beria, Eng. berie, is a flat wide campaign, as from sufficient authorities is proved by the learned Du Fresne in his Glossary, voce Beria, and in his notes on the life of St. Lewis, p. 89. where he observes, that Beria S. Edmundi, mentioned by Mat. Paris sub an. 1174. is not to be taken for the town, but for the adjoining plain. To these and other his remarks on that word may be added, that many flat and wide meads and other open grounds, are still called by the name of Berie and Berie-field. So the spacious mead between Oxford and Illey was in the reign of King Athelstan called<sup>d</sup> Bery. B. Twine MS. c. ii. p. 253. Such were the Berie-meadows, which though Sir Hen. Spelman interprets to be the demesne-meadows, or manor-meadows, yet were truly any open flat meadows, that lay adjoining to any vill or firm. The same with terras in that plea between the bishop and prior of Carlisle, 18. Edw. I. Et quod rex in foresta sua prædicta (scil. de Ingleswood) potest villas ædificare, ecclesias construere, berras assartare, et ecclesias illas cum decimis terrarum illarum pro voluntate sua cuicunque voluerit conferre. Where berras assartare must be to assart or plough up the plain open heaths or downs. Hence our warrens were called cony-terries. A flat threshing floor is in the North called a berry-sted and berrying-sted, berrier, a thrasher; as Bersted in Kent was beri-sted, or an open flat place. Hence the termination of many places that are so situate, as Mixberie, Acornberie, now Cornberie, &c.

GLOSSARY.

BEZANTINE, bizantin. A piece of money coined by the western emperors at Byzantium or Constantinople, of two sorts, bisanti aureus et albus, gold and silver, both which passed in England.—The monks of Oseney, in consideration of the manor of Hampton, gave ten marks of silver to Robert de Gait, and one bezantine to his wife, i. 132. The silver besantine was the value of two shillings, i. 150. Chaucer represents the gold besantine, or besant, to have been a ducat in weight.

BIDENTES. Two yearlings: tags or sheep of the second year. William Longspe granted to the prior and canons of Burcester, Pasturam ad quinquaginta bidentes cum dominicis bidentibus meis ibidem pascendis, i. 305. The wool of these sheep being the first sheering, was sometime claimed as a heriot to the king on the death of an abbot. Vide Heriot.

BIGÆ, bigata. A cart with two wheels, drawn often with one horse. King Hen. III. confirmed to the priory of Repington, com. Derb. Unam bigam cum unico equo semel in die in bosco suo de Tikenhale errantem ad focale ad usus suos proprios portandum. Mon. Ang. tom. ii. p. 280. So king John to the abbey of Noteley, com. Buck. Concessimus eisdem canonicis duas bigas singulis annis euntes et redeuntes pro bosco ad focum eorum, i. 160. The prior and canons of Burcester allotted to the vicar of that church, duas bigas boni feni—et quatuor bigatas lignorum pro focalibus de silva prioris vocata Priorswood, ii. 394. The two paps or teats of a female are called in Essex the bigges. A cap with two long ears worn by young children and girls is now called a biggin.

BLADUM. Commonly taken for all sort of standing corn in the blade and ear; Quilibet eorum (i. e. tenentium de Hedingdon) animalia habens metet in autumpno unam acram bladi de blado domini ibidem, i. 453. In autumpno metent blada domini, ib. But in our old charters, the word bladum did include the general product of the ground; fruit, corn, flax, grass, &c. and whatever was opposed to living creatures. So when Joan de Pidington gave or confirmed the hermitage of Musewell to the abbey of Missenden, she granted all the tithe of her demesne lands in Pidington; De blado et de omnibus fructibus terre, et de ovibus et porcis, i. 103.—decimam de dominio suo tam in blado quam in agris et porcellis, i. 104. Hence Germ. blatt; Island. and Dutch, blad; Eng. blade of corn or grass, blade of a knife, shoulder-blade, and by farther metaphor a fine blade, or brisk young fellow. The word was sometime applied to all sort of grain or thrashed corn; Tria quarteria frumenti, tria quarteria avenarum, et unum quarterium fabarum,—erunt quieti de solutione prædicti bladi in perpetuum, i. 411. Sometime appropriated to bread corn or wheat, in Fr. blè. So the Knights Templars granted to Sir Wido de Meriton's wife, duas summas bladi, i. 166.

* Extract of a letter from the Author, dated Nov. 24, 1696.—“ You doe like a friend in expressing your dissent from my sense of biga, which you think (as the Roman authors intimate) should rather have been explained with respect to the horses, than wheels. It is true, Vossius in the word bigæ cites Isidore, lib. xviii. cap. xxxvi. ‘ Quadrigæ et bigæ, trigæ et sejugæ, ab eorum numero et iugo dictæ!’ But I take the old Roman acceptation of the plural bigæ to have been different from the Lat. barb. biga. If the first had alwaies respect to the horses, this other had to the wheels, for these reasons:—1. I find a citation from Beda, lib. de Orthoe. running thus; ‘ Bigæ et trigæ et quadrigæ pluraliter efferuntur, sed in nostrorum literis scriptorum bigam invenimus et quadrigam;’ where he seems to distinguish between the sense as well as the words of the old classic ‘ bigæ, trigæ, quadrigæ,’ and the later stamp ‘ bigæ et quadrigæ.’ 2. If the later ‘ biga et quadriga’ had answered the elder ‘ bigæ et quadrigæ,’ and related only to the number of horses, then by equal reason the later writers would have made ‘ trigæ et sejugæ’ for a carriage drawn by three and six horses of the Roman ‘ trigæ et sejugæ;’ whereas, having respect only to the wheels which must be two or four, they accordingly used no other compounds but ‘ biga et quadriga.’ 3. If biga had strictly implied the number of horses, we could not have met with the phrase of ‘ unam bigam cum unico equo,’ which I rightly cited from the Monasticon. 4. The word birotus was certainly ‘ vehiculum cum bimis rotis,’ which yet is made synonymous with biga by Stephanus Tornacensis, epist. 228. ‘ Bigam autem seu birotum mittere nolumus, quia fortassis oneri non sufficeret.’ 5. It were perhaps easy to prove that quadrigæ, or waggons with four wheels, were not used by our English farmers for the ordinary carriage of corn and hay, till within this last hundred years, but were only appropriated to military and more solemn uses, while all occasions of agriculture were answered by the bigæ, or carts with two wheels, as is still practised in the remoter parts of England. 6. And therefore Sir Hen. Spelman, though he imperfectly renders bigata, ‘ curtus seu plaustrum onus,’ yet he translates his meaning (or at least the editor of him) into this English, ‘ a cart-load of any thing,’ and in country language a cart-load is as different from a wagon-load as two wheels from four. And therefore Du Fresnoy, in his much more copious Glossary, renders biga, ‘ vehiculum duabus constans rotis,’ and gives authorities enough to confirm that interpretation. Indeed you justly hope more than one horse shall alwaies draw the vicar’s ‘ duas bigas boni feni.’ I say it was drawn often (not alwaies) by one horse, and give authority for it. But truly I ought to have added, that the number of horses was no more determined to one than suppose to two, but that the biga, or larger cart for corn and hay, though drawn upon two wheels, might contain near as much burden, and was drawn by near as many horses, as the ordinary waggons now are; and that therefore the donation of ‘ duas bigas boni feni,’ being the common loads then in use, ought not in equity to be now understood of two small cart-loads, drawn by one or two horses, but of customary wagon loads, drawn by one or two horses. I would have added somewhat to this effect in my Glossary, if I had foreseen it might otherwise give occasion of detracting from the vicar’s portion, which I heartily wish augmented.”

BLODEUS. From Saxon blōs, Island. blood. Of a deep red colour, or what we call, as red as blood. The old phrase of blae and bludie, what we now call black and blue. Siquis verberando aliquem fecerit blae et bludie, ipse qui fuerit blae et bludie prius debet exaudiri. Leg. Burg. Scot. cap. 87. Hence bloat-coloured and bloated, i. e. sanguine and high coloured; which in Kent we call a blousing colour: and a great blouse is there a red-faced wench. Hence to blush, or turn red in the face; to blote herrings, or by smoke to make red herrings; a blot or blotch, and blur, a spot of deep tincture. The prior of Burcester gave his liveries of this colour; Et in blodeo panno empto pro armigeris et valetis prioris de Johanne Bandy de magna Tue, ii. 255.

BLODEWITE, from Sax. blōs, blood, and pite, a fine or penalty. It was a customary amercement paid as a composition for the shedding or drawing blood. And sometime a privilege or exemption from this penalty was granted by the king as a special favour. So king Henry II. granted to all tenants within the honour of Walsingham —ut quieti sint de hidagio et blodenite et bredewite, i. 157. Hence we say a bloody fine, a bloody sum of money.

BODU, bodun, bod. Brit. deep. Hence the Dobuni Dofn were called Boduni, Bodunni, from the deep fat soil where they inhabited in Gloucestershire and Oxfordshire. And thence probably Bodicote or Boducot, com. Oxon. Hence the Lat. bodia, bodium, the flat or level ground: and sometimes for a low cottage. Hence our Eng. body, which in some parts of Lincolnshire they use only for the belly or lower part. Hence the bottom of any thing opposed to the top. Bodmin, or the deep bank, in Cornwall. And Pliny mentions the old Gall. bodincus, for bedennag, or bottomless.

BONCHYS, bunches. Fr. Junius derives it from the Dan. buncker the tops of hills.

But I rather believe it from the old Lat. bonna, bunna, a rising bank, for the term or bound of fields; whence bonnarium, a fence, or hedge, or wall, and lonnagium, money or service paid for the maintaining of mounds or boundaries of ground. Hence the word town is used in Norfolk for swelling, or rising up in a bunch or tumour. A bun is a copped cake. The bun, or upper part of a barrel, the bun-hole or lung-hole. A bunting, or round bird. A bonnet, a little cap or hat, or other covering for the head. —Et in duobus bonchis allei vi. den. ii. 575.

BONDAGIUM. Villenage, servitude, bondage. From Sax. bons, bonds or fetters. Hence Prov. I will be your bond-slave. Vide Abundare.—Filius Roberti Elyot nuper defuncti nativi domine qui tenuit in bondagio duo messuagia, i. 573.—Robertus filius Nicholai Germeyn tenet unum messuagium et dimidiam virgatam terræ in bondagio ad voluntatem domine, i. 575. Tenants in bondage paid heriots and did fealty, ii. 82. Were not to fell trees in their own gardens without licence of the lord, ib. Widow of a tenant in bondage held her husband's estate, quamdū vixerit sine marito, ii. 85. Vide Villanagium.

BORDARI. Some derive it from the old Gall. bords, the limits or extreme parts of any extent: as the borders of a country, and the borderers or inhabitants in those parts. Whence the bordure of a garment, and to imborder, which we corrupt to embroider. But our old bordarii, bord-men, were rather so called from Sax. bops, a house, and sometimes a table; hence our English boarders, who board or lodge and table at such a house or such a boarding-school. A cup-board, a side-board-table: and boarding was an old word for facetious table talk. The bordarii often mentioned in the doomsday inquisition were distinct from the servi and villani, and seem to be those of a less servile condition, who had a bops, or cottage, with a small parcel of land allowed to them, on condition they should supply the lord with poultry and eggs, and other small provisions for his board and entertainment. Hence bordlode was the firm or quantity of food which they paid by this tenure. Bordlands were the small estates that were so held. As in latter times bordage and board-half-penny were the dues paid in fairs and markets for boards, or tables, booths and standings. The old Scots had the term of burd and meet-burd for provision: and burden sack for a sack full of provision. From whence most probably comes our Eng. burden, at first only a load of meat and drink, which we seem still to retain in the Prov. He has got his burden, i. e. He has got as much drink as he can bear, or carry; Robertus de Oilgy tenet Berneestre, sunt ibi—5. servi, et 28. villani, cum 14. borduriis, i. 88.

BORDEL. Lat. bordellum. A Sax. bops, a house. At first it signified any small cottage, which growing infamous for a licentious ale-house, and the common habitation of prostitutes; a bordel, or by metathesis a brothel and brothel-house, was a lewd public house, a stew, from which femme bordelier, a common whore. Hence in Chaucer a bordel-man, a loose idle fellow, and bordel-folk, drunkards and epicures, (which the Scotch now call buril-folk;) Goddes hous is made a tavern of gluttons, and a bordel of lychours. ii. 308.

BOTHAGIUM. Boothage, or customary dues to the lord of the market for the pitching and standing of booths: of which Dr. Skinner (as in most other words) gives this very ill account. Minervus deflectit ab A. S. bode tentorium tam/tuarium, quodam quam lego. Potius a C. Br. Bwth, tugurium, derivarem, nisi quod suspicio hoc sit nostræ originis. Mallem igitur deducere a Belg. boede, bode, domuncula, casa, vel Dan. bood, taberna; illud fortasse a Belg. bouwen ædificare, hoc ab A. S. bȳdan, munere, bȳan, habitare. I rather think our Eng. booth came from the old Lat. bota, buta<sup>1</sup>, butta, a vessel for any liquids, from the old Gall. bouts, which the learned Du Fresne says were leather jacks or vessels to carry wine cross the mountains, whence butta and buttis signified any larger continent of wine, as our butt of wine, and the butellus or botellus was a less vessel, as our bottle, of which the most ancient was the leather-bottle. Hence the cellar, or place where they set their wine, was called buthe and botha; whence our buttery; and botharius was the butler, who had custody of the wine. Bothagium was the tax or duty laid on wine. From all which it is easy to imagine, that the public place in a market or fair, where they exposed their wine to sale, was called a booth, and the custom paid for such liberty of standing and selling was bothagium, boothage.—19. Hen. VI. rex concessit Roberto Brooke—picagium, stallagium, bothagium, et tollagium una cum assisa panis et cervisie de novo mercato infra villam de Burcester, ii. 409. From the same old Gallick bouts, leather continents of wine, came our Eng. boots, of the same substance and some similitude: so as there was more wit than is commonly apprehended in the repartee of Erasmus to Sir T. More, Bibitur ex cretis. This makes me think of a country proverb, Such a man is got in his boots, i. e. He is very drunk, or has been at a drinking-bout.

BOUCH of court. From the Fr. bouch, a mouth, or rather from the Fr. bouche, Lat. bulga, Eng. bulget, of British original, for the present Welsh use bolgan, and the Irish bolg, for a belly, and by metaphor for a pair of bellows. Hence a big fat belly is called a bulge-belly, and bulging-belly, and any thing prominent is said to bulge out: from whence bulke or bigness, a bully-fellow, bully-rock, a budge-fellow. Bouch of court, or, (as it commonly occurs,) bouge of court, which was an allowance of diet or belly provision from the king or superior lord to their knights, esquires, and other retinue, that attended them in any military expedition.—Thomas earl of Lancaster retained Sir John de Ewre to serve him with ten men at arms in time of war, allowing them bouge of court, with livery of hay and oats for their horses, i. 542.

<sup>1</sup> Sax. bȳða. S. Mat. ix. 17. The leathern bags in which they formerly carried water from the Severn to the houses in the city of Worcester were called bȳtes; and each load of water was termed a bȳte of water.

“The bolt flew over the bȳer.”

GLOSSARY.

hannes tenet unam placeam terræ ex transverso curtillagii sui ad caput boverie domine priorissæ, i. 567.—Computat de quatuor solidis provenientes de stauro boverie, i. 571.

BOVELLUS, BOVETTUS. A young steer, or bullock castrated; Unus bovettus mas. quatuor boviculæ feminae, i. 406.

BOVICULA. An heifer, or young cow, which in the East Riding of Yorkshire they call a whew, or wey, and a spoiled heifer is called in Oxfordsh. a martin; Possunt sustentari sexdecim vacce et unus taurus cum boviculis, ii. 136.

BRASIUM præparare. To make malt, (Island. malt;) which was a service paid by some tenants to their lord; In manerio de Pidington quilibet virgarius reparabit domino unum quarterium brasii per annum, si dominus inveniet boscum ad siccandum, ii. 496.

BREVE perquirere. To purchase a writ or licence of trial in the king's court: whence the present usage of paying 6s. 8d. where the debt is 40l. 10s. where the debt is 100l. and so upward in suits of money due upon bond, i. 234.

BREVE de recto. A writ of right, by which a person ejected sues for the possession and fee simple of an estate detained from him. So the abbot of Eynesbam impleaded Bernard de S. Walery for the manor of Erdinton, Per breve de recto in curia Roberti episcopi Lincolnie, i. 184. Roger d'Amory quit claimed to the abbey of Oseney two knights fees in Weston; Unde eos implacitavit in curia domini regis per breve de recto, i. 362. Any writ or precept from the king was called breve, which we still retain in the name of brief, commonly used for the king's letters patent to authorize the collecting of charity for poor sufferers. And the minutes of a cause given for the direction of a pleader is called a brief, or breviat.

BREDEWITE. From Sax. bpeos, bread, and pize, a fine or penalty. So as bredewite were the amercements arising from any default in the assise of bread. To be exempt from this penalty was a special privilege granted to all the tenants of the honor of Walingford by king Hen. II.—Ut quieti sint de hidagio et blodewite et bredewite, i. 157.

BRIGA. A quarrel, suit, or controversy.

From Goth. BRIKAN; German, brechen, Sax. bpecan and bpeccan, to break or divide. Thence our breach and brangle, or quarrel; a brack, or hole; a heart-breaking, or dividing; a brace, or division into two parts; a bracket, or small piece of board to support a shelf. A break in Norfolk is land ploughed or broke up the first year after it has lain fallow in the sheep walks. To britten beef, in the North, is to break the bones of it; thence brittle, which in Cheshire they call brichæ; whence our bricks in building seem so called from their frangible quality. A brake is an instrument with which they break flax or hemp. Brake and braken, fern. The breech, or divided part of the body, (the same reason gives name to the twist,) covered with breeches. The brink, or edge of a hill, &c. where the ground breaks off. A brisket of beef, or piece cut off the breast. Hence the old Lat. bricia panis, a piece of bread. Bruscia, bruscus, brush or brittle wood. Brisin, in the present Irish, is to break.—Pro dicta briga sive discordia inter eosdem cedanda, ii. 6.

BRUERIA. Briars, thorns, heath, a Sax. bnap. Tantum de robribus et brueriis quantum pro vestura indignerit, ii. 320. Lat. brolium, broilum, brulium, brullum, a hunting chace or forest. Bruillus, brogillus, a wood, a grove. Fr. breil, breül, breuille, a wood or thicket in a forest. Hence the abbey of Bruer, in the forest of Whichwood, and Bruet, Brehul, or Brill, in the forest of Bernwode, i. 55.

BULTER-CLOTH. A linen or hair cloth for sifting or sieving of meal or flower. From German beutel, a sieve; beutel, to bolt or sift. The versatile engine for sifting with more ease and expedition is now called a bolting mill, and the cloth round it the bolter; In emendatione unius cribri pistrinæ hoc anno 1. den. ob. et in bultercloth empto ad pistrinam—x. den. ii. 253. Hence the old Gall. beluter, bluter, to sift, which Menagius fancies to bear affinity to the Lat. volutare. The modern Fr. blutter. Hence the Lat. bolendigarius, bolengarius, Fl. boulen, Fr. boulen-gier, a baker or bread-maker. On which word the learned Du Fresne has a trifling conjecture, much below his gravity and judgment; Videntur pistorum ita appellati, quod panes in formam globorum, quos boules dicimus, conficiant; when they were evidently so called from bolting or sifting their flower. From hence by metaphor, to bolt out, or rush upon, as he bolted out upon me. To bowlt a cony, to start, or put her up. Bolting, or jutting out, as a piece of timber that overlays upon a beam, has the end bolting out: and any such prominence in architecture was called a bottel. The bolt of a door that runs into the staple. The bolt-spirit of a ship, i. e. the spiret, or mast, that bolts out. Pease-bolt, in Essex, is the pease-straw, when the grain is thrashed or sifted out. In the same county bullimong is several grains mixed or sifted together. Hence possibly the old word, a bolt of silk or stuff, a long narrow piece; Et in bolt rubei say apud Steresbrugge propter anabatam faciendam, iv. sol. viii. den. ii. 253.

BUNDA. A bound. Includendo forestam ex parte dextra per omnes bundas et metas subscriptas, i. 458. Vide Abundare.

BURGAGIUM. A sort of quit rent paid to the chief lord for the houses and tenements in a town or borough; Summa reddituum assisorum de burgagio in Thame, lxxv. i. 505. As burgbote was the tax for repairing the common buildings of the town. Burgbrech was a fine imposed for the breach of peace within the town, &c.

BURSARIA. The bursary, or place of receiving and paying money and rents by the bursarii, bursars, or officers of account in religious houses; Computaverunt fratres Radulphus de Meriton et Stephanus de Oxon de bursaria domus Bernestre coram auditoribus, i. 406. The conventual bursar was to deliver up his accounts yearly on the day after Michaelmas. From bursa, which gives name to our English burse; and hence the same officer who is called bursar in a college, is in a ship called the purser. A pursy man is one who breathes with difficulty, because his breast and belly are fat and extended like a purse. To disburse or expend, disbursements or expences. Formerly all exhibitioners, or stipendiary scholars, at Paris, were called bursars, as they lived on the burs, or fund, or endowment of founders and benefactors; In ea universitate (scil. Oxonia) sunt clara collegia a regibus, reginis, episcopis, et principibus fundata, et ex stipendiis eorum scholastici plurimi aluntur, quos Parisii bursarios vocamus, Jo. Maj. Gest. Scot. l. i. cap. 5.

Which bursarii were most properly those novices or young scholars, who were sent to the university, and maintained by the religious out of their public burs, or stock. Nomasticon Cisteriense, p. 645.

BUSCHE, buscagium, boscagium. Brush-wood, fire-wood, under-wood; Salva libertate pannagii porcorum et busche in charta Matthei decani contenta, i. 339. From the German busche, wood. Whence the device that is worn by women to keep in their belly is called a bush, because made of wood, though now generally of whalebone. Hence apparently our English bush and bushes in a wood or hedge: and the coronated frame of wood hung out as a sign at taverns, is called a bush.

BUSSELLUS. A bushel. from buz, butta, buttis, a standing measure of wine: butticella, bussellus, a less measure: from the old French bouts, which were properly leather vessels to carry wine; whence our leather boots and leather buskins, and leather budget. Bussellus was therefore first used for a liquid measure of wine, eight gallons; Octo libræ faciunt galonem vini, et octo galones vini faciunt bussellum London que est octava pars quarterii. Composit. mensurarum, an. 51. Hen. III. apud Spelmannum in voce Galo. The word was soon after transferred to the dry measure of corn, of the same quantity; Pondus octo librarum frumenti facit bussellum de quibus octo consistit quarterium, Fleta, l. ii. cap. 12. §. 1. Qualibet acra poterit seminari tempore suo duobus bussellis frumenti, ii. 136.

BUTTES. The ends or short pieces of land in arable ridges and furrows. Gilbert Basset gave to his priory of Burecester, vinginti acras in Heile furlong et buttes apud Ymbelonesmere, i. 188.—quatuor selions terræ qui vocantur buttes, i. 261.—Joannes albid et Juliana uxor—tenent quatuor butta que continent unam acram, i. 577. Vide Abuttare.

sol. ii. 255. The quantity is thus determined in the accounts of the cellarist of the abbey of Berking. Memorandum that a barrel of herring shold contene a thousand herrings, and a cade of herring six hundreth, sixscore to the hundreth. Mon. Ang. tom. i. p. 83. In Kent a cade of beef is any parcel or quantity of pieces under a whole quarter. Hence in the north to cadge is to carry, and a cadger is a butcher, miller, or carrier of any other load: and cadge-belly, or kedge-belly, is a full fat belly.

CALCEA, calcea, calcetum. A highway maintained and repaired with stones and rubbish: from the Lat. calx, chalk, Fr. chaux; whence chaussée, Eng. a causeway, or way raised with mould and paved with chalk, stones, or gravel. Calcagium was the tax or contribution paid by the neighbouring inhabitants toward the making and repairing such common roads. And calcearum operationes were the work and labour done by the servile tenants, from which duty the tenants within the honour of Walingford were exempted by King Hen. II.—Ut quieti sint de operationibus castellorum—et calcearum, i. 157.

CALCIATURA Rotarum. The shoeing of wheels, or straking of them, or nailing iron strakes round the fellows, by which the wheels are shod, and made fit to travel; Pro uno pari rotarum—et pro calciatura earundem per Laurentium Smyth, ii. 213. Hence no doubt comes the calking or caulking of horseshoes, i. e. to turn up the two corners, that a horse may stand the faster upon ice, or smooth stones. And the caulking of a ship or vessel, to make her ride or sail the more safely.

CALUMPANIA. Claim or challenge; Ut hæc eleemosina rata sit et absque calumpnia in posterum, i. 115.—Ita quod neque ego neque hæredes mei regressum habeamus vel calumpniam aliquam versus aliquos de præfato manerio, i. 176.

CAMERA. From the old German cam, cammer, crooked; whence our English kembo, arms in kembo, a comb; in the north camb: the present Irish use cama for a bed. Camera signified at first any winding or crooked plat of ground; Tres cameras ad vinea—unam cameram terræ, &c. apud Du Fresne in voce. The word was afterward applied to any vaulted or arched building, especially to a shop for the sale of goods; and seemed at last appropriated to an upper room, or what we now only call a chamber; Robert Clerk granted to Robert le Taillur, Quondam cameram cum pertinentiis—dictam cameram cum placiu terræ, i. 364.

CANON. A book wherein the religious of every convent had a fair transcript of the rules of their order, frequently read among them, as their local statutes: which book was therefore called Regula and Canon. The public books of the religious were these four: 1. Missale; which contained all the offices of devotion. 2. Martyrologium: a register of the Christian saints and martyrs, with the place and time of passion. 3. Canon, or Regula; the institution and rules of their order. 4. Necrologium, or Obituarium; in which they entered the death of their founders and benefactors, to observe the days of commemoration for them. But, as the two first, so likewise the two latter were sometime joined in the same volume.

CANTARIA. A chantry, a small chapel, single or annexed to some parochial church, founded and endowed for the maintenance of one or more chanter, or chantry-priests, whose office it was to sing masses, and perform other memorials for the soul of the founder, or such other friends whom he had nominated; Domini Walterus Blankett capellanus perpetuus cantariæ sanctæ Trinitatis in ecclesia Omnium Sanctorum Oxoniæ, ii. 242. In which the capellane, or chanter, was instituted and inducted, and took an oath to observe the statutes of the founder, ii. 243. Several of these chantries were annexed to cathedral churches; and no less than forty-seven to that of St. Paul's in London. Those that escaped the act of 37. Hen. VIII. were all dissolved 1. Edw. VI. cap. 14.

CANTREDUM. A cantre, or cantred. From Brit. cant, a hundred, and trè or tred, a village. The same division of counties in Ireland and Wales as our hundreds in England. Hundredus Latine dicitur, Wallice et Hibernice cantredus, et continet centum villas, Jo. Brompton inter X. Script. col. 957.—Castrum et cantredum de Buelt cum pertinentiis in Wallia, ii. 31. Hence the

GLOSSARY.

Cantons of Switzerland. To canton out, i. e. to divide into parcels. A canton or corner in heraldry. To sell by cantell was an old custom of selling by the lump without tale or measure, which cantellum Sir Henry Spelman thinks to be velut quantillum; but it seems more probable from cant, a hundred, or cantoning, dividing into hundreds, and was the selling about a hundred weight of goods, or a hundred in tale by guess, as we now call the taking of a hundred pound by content, when we take one hundred pound bag sealed up, without telling the money. Hence a cantell is still retained for any indefinite number or dimension, as in Kent we say a cantell of people or cattle; a cantell of wood, timber, bread, cheese, &c.

CANVOYS. Canvas. Course hempen cloth, a Lat. cannabus, a Gr. κάνναβις, hemp. Whence a canopy or cannoby, an umbrella, made usually of such linen; Et in canvoys emptio Londin. per Richardum Dymby pro lintheaminibus faciendis, iii. sol. ii. 254. Hence by metaphor (as Skinner fancies) to canvass about, and to canvass for votes, as bearing allusion to the beating of hemp, or making canvass. Though perhaps it might be as wise a conjecture to say, that canna was a cup or can, whence canava or cannava was the buttery, especially in religious houses, and cannavasare was to promote drinking; which I am sure is the present method of canvassing in elections.

CAPELLA. A chapel, or what we now call a chapel of ease, built within the precincts of a parish for the benefit of one or more families, who lived remote from the parish church, and made subservient to the said mother church. Such a chapel was often granted in the court or manor house of the patron, as a privilege to himself and family. So Rob. de Groshead, bishop of Lincoln, to William de Clinton, patron of the church of Eston, com. Buck. i. 312. The same prelate to Roger de Hida, at his manor house at Whitechurch, com. Oxon. i. 329. At the consecration of a chapel, there was often some fixed endowment given to it, for its more light and easy dependence on the mother church. So at Stratton-Audley within the parish of Burcester, Gilbert Basset gave to his new priory, Capellam de Strattun et in eadem villa de Strattun unam virgatam terræ collectam de terra rusticorum, quæ data fuit in dote prædictæ capellæ, i. 188. The institution and dependence of chapels and their capellanes, with the dignity and liberties of mother churches discoursed at large, ii. 267.

CAPELLANUS liberæ capellæ. The chaplain to a chapel of ease, maintained by the parish priest, or by the appropriators, or by the inhabitants, or by joint contribution of them. His stipend was five marks per an. in the year 1280. ii. 271. He was bound by oath to pay due reverence and obedience to the parish priest, ii. 287. He was sometime called serviens de capella, as in a charter of King John; Dedi et concessi Waltero Borstard servienti de capella nostra manerium nostrum de Brehull, i. 229.

CAPELLANUS baronis. A lord's or baron's chaplain. Those who had a chapel allowed them at their court or manor house, had the privilege of maintaining a domestic chaplain to officiate in the said chapel without prejudice to the parish priest. By the Council of Claremont, an. 1095. can. 18. no layman was to retain a chaplain without consent of the bishop.—Warine chaplain to Milo Crispin baron of Walingford 7. Hen. I. i. 105. The present rights of the nobility for retaining and qualifying of chaplains, are determined by stat. 21. Hen. VIII. cap. 13.

CAPELLANUS sacerdotis. A curate, priest, or deacon, retained by the parish priest to assist him in the offices of his church, and the care of souls; Willielmus senex sacerdos de Burcester cum Willielmo capellano suo, i. 104. — Testibus Rogero decano de Pire, Mattheo capellano de Ambresdone — Fulcone capellano de Meriton, i. 168. In large parishes, the incumbent was obliged to keep two or more capellanes to assist him, i. 169. Who were obliged by an oath of fidelity to their masters the parish priests, ii. 288. Yet no parish priest could take such a curate without the licence or approbation of the bishop, by the Synod of Poitiers, an. 1280. can. 3.

CAPUT jejunii. Ash-Wednesday, being the head or first day of the Quadragesimal, or Lent fast, i. 182. So caput anni, New-years-day, upon which was observed the festum stultorum, to deride the rite of circumcision, in contempt and hatred of the Jews, forbid by an express constitution of bishop Grossthead, because there was a great levity in the observance of it, and because it ridiculed the circumcision to which our Saviour submitted. So caput kalendarum Maii, May-day.

CAPUT baroniæ. Head of a barony. It was the capital village of a barony, where the baron had his principal seat and common residence. So in the barony of St. Walery, com. Oxon. the caput baroniæ was Beckley, where Richard king of the Romans, and baron of St. Walery, had his court or palace, i. 84. The same with caput honoris, in the barony of Giffard, com. Buck.—Caput illius honoris Crendon, i. 233. This head of a barony could not be settled in dowry, nor divided among female co-heirs, as coparceners, but in default of issue male, it passed entire to the eldest daughter.

IN CAPITE tenere. To hold immediately from the king, or of his crown in gross, without dependence upon or annexion to any honor, castle, or manor. Called sometimes in capite coronæ. Bernard de S. Walery gave the site and advowson of the abbey of Godestow to king Hen. II. Ita ut præfata abbatia de cætero habeatur libera, et in capite coronæ regis sit, sicut abbatia Sancti Edmundi, et aliæ regales abbatia, i. 176. No tenure in capite could be alienated or transferred without the king's special licence, but upon any such conveyance it escheated to the king without express pardon; Pardonavimus dilecto et fideli nostro Johanni de Handlo transgressionem quam fecit adquirendo sibi, et hæredibus suis ballivam forestariæ—quæ tenentur de nobis in capite, nostra super hæc licentia non obtenta, i. 508.

CAPITALIS honor. The chief honor or prime barony of the whole county; Com. Buck. Willielmus Mareschallus comes de Pembroke habet ibidem capitalem honorem scil. honorem Giffard, i. 233.

CAPITALIS dominus. The lord of the fee, from whom the estate is held by inferior tenants; Tres den. erga capitalem dominum, i. 311.—Faciendo inde servitium capitali domino feodi, i. 226.

CAPITALIS curia. The chief manor house or place-house, or court of the lord of the manor, which in Kent is now often called the court-lodge. Robert earl of Dreux confirmed to the abbey of Oseney, manerium de Mixbury cum capitali curia, i. 268. The same with capitale messuagium; Dicunt per sacramentum suum quod capitale messuagium valet per an. cum tota inclausa, iis. i. 443.

CAPUT loci. The end of any place. Ad caput villæ, at the end of the town, i. 566. Ad caput boveria, at the upper end of the cow-house, i. 567. Alia roda jacet ad inferius capud del' Oldedich, i. 569.

CAPITALIA agri. Head-lands.—Canonici concesserunt hominibus de Wrechwiike duas acras prati pro capitalibus suarumcroftarum secus rivulum versus molendinum fluentem ad faciendum stagnum, i. 188. Vide Havedelond.

CAPITULA ruralia. Chapters held by the rural dean and clergy within the precincts of every distinct deanery, at first every three weeks, then once a month, and more solemnly once a quarter, ii. 347.

CARUCA, Fr. carruè, a plough, from the old Gallic carr, which is the present Irish word for any sort of wheeled carriage; Qui carucas habuerunt, arabunt terram domini in dicto manerio, i. 453. From hence the Sax. ceopl, a plough-man, the northern karl, our southern churl, and in corruption of places, Charl; as Charlton, Charlbury, &c. Carl in modern Welch is a rustic, or clown.

CARUCATA. A plough-land, or as much arable ground as in one year could be tilled with one plough: which in the reign of Rich. I. was computed at sixty acres, Mon. Ang. tom. ii. p. 107. Yet another charter 9 Rich. I. allots one hundred acres to a carucate. And Fleta, temp. Edw. I. says, if land lay in three common fields, then nine-score acres to a carucate, sixty for winter tillage, sixty for spring tillage, and sixty for fallows. But if the land lay in two fields, then eight-score acres to a carucate, one half for tillage, and the other for fallow, lib. ii. cap. 72. §. 4. The measure of a carucate was different, according to time and place. In 23 Ed. III. one carucate of land in Burcester contained one hundred and twelve acres; and two carucates in Middleton were three hundred acres, ii. 103. Caruca was sometimes used for carucata; Robert de Ver confirmed to the monks of Thorney, Decimas de quinque carucis quas pater concessit in Islep Draitune et

GLOSSARY.

Edinton, i. 111. In Domesday inquisition, the arable land was measured by carucates, the common pasture by hides, and the meadow by acres. In some countries the word is still preserved a carve of land, and the imposition on land carrucagium et carrucagium is called carvage.

CARUCATA boum. A team or draught of oxen, which in some western parts is still called a plough of oxen. Gilbert Basset, founder of Burcester priory, grants to it, Pasturam in mea dominica pastura ad tres carucatas boum trahentium una cum bobus meis trahentibus, i. 186. Called boves de caruca in a charter of Aubrey de Vere to the abbey of Noleley, i. 216.

CARUCATARIUS. He that held land in soccage, or plough tenure; Summa reddituum carucatariorum si fuerint ad firmam, xxiiis.—Summa gallinarum carucatariorum et cotariorum cxiv. gallinae, i. 506.

CARECTA. A cart, or carriage, or waggon. From the same Lat. carrum, Brit. carr, which signified any sort of vehicle by land or sea. Thence a carrac, Lat. carraca, carrica, a small ship, the cargo of a ship, Lat. carracagium. A carrat, or carect, used formerly for any weight or burden, though now appropriated to the weight of four grains in diamonds.—Nullus vicecomes vel ballivus noster vel aliquis alius capiat equos vel carectas alicujus pro caragio faciendo, nisi reddat liberationem antiquitus statutam scilicet pro carecta ad duos equos x. den. per diem, et pro carecta ad iii. equos xiv. den. per diem. Mag. Char. cap. 22.—Gilbert Basset gives to the priory of Burcester in his foundation charter, Decimam carectam ligni mei, ut sicut venitur de bosco, attrahatur in curiam canonicorum sicut in meam, i. 186.—Thomas de S. Walery gave to the nuns of Stodeley, Qualibet septimana unam carectam ligni mortui in bosco de Horton, i. 236.—Homines de Hedgingdon solum carriabunt usque ad curiam predicti manerii, illi videlicet qui carectas habuerunt, et qui carectas non habuerunt venient cum furcis suis ad dictum solum levandum et thassandum, i. 453. The Brit. carr was Sax. cpar. Thence a cradle, or little carriage for children, applied to some other utensils that carry or bear any thing. As in the North a dish-cradle, for the setting up wooden dishes or trenchers. And in Kent a sithe-cradle, or rack of wood fastened to a sithe, for carrying the mowed barley clean into the swath. Thence a cratch or critch, a rack in a stable. And hence crutches, to bear up or carry lame persons. In the North, especially at Sheffield in Yorkshire, they call a kennel the carr-sick, from carr and sike, a furrow or gutter, q. d. carr-gutter. A carr is in other places a wheel-trade or wheel-rout, or any such hollow trench where water stands. Hence to the carrs or carriers of a spinning-wheel. Nor is it impertinent to observe, that carr, a gutter, is in Lincolnshire a gool, in Kent a guzzle, in Wiltshire a gushill, and gooshill, which is the reason why the southern goosberry is called in the North a carrberry. And carter is the name of a spinning insect like a spider. Hence again the Lat. carpentum, in the present Irish a carbad, or waggon covered with a carpat or carpet, as our waggons now with tilts. A carpenter, &c. Hence the charge or carriage of a gun. And a char to be charred, in the North; i. e. a task or labour to be discharged.

CARECTATA. A cart-load or waggon-load. The prior and canons of St. Frideswide gave the vicar of Oakle—duas carectatas feeni, et duas carectatas firaminis, ii. 82.

CARECTARIUS. A carter. Hugo filius Elicæ carectarii de Berencester, i. 460.

CART-SADEL. The saddle that laid on the fillar-horse; Pro uno cart-sadel, uno colero, cum uno pari tractuum emptis, xivd. ii. 213. Saddle is from the Sax. feel, a seat, or place. Hence the frame of wood to support the barrels in a buttery or cellar, is called the seddle and settle. So a settle or couch, a settle-bed or truckle-bed. In Kent to sessle about is to change seats very often.

CART-BODY. The wooden-body of the cart or waggon. Et pro sarratione et delatione unius cart-body, vid. ii. 213. In Sussex it is called the buck of a cart, i. e. the belly of a cart; from Sax. buc, a belly, used by metaphor for a jug, or big-bellied pot: thence a bucket, or less measure of the like shape. From the Teuton. lucken, Sax. bogan, to bend: whence lucksome, flexible, or of a pliable body, bonny and lucksome lass. Hence to buckle, or to bend. A buckle, a buckler. To budge, or move about; whence budge and budgy is the same as lucksome, brisk and jocund. A buck, or belly, is in some places called a budge; thence by metaphor a bag, or sack; and a budget, or little bag. A budge-barrel, a budge-bellied, or big-bellied fellow, &c. A badger, or badger, i. e. a carrier, or retailer of bodges, or bags of corn.

CARRARIA, carrarium. Now corrupted into quadraria and quadrarium, a quarry, or stonepit. The Irish retain the true original a carrie, and the French, une carriere; Una acra jacet in furlungo prædicto in quo prior habet quarreram, ii. 185. Corrupted farther into quadrarium, concessi eisdem liberam viam ultra pasturam meam de quadrario suo usque ad prædictam ripam ad stagnum dicti molendini emendandum, i. 294. Hence the whole word a querrou, or digger of stones. By the like change of c into qu, we say a quarry, or prey, as the quarry of a hawk, which no doubt was carry, or the prey carried off.

CASULA quasi capsula. The chesible, or loose upper vestment of the priest, officiating in divine service: like our present surplice, vestimentum principale scilicet casula alba, ii. 285.

CASTELLORUM operatio. Service of work and labour, to be done by inferior tenants for the repair and building of castles. Toward which some gave their personal assistance, and others a contribution. This was one of the three necessary taxes, from which few persons were exempted; Liberi ab omni servitio, exceptis pontis et arcis contractione et expeditione contra hostem. This occurs in several of our royal charters. But an immunity from this burden was sometimes granted. So king John to the nunnery of St. Catharine, without the city of Exeter; Quietus esse de operationibus castellorum et pontium. Mon. Ang. tom. i. p. 503. b.—So king Hen. II. to the tenants within the honor of Walingford; Ut quieti sint de operationibus castellorum, i. 157.

CASTELLORUM custodia. The service of keeping and defending, or watching and warding, in any castle. The barony of Coges, com. Oxon. was held per serjantiam custodiæ castelli de Dover, i. 549.

CELLARIUM. A cellar; Istud cellarium et illud solarium quo sito sunt intra domum meam, i. 561. From the Lat. cella, Eng. cell, or little place, or repository. Hence the old Latin celdra, a certain measure, which the Scotch call chalder, and we retain in the measure of coals, a chaldron.

CESSARE in solutione. To fail in payment. Quoties prior et conventus Burncester in prædictorum sexaginta solidorum solutione terminis prædictis cessaverint, i. 490.

CHALENGIA. A claim, or challenge, from Fr. challonger, which Menagius derives from the Gr. καλέω; Ita quod ego et hæredes mei nullam chalengiam poterimus habere de futuro, i. 172.

CHARTA. Not only a charter, or deed in writing, but any signal, or token, by which an estate was held; Willielmus filius Nigelli tenuit custodiam forestæ de Bernwode de domino rege per unum cornu quod est charta prædictæ forestæ, i. 99.

CHEMINUS, chiminus. A high-way, from the Fr. chemin, or rather from the Saxon, cýman, to come; hence a chimney, or cheminey, a way, or passage for the smoke.

CHEVITIÆ, cheviscæ. Heads at the ends of ploughed lands; Quinquaginta acras terre cum cheviciis suis et omnibus aliis pertinentiis, ii. 34.

CHURCH-SCOT. Cýpc-ſceat, i. e. church-payment, or contribution. The Latin writers have commonly called it primitiæ seminum, because it was at first a quantity of corn paid to the priest on St. Martin's day, as the first-fruits of harvest: enjoined by the laws of king Ina, cap. 4. and king Canute cap. 10. But it was afterward taken for a reserve of corn rent paid to the secular priests, or to the religious; so in the reign of Hen. III. Robert de Hay, rector of Souldern, claimed from the abbot and convent of Oseney a certain measure of corn under the title of churchscet, for their demesne lands in Mixbury, i. 262. It was sometimes a general word, and included not only corn, but poultry, or any other provision, that was paid in kind to the religious. So in the inquisition of the rents of the abbey of Glastonbury, an. 1201. Manerium Glaston. reddit per an. in gabulo vii. lib. vi. sol. ii. den.—In churchscet lx. gallinas et semen frumenti ad tres acras. Cartul. de Glaston, MS. f. 38.

CHOP-CHURCHES. Those secular priests who drove a trade, or made an advantage by exchanging of their benefices, against whom some constitutions were expressly made to restrain that mercenary practice, ii. 201. From Sax. ceap, goods, or vendible wares, thence ceapan, to buy, or to cheapen. Thence a chapman, a cheap price: this word gave name to several places of market and trade, as Cheapside in London, Chepstow in Wales, Cheping-Norton in Oxfordshire, &c. Hence likewise to chaffer, or to barter; to chop, or to change; chopping, vendible, or valuable; as, a chopping-horse, a chopping-boy: both which have been corrupted into swap and swopping: and in the North, into coup and couping, which in Norfolk and Suffolk is cope and cop-ing.

CHOSA. From the Fr. chose, a thing, or small matter. The Knights Templars gave to Simon, son of Sir Guido de Meriton, marcas centum ad quasdam chosas emendas, i. 166. Fr. quelques choses, corrupted into kickshaws: thence to choose, or take one thing out of several others; to chouse, or to take more than is just and due.

CHOREPISCOPI. Rural bishops delegated by the prime diocesan, their authority restrained by some councils, and their very office by degrees abolished. After whom, the rural deans were so commissioned to exercise episcopal jurisdiction, till inhibited by pope Alexander III. and the council of Tours, ii. 345.

CHYROGRAPHUM. Any public instrument of conveyance attested by witnesses, was in the Saxon times called chirographum, which the Normans styled charta. Of which Ingulph gives this good account; Chyrographorum confectionem Anglicanam, quæ antea usque ad Edwardi regis tempora fidelium præsentium subscriptionibus cum crucibus aureis, aliisque sacris signaculis firma fuerunt, Normanni condemnantes, chirographa charta vocabant, et chartarum firmitatem cum cerâ impressione per uniuscujusque speciale sigillum sub instillatione trium vel quatuor testium adstantium conficere constituebant. Histor. Ingulphi, p. 901. But to prevent frauds and concealments, they made their deeds of mutual covenant in a script and rescript, or in a part and counter part, upon the same sheet of paper, or parchment, and in the middle, between the two copies, they drew the capital letters of the alphabet, or sometime the word SYNGRAPHIUS in the like great letters, and then talliated, or cut asunder in indented manner the said sheet, which being delivered to the two parties concerned, were proved authentic by matching with, or answering to one another.

Like the tallies in wood, or like our present indentures in writing. When this prudent custom had for some time prevailed, then the word chirographum was appropriated to such bipartite writings; Et in hujus rei testimonium huic scripto in modum chyrographi confecto vicissim sigilla nostra apposuimus, i. 246.—Ut autem ista conventia rata et inconcussa perpetuo permaneant, præsentis scriptis serie et utriusque monasterii sigilli testimonio una cum sigillis abbatum diviso inter eos chirographo confirmata est, i. 315. Such alternate writings were called likewise scripta chirographata, i. 330. And chartæ divisæ, Mon. Ang. tom. ii. p. 64.

CHRISTIANITATIS curia. The Christian or ecclesiastical court, opposed to the civil court, or lay court, or curia domini regis. These courts of Christianity were not only held by the bishops in synods, and the archdeacons and chancellors in consistories; but they were also the rural chapters, where the rural dean, or dean of Christianity presided, and the clergy were assessors, and assistants, ii. 349. Justitiam Christianitatis facere was to prosecute and censure a criminal in the ecclesiastical court, as 28. Hen. I. Alexander Lincoln. episcopus Guidoni de Charing parochiano suo salutem. Mando tibi et præcipio ut cito reddas ecclesiæ de Egnesham et Waltero abbati ecclesiam suam de Meritona; Quod nî cito feceris, præcipio ut Walterus archidiaconus nobis justitiam Christianitatis faciat, donec reddas, i. 122. Osbert, vicar of Merton, impleaded in the king's court by Thomas le Camvil, and Elizabeth his wife, for proceeding in a cause before the court Christian, against the king's prohibition, i. 408. So Ichel de Kerwent, rector of Bucknel, to be arrested and impleaded before the barons of the Exchequer, by the king's precept to the sheriff; Quod idem Ichelus ipsum abbatem (de Osene) jam in curiam Christianitatis coram officario diocessani predicti trahit in placitum, ipsum multipliciter ibidem inquietando in nostri contemptum manifestum, i. 468.

CLADUS, clades, clada, clota, clida, clia. From the Brit. clie, the present Irish elia, a hurdle: whence Dublin was formerly called Baile cliet, i. e. the town of hurdles. A hurdle for sheep is still in some counties called a cley: Et in xii. cladis ovilitus

emptis de Nicholao Aleyn hoc anno xviii. den. et in solutis pro putatione et factura triginta cladorum ovilium apud parcum de Midlington hoc anno xix. den. ii. 255.—Et in cladis emptis ad pontem de Chyfton de novo faciendum, ii. 257. A hurdle is from the Sax. hýpðl, Teuton. hurde. Whence a basket made of twigs interwoven like a hurdle, was in some places called a hurd, thence a hoard or store, to hoard up. A hurdle is in some northern parts called a fleak, and in Kent is sometimes called a riddle, raddle, or ruddle: from the rods or twigs of which they are made, as a riddle-wall, a riddle-basket, &c.

CLAMOR. Complaint for want of justice. Alexander bishop of Lincoln, to Wido de Charing; Ne pro recti vel justitiæ penuria amplius audiam clamorem, i. 122. In the same sense as now to clamour, and to make a clamour.

CLAMOR. A cry by a public cryer; Mandatum est majori et ballivis Oxon. quod per totam villam Oxon. clamari faciant, quod omnes publicæ meretrices et concubinæ clericorum infra octo dies post hunc clamorem factum exeant villam Oxon. i. 306.

CLAUDERE. To enclose or turn a common into closes and enclosures; Dedi et concessi totam culturam ad claudendam et faciendam quicquid inde dictis Canonicis placuerit, i. 233. Hence a closet, a cloister, a clod, clotted-blood, a clout, clouted-shoes, a clouterly fellow. Hence the Sax. clug, a rock. Clough, in the North, is a valley enclosed between two hills. A clodge, in Kent, a lump of clay or dirt. Clodgy and clodgy, stiff and dirty.

CLAUSTURA. Brushwood for hedges and fences. King Henry III. gave to the prior and canons of Chetwoode,—quinque carucatas claustræ ad prædictæ terræ claustram sustinendam, i. 349. This sort of wood is called teenage, from Sax. tynan, to enclose, thence to tine the door, i. e. to shut the door; the tines of a harrow, i. e. the teeth of it; the tines of a buck's horn, &c.

CLAVUS. A clove, as clavus gariophili, an aromatic clove; clavus allii, a clove of garlic. Reddendo mihi et hæredibus meis unum clavum cariophili tantum, i. 415. Hence the Sax. cleopan, to divide or to cleave; a cleft, a clift, a cleaver; and in the opinion of Skinner, to club, or divide a reckoning, club-law, i. e. by equal division.

CLEPUD, iclepid. Called or named. An old man that is clepud Jon Bufforde, ii. 8. —that is iclepid Rich. Davyes londe. ib. From the Sax. cleopan, clýpian, to call or name. Hence to clip or clep a word; i. e. to miscall or pronounce it wrong, Prov. To clip the king's English. To clap, or make a noise. The clapper of a mill, or of a door, a woman's clapper, &c.

CLERICUS. A secular priest, in opposition to a religious or regular. King John committed to William de Cornhull and Gerard de Camville,—Omnes terras et res abbatum et priorum et omnium religiosorum, et etiam Clericorum de Episcopatu, i. 238. The benefit of the clergy was an immemorial part of common law, confirmed and abridged by several statutes: but perverted from the first intention, which was, that the privilege should extend only to those in sacred orders, afterwards for the encouragement of literature to any offender who could read like a clerk, and now at last to the most ignorant wretches, by the favour of the judge and the collusion of the ordinary. The word clerk was by degrees in general attributed to every scholar, and at last was common to every scribe and notary, whence so many of our law offices, clerk of the peace, clerk of the assises, clerks in the chancery: but these latter were commonly in holy orders before the Reformation.

CLERICUS sacerdotis. A parish clerk, who was to take an oath of fidelity to the parish priest, and was sometimes maintained by the appropriators as a menial servant to the vicar. So in all the churches appropriated to the abbey of Oseney; Canonici vero clericum ei. (i. e. Vicario) et ecclesiæ ministerio, et ejus obsequio devotum invenient, qui juramentum fidelitatis ipsi vicario præstabit—Uti autem non fuerint canonici residentes, clericus, qui ut supradictum est expensis eorum procurabitur clavem eorum deferet in domo eorum, et curam habebit liberam, ut per ipsum vicario sufficienter in victualibus et honorifice omnia ministrentur, i. 429. The parish clerks were formerly to be men of letters, and to teach a school in the parish; and were sometimes elected by the parishioners, upon whose alms they were supposed to live. So John Peckham, archbishop of Canterbury, an. 1280, ordained in the church of Bauquell, and the chapels annexed to it; Volumus insuper ibidem esse duos clericos scholasticos per parochianorum, de quorum habeant vivere elemosinis, industriam eligendos, qui aquam benedictam circumferent in parochia et capellis, diebus dominicis et festivis in divinis ministrantes officiis, et pro festis diebus disciplinis scholasticis indulgentes, Mon. Ang. tom. iii. p. 227. Parish-clerks were to be schoolmasters in country villages by the constitutions of Alexander, bishop of Coventry, an. 1237; and by the Synod of Cologne, an. 1280. It would be a good service to the church and nation, to restore this ancient practice, especially in remote country villages, where the clerk would do more to the service of God, and the benefit of the people, if he were able to instruct the children in reading and writing, and rehearsing the church catechism, that they might be bred to some sense of Christianity and good manners.

CLOERE. A prison, I believe of some Brit. original, which might give name to the old Lat. cleria, which Du Fresne conjectures to have been a corruption of clau-seria, a close place of restraint. The dungeon or inner prison in Walingford castle was called cloere-brien, i. 133. Hence the Lat. clauca, which was originally a dungeon, or the nastiest part of a prison; called by the French basse-fosse; and afterward, by an easy allusion, applied to a jakes, or house of office. The old clau-cerius is interpreted in a MS. Gloss. carceris custos. The present clauarius, or keeper of the house of ease, is an office in some religious houses imposed on an offending brother, or voluntarily chosen by him for an exercise of humility and mortification; and in some of our English convents beyond the seas, this sweet officer is called count of Holt.

CLYK. A bell; Lat. claca, clogga, glogga; Sax. clugga; Teuton. glocke; German, gloggen; Fr. cloche; Welch, clach, (possibly from Brit. cluyed, to hear, whence clyst, an ear;) Irish, clug; perhaps all derived from the sound. As from the like sound, the clicking of clock or watch, the clucking of a hen, the clinking of chains, the clapping of hands, the clattering and cluttering of vessels or other moveables, the clatting or cutting of the finger nails with scissors, or clatting of wool with shears, the cnacking or knacking of the tongue, i. e. affecting to speak finely, a word in the North applied to such as love to speak in the southern dialect; Super cameram vocatam clyk-chamb'our versus arriam, ii. 254. So that our English clock is plainly so called from striking on a clyk, or bell.

Cock-boat. A small boat that waits upon a larger vessel. Dr. Skinner keeps to his habit of trifling in the origination of this word; Nescio un a rostro quod aliquo modo galli cristæ simile est: vel ut optime monet doctor Th. H. a Fr. G. coque, concha marina, hac credo etiam deflerum a Lat. concha eliso n. To which fancy the learned Sir Hen. Spelman does incline; coqua, Linter, a Gall. coque, i. e. concha, testa; Ang. a cock-boat. But certainly, what we now call a cock-boat was formerly a cogge-boat, and simply a cogge. As Chron. MS. an. 15. Edw. III. cited by Spelman in voce Cogones; Many cogs and ships were taken. And Chaucer,

He found Jason and Heracles allso Shutte in a cogge to lond were ygoe.

Which word occurs in the stat. 23. Hen. VIII. cap. 18. and is still preserved upon the sea coasts in Yorkshire, where they call a small fisher-boat a coggle; and in some places, by corruption, a cobble. From the German, kogge, a ship; Posuerunt magnam navim, vulgariter dictam kogge, cum armatis viris. Histor. Archiepisc. Bremens. citat. apud Du Fresne in voce Kogge. Hence the Lat. coqua, cogga, coggo, cogo.—An. 1066. Venit ad huc in Angliam (rex Noricorum) trecentis coggonibus adve-tus, Mat. West, sub an.—Preparatis cogonibus, galleis, et aliis navibus onerariis—600 naves et 24 coggas bene paratas. Mat. Par. sub an. 1218. Hence cocula, or coculum, a cogue, or little drinking cup in form of a boat, used especially at sea, and still retained in a cogue of brandy. The coges or cogs of a mill-wheel are those slobbs or broad pieces of board, that like cogs, or boats, are drove along by the stream, and so turn round the wheel, and

GLOSSARY.

axis, and stones. Hence our old Saxon cocrebe, a seaman, called in the laws of king Hen. I. cap. 29. cocseti, and cap. 81. cathseti. The old Glossary to these laws made in the reign of Edw. III. interprets cocsade, cocarius, which the learned Du Fresne seems to understand coquus, a cook; but cocarius is indeed a boatman, from coca, or coquia, a boat. As with little variation, a cogge-þane, a cock-swain, now a coggeson, or coxon, is an officer in a ship. Hence the old Lat. cogcio, coccio, a wandering and begging seaman, which Sir Henry Spelman believes to have been so called from the Gr. κωκυς, lugeo, ploro; cotyones, Fr. coquins; but the true name and original was cogciones, cog-men, or boat-men, who, after shipwreck, or losses by sea, travelled about to beg and defraud the people, restrained by many civil and ecclesiastical laws; Ut isti mangones et cogciones, qui sine omni lege vagabundi vadunt, per istam terram non sinantur vagari, et deceptiones hominibus agere. Vide Spelman, in voce Coccio; et Du Fresne, in voce Cociones. From this Lat. cogciones, Fr. coquins, comes our English cockquine, or cockquean, an impudent beggar, or a cheat: whence no doubt to cokes, or impose upon by lies and stories, like seamen with their pretended losses and sufferings. And a cokes is an easy credulous person, deluded by such shams and false tales. In our sea terms, we have still several words that are owing to the obsolete cogge, a boat. As the certificate given to mariners for having paid custom and other naval dues is called the cocket. The hard sea biscuit is called cocket-bread; the beach or pebbles with which they ballast a ship are coggle-stones and cobble-stones. Fishermen's great boots, with which they wade into the sea, are called cokers. Of the same etymology is the Lat. cocula, coccula, cucula, called by the present Irish cochull, a coarse, shaggy mantle, worn at first by seamen, as now by all the poorer people, like our western whittle; Atque quot jubæ in tua coccula, (quod vulgariter vocatur quoddam genus indumenti quo Hibernenses utuntur, de foris plenum prominentibus jubis, seu villis in modum crinium sunt contextæ,) tot homines per te a pænis perpetuis eru-

entur. Vita S. Cadoci in MS. Cod. Landav. Eccles. citat. a Spelmanno in voce Coccula. (The Welch call a shepherd's-hood or coul cochol.) From whence the cucullus, or monk's coul. The present Welch cruch is a boat. Hence for a ship to cruise up and down the sea, a cruiser. Hence the Lat. cocula, or cogue, a drinking dish in form of a boat, was called crusela, crusellus, from which our English, a cruise of vinegar or oil, a crucible for melting and trying of metals. And as the wearing cucula, or cucullus, was in English a coul, so the vessel ciccula, or liquor continent, gave name to our modern vessel a coul, carried between two persons with a coul-staff. And the coccula, or sea garment, was called crusina and crosina.

COLERUS. A collar, or any thing that goes round the neck, which in old English was the coll or cull, from Lat. collum. Hence the collar of a doublet, the collar of a horse, the collet of a ring, and perhaps a collop of meat; the Welch call a band a collar; the old Lat. colponer, slices, or cut pieces; in Welch, a gollwith. This possibly is the reason why a great piggin, or pail, with a wide neck, is called a collock in the North; Et pro uno cartsaddle, uno colero, cum uno pari tractuum emptis xivd. ii. 213.

COLLUSIO. A fraudulent contrivance and compact between two or more parties, to bring an action one against the other for some deceitful end, or to prejudice the right of a third person; Requisiti de collusione inter partes prælocuta contra statutum (i. e. Westmin. 2. cap. 32.) ac etiam de valore ejusdem ecclesiæ, dicunt quod nulla est collusio inter partes inde prælocuta, i. 502.

COMBE. A valley or low place between two hills, which is still so called in Devonshire and Cornwall; Saxon, cumbe; from Brit. kum, or cum, any deep or hollow place. The learned Du Fresne conjectures thus; Anglo Saxonibus, comb; Britannis kum, vallis, sic dicta, quod cumbæ seu navigii ita nuncupati quod cavum est et longius speciem referat: seu ab alveo navis qui cumba etiam dicebatur. But I rather think the Lat. cumba melted into cymba, like the Brit. cumri into cymri, was derived from the Brit. or old Gall. cum, kum, or cum. For cumba signified at first only the keel or bottom of the ship or boat, and thence by synecdoche (like carina and puppis) was taken for the whole vessel. Hence no doubt catacumbæ, the catacombs or caverns of ancient sepulture near to Rome, where the primitive Roman Christians buried their dead cata cumlas, or ad cumbas, at the crypts, or hollow caverns. Whence in our old charters cumba terre, and comba terre, occurs for a low piece of ground. As in England, several villages from their low situation in a bottom, or at the foot of hills, obtained the name of Combe, and Compton, as in Warwickshire, Oxfordshire, &c. i. 149. Hence our countrymen retain the word comb, or coom, for the bin, or low place, where they keep corn and chaff for their horses. So in Wiltshire, the comb, or comb of a window, is the bottom or lower ledge of the window. Mr. Sommer with good judgment confutes the derivation of Cambria, or the country now called Wales, from Camber, son of Brute, or from Cimri, the progeny of Gomer; and then takes much pains to deduce it from the Brit. cam and cambe, crooked, as if Cambria, from its situation among creeks and windings; as a camber nose, a crooked nose; arms a kembo, kimkam, &c. But at last he seems to come nearer to the truth; Si tamen rectius dicenda sit Cumbria, quam Cambria, quod per me licet, tum petendum forte nomen a veteri nostratum voce sive verbo, to cumber, i. e. impedire, molestare; quod, instar Cumberlandiæ, Cambria regio sit montibus abruptis, terrarum arduis, saxetis, silvis, saltibus, stagnis, paludibus, &c. impedita, inaccessa, et impervia, saltem viantibus quam molesta. This learned man would have been more happy, if (without resting in the word cumber, which is owing to cumbe, or filling up a deep hollow place) he had proceeded to derive cumri from cum, and brory, a place or country: so as the Brit. Cumry, Lat. Cumbria, like our Eng. Cumberland, might be a country where the inhabitants lived chiefly in the combs or cloughs, or valleys surrounded by the mountains.

COMMUNA, Communio pasturæ. Commons, or right of common in open fields or woods: all the tenants and inhabitants who had this right (now the commoners) were formerly called the communance and comauce. The abbot and convent of Misenenden, in right of their cell or hermitage at Musewell, had communione pasture tam in bosco quam in plano, i. 103. Inquisitio fiat utrum membrum illud de manerio de Brehull quod idem Thomas tenet, debeat participare de vasto manerii de Brehull ratione communæ ejusdem manerii, in qua communia nihil habent ut dicunt, i. 239. Whence communare, to enjoy the right of commoning—Talis appropriatio et inclusio non fiat in prato, falcabili, sed in tali loco ubi tenentes omni tempore anni consueverunt communare seu communam clamare, i. 479.

COMPERTORIUM. A judicial inquest in the civil law made by delegates, to find out and relate the truth of a cause; Et in carnibus porcinis emptis pro clericis domini archiepiscopi sedentibus super compertorium apud Burcestre, ii. 55.

COMPUTUM reddere. To give up accounts. Hence the old word a count, or declaration in law. The countours or counters were the serjeants at law retained to plead a cause; as Chaucer,

A sheriff had he been, and a countour
Was no where sich a worthy vavasour.

Hence to cast acompt, a counter, or table of counting in a shop, a counter, or piece of brass with which they counted. The Counter, or prison in London, where the citizens were secured, till they had accounted and paid their debts; Adamus de Catmere reddit computum pro Bernardo de S. Walerico, i. 170.

COMPOSTUM, compositum, compost. Any dung or sullage, or other unctuous matter, compounded (in Heraldry componed) to fatten and improve a soil: whence compostare, to lay on dung, or enrich the ground; Inter Hokeday et diem S. Martini bene possunt ibidem ducente quadraginta muliones sustentari ad opus domini ad terram suam compostandam, ii. 136.

CONFESSOR. In 34. Edward III. the archbishops and bishops through their respective dioceses granted indulgence to all those who went to sea against the common enemy, with particular privilege to choose their own confessor, ii. 126. For the confessionary to receive confessions, was in the old English, to shreve, or to shrive:

GLOSSARY.

Sax. repiran, whence the party confessed was berpiran, whence our Eng. beshrived, or looking like a confessed, or beshrived person, who is imposed a penance; to beshrēw, is to imprecate, or denounce the curse of sin, as in confession. The act of confession was called repirte, whence possibly, to shift, or shuffle in discourse, like people who are ashamed or afraid to tell all their faults. The most solemn time of confessing was the day before Lent, which from thence is called Shrove-Tuesday.

CONSECRATIO. The first form of consecrating churches in England, was at a synod held at Celchyth, an. 816. ii. 300. A solemn consecration of several churches in the diocese of Lincoln, and particularly in the archdeaconry of Oxford, an. 1238. by Robert Grosthead, bishop of Lincoln, and William Brewer, of Exeter, i. 312. No church could be legally consecrated, without an allotment of manse, and glebe, generally given by the lord of the manor, who thereby became patron of the church, i. 314. Several portions given to the church of Chesterton, nomine dotis ad ejusdem ecclesie dedicationem, i. 313. One virgate, and six acres of land, given at the consecration of the church of Wormenhale, i. 466. One virgate, one tothland, and eight acres, given at the dedication of the church of Heyford ad pontem, consecrated by Wulfwin, bishop of Dorchester, who came to that see an. 1046. and died, an. 1067. 2. Will. Conq. ii. 163. Two marks paid as a procuration to the bishop, for the provision and entertainment of himself and retinue. Nos R. Clonens. episcopum vice venerabilis patris R. dei gratia Linc. episc. ecclesiam de Elsefeld septimo id. Julii, an. dom. MCCLXXIII. dedicasse, et recepisse a procuratore rectoris dicte ecclesie duas marcas, nomine procuracionis ratione dedicationis ecclesie, ii. 164.

CONSERVATOR. A delegated umpire, or standing arbitrator, who, as a third impartial friend, was chosen, or appointed to compose and adjust all differences that should arise between two other parties; Ego Simon rector ecclesie de Heyford-Waryn—subjiciendo me cohercioni et compulsioni cujuslibet judicis ordinarii vel delegati, seu conservatoris quem dicti religiosi et eorum successores duxerint eligendum, ii. 161. Whence our English conservator became a forinsick word; as, conservator of the truce and safe conducts, appointed by stat. 2. Hen. V. cap. 6. and 4. Hen. V. cap. 7. Conservators of the peace, or justices, instituted by king Edw. III. &c.

CONSISTORIUM. The court Christian, or spiritual court, held formerly in the nave of the cathedral church, or in some chapel, isle, or portico belonging to it, in which the bishop presided, and had some of his clergy for assessors and assistants. But this consistory court is now held by the bishop's chancellor or commissary, and by archdeacons or their officials; Cum inter abbatem et conventum Osen. ex parte una, et priorem et conventum de Burcester ex altera, in consistorio Lincoln. aliquandiu litigatum fuisset, i. 489.

CONSTABULARIUS. Constable. A Lat. comes stabuli, the master of the horse, or prefect of the imperial stables, in the decline of the Roman empire. Afterwards applied to any officer who had the guard or custody of any place or persons. Brien Fitz-Count, constable of Walingford, 13. Hen. I. i. 114. Robertus de Oily constabularius regis, i. 127.

CONSUETUDO. Dies de consuetudine. A day's work to be paid as a customary service by the tenant; Debent redditum, et præterea quinque dies de consuetudine, i. 323.

CONVENIRE coram rege. To convene or cite a person to appear in the king's court, and answer an action preferred against him; Manerium de Erdinthon dominus rex tradidit cuidam Bernardo de sancto Walerico, quem Godefridus abbas de Egnesham sæpius convenit coram rege de jure suo, i. 184.

COPPIRE domum. To cope a house, or to lay on the roof and covering on the top of it; Johanni Coventre de Banbury tegulatori capienti in grosso ad coppiendam prædictam domum iv. lib. i. den. ii. 255. From the Sax. coppe, the height or top of a thing, cop, a head, all from the Brit. koppa, the top, or highest part. Hence the cope, or upper covering, as prov. Under the cope of heaven. A cope, or upper garment, as the outer vest of a priest, and the cloak, or surtout of any other person, as in Chaucer, a cope is used for a cloak. Hence possibly the southern term to gaincope, or cross a field, i. e. to strike off the nearest way to the top, or head of the land. A hat with a high crown is called a copped crown hat.

GLOSSARY.

A sea cobbe, or coppe, is a bird with a tuft of plumes on the head. A coppe, or cob-nut, is the top, or chief, or head-nut. A cobble is a large pebble stone. Coping-stones are laid on the cope, or coping, or top of a wall. Copt, in the North, is high, as a coptman, i. e. a proud and high-minded man. Copt-know, or copt-knolle, is the conical top of a hill. A coppice is properly a small wood, or toft of trees, on the ascent of a hill. A cop of hay, a cop of pease, a cop of straw, &c. are used in Kent for a high rising heap: which the monks turned into coppa, so to be understood in that passage of Will. Thorn, inter X. Script. col. 1820. an. 1177.—Pacti sunt homines de halmoto de Menstre in Thaneto—fruges omnes suas coppare extunc et deinceps, et sic per coppas omnes decimas suas ipsi et hæredes sui a modo et in æternum legitime dare. Which the learned Du Fresne cites in voce Coppa: but seems to understand it only of cutting down their corn; whereas it denotes the gathering or laying up the corn in copes, or heaps, (as they do barley and other corn not bound,) that it might be the more easily and justly tithed. Quere, whether these words are not owing to the same original, a knob, or knoppe, a high swelling bunch. A knoll of trees, or high toft of trees upon a hill. Knolls, or round-headed roots, or turnips, so called in Kent. A knoddle, or noddle, a head. A knot, or protuberance in trees, &c. Gold knops, or the flowers of the ranunculus. The knape, or nape, Sax. neap; in Kent, the nod of the neck. A cap for the head, the cape of a cloak, &c.

COPROSE, copperas, vitriol. From copper, a Lat. cuprum, or Dutch koper: the German kupfferigt-angesicht, was an old phrase for what we call brazen-face, or copperface; and kupferige-nase, for what we call a copper-nose, or a red, carbuncled nose, which was exposed as a sign to some hospitia, inns, or houses of entertainment; from whence was the first occasion of Brazen-nose college in Oxford; In solutis sup-priori pro coprose et gallys emptis pro encausto ii. den. ii. 253. The chief places where they made this copperas in England, were Deptford and Folkstone, in Kent, and Brickel-sey, in Essex. The metalline stones, from which the liquor is dissolved, are gathered on the coast of the isle of Sheppey, and on the shore near Bright-Helmston, in Sussex, and several other parts.

CORBET-STONES. I think the same with what Dr. Skinner calls corbets, and from some authority expounds them to be stones wherein images stand. It seems derived from the Fr. corbeille, Lat. corbulus. The old Eng. corbel, and corbetel, was properly a niche in the wall of a church or convent, in which they placed an image, and the corbel-stones were the smooth and polished stones laid for the front and outside of the corbels, or niches. As at present, on the south side of the church of Ambrosden, the said corbels, or niches, remain, though the images are taken away. But the same niches, and little statues or figures in them, continue in the walls of very many old churches and steeples; Et in solutis Johanni Chepyn latamo aptanti et facienti xviii. corbel-stonys ponendis in prædicto muro v. sol. iv. den. ii. 254.

COTAGIUM. A cottage, or a cot, from Sax. cote, Island. Ket, a little house, or hut; Tenetur per socagium, et non habentur ibidem nisi tria cotagia, i. 432. Duo mesuagia cum uno cotagio, i. 544. Hence a sheep-cote, or sheep-cot. Cotswold in Gloucestershire, &c. and the termination of cote, or cot, in very many villages.

COTARIUS. Sax. cotryde, old Eng. cotseth, cottman, cottyger, now cottager; or the inhabitant of any country cot; Summa gallinarum carucatariorum et cotariorum xiv. gallinæ, i. 506. Hence a country clown is now called a mere cot, as a citizen ignorant of country affairs, a mere cit.

COTERELLUS. Spelman and Du Fresne make cotarius and coterellus to be both the same servile inhabitants. But I think in the Domesday Register and other ancient MSS. there does appear a distinction, not only in their name, but in their tenure and quality. The cotarius had a free socage tenure, and paid a firm, or rent, in provisions or money, with some customary service. But the coterellus held in absolute villanage, and had his person and goods disposed at the pleasure of the lord. Edmund, earl of Cornwall, gave to the Bonhommes of Asherugge his manors of Cherterton and Ambrosden; Una cum villanis, coterellis, eorum catallis, servitiis, sectis et sequellis, et omnibus suis ubicunque pertinentibus, i. 439.

GLOSSARY.

COTLAND, cotsethland. Land held by a cottager, whether in soccage or villanage; Dimidia acra jacet ibidem inter cotland quam Johannes Goldering tenet ex una parte, et cotland quam Thomas Webbe tenet ex altera, ii. 189.

COWELE. A cowl, or coul, or tub with two ears, to be carried between two persons on a coul-staff. From cucula, or co-cula, a vessel like a boat, from coca, or cogga, a boat; vide Cogge. A cowl, in Essex, is the appellative for any tub: whence a cowler, now pronounced a cooler, or brewing vessel. Pro novo couele empto ix. ii. 212.

CREST, crista. Any imagery, or carved work, to adorn the head or top of any thing, like our modern cornish. This word is now adopted by the heralds, and applied to the device set over a coat of arms; Et Willielmo Hykkedon conducto in grosso ad mensam domini ad dolandum et perficiendum le crest super cancellum prioratus ibidem, ii. 254.

CROFT, from Sax. crofte, crufte, which Spelman deduces from the Lat. crypta, or Gr. κρυπτω. A close, or small enclosure, nigh a dwelling house; Totam terram quæ est inter croftam Gilberti molendinarii, et messuagium quod fuit Adami, i. 186.

CROPPUS. A crop of corn, or the yearly product of arable land. From Sax. croppar, ears of corn, crop, the top, or head of any thing: whence to crop, or cut off the upper part: crop-eared, a crop of beef. In Sussex, they call darnel crop; and in Worcestersh. buck-wheat goes by this name of crop. The old Lat. cropa was the buttock of a horse, whence a crupper; Idem abbas ex mera liberalitate sua croppum de dicta crofta præfato priori instantè concessit pro hac vice, i. 420.

CRUCEM assumere. To take the cross, or to engage upon oath to undertake a personal expedition in the holy war, for the recovery of Jerusalem, and as a badge of their vow to saunter, to wear a cross on their upper garment. So Brien Fitz-Count, lord of Walingford, took on him the cross, and adventured to Jerusalem, i. 153. When persons had taken the cross, they bought an absolution to excuse them from the danger: by which means, some of the nobility, when they had formed a crusade of great numbers among their tenants and dependants, obtained a general dispensation from the pope, which they sold again by retail, to release and disengage all those who had more mind to stay at home. This project was very beneficial to Richard earl of Cornwall; and therefore the same favour was asked and obtained from the pope by William Longspe, in 30. Edw. III. i. 336.

CUPA, cuppa. A cup, or small metalline drinking vessel. Sax. cuppe, Brit. kuppan. Hence a cup-board, a cupping-glass, an acorn-cup, and the Italian cupulo, was taken from this form. The plate, or drinking cup of bishops and abbots, was part of the heriot paid to the king at their decease; Abbas de Oseneia obiit anno regni regis Edwardi vicesimo quinto,—petiit eschaetor ad opus domini regis cuppam et palefridum dicti abbatis defuncti, i. 470. Vid. Prynne, Histor. Collect. tom. ii. p. 834.

CURIA. Taken sometimes for the persons, or feudatory tenants, who did their suit and service at the court of the lord. So to a charter of Bernard de S. Walery, 30. Hen. II.—Hiis testibus . . . et omni curia mea, i. 193.

CURIA canonicorum. The convent or conventual house; Juxta rivulum extra curiam dictorum canonicorum, i. 246.

CURIA personæ ecclesiæ. The parsonage house; Omnes obventiones altaris et cæmeterii prædictæ ecclesiæ, et totam terram et curiam personæ, i. 288.—croftam quæ jacet juxta curiam personæ, ibid.

CURIA capitalis. Vide Mansum capitale.

CURIÆ adventus. The service of coming to the court of the lord; Reddit per annum ad terminum ipsius unam marcam, et nnum adventum curiæ, i. 574.

CURIALITAS. Courtesy, or pure kindness; Et in datis Willielmo Skynner gasconi de pistrina ex curialitate falcatorum per x. dies xii. den. ii. 256. Curialitas Angliæ was that custom, which we call the courtesy of England, when a man who has had a child by his wife deceased enjoys her estate during his own life.

CURTILAGIUM. From Lat. curs, curtis, a coop, or pen, or other small enclosure. A curtilage, mistaken by our writers for a garden, when it properly was a yard, or back-side, adjoining to a house for the running of poultry, the keeping of hogs, &c. Curtilagium cum pertinentiis suis, i.

GLOSSARY.

380. Et dicunt quod infra curiam domini est unum curtillagium ad nutriend. porrect. et ol. quod valet per an. xiiid. ii. 136.

CUSTOS abbacie. The person to whose custody a vacant abbey was committed, who, as a steward of the rents and profits, was to give account to the escheator, and he to the king; Mandatum est Waltero de Lutegareshale custodi abbacie de Oseneia quod occasione dictorum cupæ palefridi et lanarum nichil erigat, i. 470.

CUSTOMARIUS. An inferior tenant, in villanage or soccage, who by custom is obliged to pay such service of work and labour for his lord; Ipsæ Robertus et omnes alii customarii domine, i. 575.

CYRIC-SCOTE. Vide Church-scot. The original of the custom and continuance of it historically delivered, ii. 292.

D.

DANE-GELT. A tribute which the Danes upon their frequent incursions imposed on the English, as the arbitrary terms of peace and departure, an. 873, i. 51. First imposed on the whole nation to continue as a yearly suspension to the Danes under king Ethelred, an. 991. Alfred and Ingulph report, that king Edward the Confessor remitted and abrogated this tax. But it is certain, that William the Conqueror, though he would not reduce the annual payment, yet he ordered the raising of it as often as the necessities of invasion or of expedition did require. It was severely exacted and augmented by William Rufus. And in the reign of Hen. I. it was computed among the king's standing revenues. The next successor, king Stephen, promised by oath, on his coronation day, that this danegeld should be for ever remitted, Hen. Hunt. p. 38. From which time some writers have dated the expiration of this tax. Yet it seems rather to have continued upon extraordinary occasions, till it was abrogated by time, or rather swallowed up in tallage and parliamentary impositions. The laws of Edw. Conf. cap. 11. rate this tax at 12*d.* on every hide. Hen. Hunt. computes it at 2*s.* on each hide; and Jo. Brompton, at 3*d.* on a bovat or ox-gang. No doubt it varied according to the different exigencies upon which it was levied. To be exempted from this tax was a peculiar privilege granted by king Hen. II. to the tenants within the honor of Walingford, ut sint quieti de geldis et danegeldis, i. 157. In the donation of lands to religious uses, when many other burdens were remitted, this was still reserved: so in 27. Hen. II. Hen. de Oily gave four hides in Chesterton to the abbey of Egnesham; Liberas et quietas ab omnibus querelis, exceptis muredredo et danegeldo, i. 185. 578.

DAYERIA, dayri, dairy. It is derived by Dr. Skinner from the Fr. derrier, as if the dairy were on the back part, or behind the rest of the house. The learned Fr. Junius is no more happy, when he refers it to the Greek; Δαίρια et per synocopen δαίρια Hesychio exponitur δαίμων, ἐμπειρος, gnara, perita. Non enim cujusvis est curare lacticinia, sed a lacticiniis edulia concinnaturam singulæ rusticarum rerum experientia imbutam esse oportet. Omnino interim huc pertinet, quod Gallis dariole dicitur cibi genus quod iisdem Gallis alias nuncupatur laicteron vel flan de laict. Ac fortasse quoque Danis ab eadem origine darere dictum est jentaculum, quod septentrionales lacticiniis jentare sint soliti. Both these are trifling conjectures: the word dayrie, or deirie, is originally English, from day, deie, Sax. dag, and signified at first the<sup>k</sup> daily yield of milch cows, or the daily profit made of them. As a day-work of land was such a quantity as could be ploughed up by one plough in one day. W. Thorn inter X. Script. col. 2203. which the French called journal, Lat. jornale. So in Lorrain, and Champagne, they now use the word dayer for the meeting of the day-labouring women to give an account of their day's work, and receive the wages of it. The dairy-maid is called androchia in Eleta, l. ii. cap. 87. Androchia pudica esse debet, et laboriosa daeria; a dairy in the North is called the milkness, as the dairy-maid is in all parts a milk-maid; Wrechewyke, compotus Henrici Deye et Johanne uxoris sue de omnibus exitibus et proventibus de dayri domini prioris de Burncester, ii. 211. Computant de xxxv. sol. vi. den. receptis de dayeria de la Breche, ii. 248.

GLOSSARY.

DAPIFER, a dupes ferendo. At first a domestic officer, like our steward of the household, or rather clerk of the kitchen. Then by degrees any fiduciary servant, especially the chief steward or head bailiff of an honor, barony, or manor; Malcolmus rex Scotiæ dapifero suo de honore de Huntingdon, i. 165. Possibly from dapifer, the chief servant, of better figure than the rest, comes our present phrases, a dapper-fellow, and dapperly-done. Hence the Lat. dapsilis, hospitable and generous; Dapsilis in mensa frugalia pabula præstans, i. 484.

DECANUS Christianitatis. The dean rural, or urban, who had the district of ten churches in the country or city, within which he exercised a jurisdiction of great advantage to ecclesiastical discipline. They were sometime styled archipresbyteri, and were at first both in order and authority above the archdeacons, ii. 341. They were elected by the clergy, and by their votes again deposed; but afterwards were appointed and removed at the discretion of the bishop, and thence called decani temporarii, as distinguished from the cathedral deans, who were decani perpetui, ii. 346. The rural dean was sometimes simply called decanus, as in a charter of John del Osse of Wendlebury, 11. Hen. II. Hiis testibus; Rogero decano de Pire, i. 168. So likewise the urban or city dean, as in a composition between the abbey of Egnesham and priory of Burcester, 34. Hen. II. Hiis testibus; Nigello decano de Orenford, i. 201. Called decanus episcopi in the laws of Edw. Confess. ii. 337. Deans rural and urban collected the taxes imposed upon the clergy, i. 179. The chapter in every deanery were a court Christian for determining the right of tithes, &c. i. 170. Robert Grossthead, bishop of Lincoln, by advice of the predicant friars, commanded his archdeacons and rural deans to make strict inquisition into the lives of all the nobility and commonalty within their precincts, which was thought such a grievance and imposition upon the liberty of sinners, that upon complaint the king interposed and stopped the proceeding, i. 336. The taxation of benefices by Walter, bishop of Norwich, an. 1254, was done by the bishop's appointing the dean and three rectors or vicars in every deanery, who upon oath were to certify the just estimate of all church revenues, i. 440. All the parochial clergy bound by oath to attend the rural chapters; to which purpose the appropriators were sometimes obliged to find a horse for the poor vicar, i. 429. It was their office to give induction to clerks after their presentation by the patron, and admission or institution by the bishop. So an. 1220, 5. Hen. III. Richard, rural dean of Wodesdon, inducted the prior and canons of St. Frideswide into the appropriated tithes of Oakle, and certified it by special instrument, concluding thus; Ego et plures alii viri fide digni de capitulo de Witesdon (sic) in hujus rei testimonium sigilla nostra apposuimus, ii. 2. The same office done by John, vicar of Wynchendon, dean of Wodesdon, anno 1326. The sentence of superior ecclesiastical judges committed to the execution of the rural dean, ii. 3. The title of Decanus Christianitatis falsely applied to the cathedral dean by the editor of Append. ad Fascic. p. 636. An historical account of deans rural, urban, cathedral, and conventual, delivered from ii. 335. to 370.

DEDICATION of churches. The wake or feast of dedication, kept with solemnity and generous entertainment; Et in datis duobus valectis forestæ portantibus carnes ferinas priori in festo dedicationis ecclesiæ hoc anno v. sol. ii. 259. Solemn processions on the day of dedication, ii. 378. Those inhabitants who had the privilege of a chapel of ease, were to repair to the mother church on that festival, ii. 281. and there to make their oblations, ii. 282. The history of the institution and observance of wakes or feasts of dedication, ii. 302. Vide Consecration of churches.

DEFALTA, defaltum. From Fr. default, default, a neglect or omission of appearance in a court of justice, for which judgment might be given against the defaulter; Ipsi non veniunt ad hunc diem, unde iudicium assise capitur versus eos per eorum defaltum, i. 501. Ipse non venit et alias fecit defaltum, ii. 116.

DEFENDERE se. A phrase in the Domesday Register, to be taxed for such a quantity of land. As the manor of Brill was taxed for twenty hides; Tunc xx. hidæ se defendebant, i. 230.

DEFORCIARE. Vide after DEVOTA.

GLOSSARY.

DEMESNE. From the Lat. dominium, as that part of a manor or estate which the lord keeps in his own hands, or to his own use; or, as some pretend, from the Fr. de mesne, as land which a man holds of himself, and not from a superior lord. It was generally taken for those grounds that were adjacent to the court or manor house, which the lord did not let out to feudatory or servile tenants; but either manured himself, or assigned to tenants at will. The barons often granted (with consent of ecclesiastical authority) the tithe of their own demesne to religious houses, i. 102. In those manors which our kings held in demesne, they had palaces or royal seats, where, by frequent changing of their stations, they made a sort of constant progress through their whole kingdom, i. 72. Manerium de Brehull fuit antiquum dominicum regis, i. 403. Homines de manerio de Heddingdon quod est de antiquo dominio coronæ Angliæ, i. 452. At these demesne manors the kings had free chapels exempt from episcopal jurisdiction; as at Brill, Heddingdon, &c. Dominicum pratum; the meadow grounds not rented out, but kept in the hands of the lord, i. 103.

DENARIUS S. Petri, Peter-penny, Hearth-penny, Romefeah, Romescot. In the North ream-penny; where they use this proverb, He reckons up his ream-pennies, i. e. he tells all his faults. This levy was at first a penny from every house, wherein there were thirty-pence, vivæ pecuniæ, of ready money, collected, and sent to Rome; which by custom passed into a standing tax, though at first it was only a voluntary contribution, of which one half was to go for alms to the English school at Rome, and the other to the pope's use. It was given first by king Ina, and confirmed by king Offa, and king Ethelwolph, established by the laws of king Canute, cap. 9. Edgar, cap. 54. Edward Confessor, cap. 10. William Conqueror, cap. 18. Henry I. cap. 11. Collected by the bishops, who employed the archdeacons and rural deans to receive it before the festival of St. Peter ad vincula, Aug. 1. as appointed by the canons of king Edgar, ii. 293. The whole sum was by P. Greg. stated at two hundred pounds twenty-six shillings, of which the proportion in this diocese of Lincoln was forty-two pounds. King Edw. III.

an. 1365, forbade the payment of this duty to the pope. But this was only a bold instance of that prince's displeasure. For the custom soon returned, and continued to the reign of Hen. VIII. when Polydore Virgil was employed here as the Pope's general receiver. No place nor religious house was exempted from this imposition, but only the abbey of St. Alban's. Some churches and parishes paid a stated composition; as in 30. Hen. II. Capellæ de Egnesham et de Chersinton, et de Ardinton, similiter etiam ecclesiæ de Stoches et de Cherleberi ab omni onere episcopali ab antiquo liberæ sunt, nec solvent pro denariis leati Petri nisi octo solidos, i. 195. In the diocese of Canterbury the rural deans were the collectors in their respective districts, ii. 263. The religious often obliged their firmers and tenants to pay a certain proportion toward this tax; as in the rental of the abbey of Glastonbury taken an. 1201; Manerium Glaston. reddit per annum in gabulo vi. lib. vii. sol.—in denariis S. Petri xxxiii. den.—Pylton reddit in gabulo xiii. lib. iv. sol.—de denariis S. Petri iii. sol. &c. Cartul. Abbot. Glaston. MS. p. 38.

DENARIUS tertius comitatus. In the fines and other profits arising from the county courts, two parts were allotted to the king, and a third part or penny to the earl of the county, who either received it in specie at the assizes and trials, or had an equivalent composition paid from the Exchequer. So Eubulo le Strange, in right of his wife Alice, daughter and heir of Henry de Laey earl of Lincoln, had by letters patent, 5. Edw. III. Custodiam et wardam castelli nostri de Lincoln. cum balliva ibidem, et viginti libratis annui redditus pro tercio denario comitatus, ii. 19.

DENARI. A general term for any sort of money; Solventur hominibus de Heddingdon de denariis domini, singulis annis proximo die quo falcure incipient, quinque solidi, i. 453.

DESPONSARE. To take a woman in marriage. So of Maud, daughter and heir of Robert de Oily, senior; Milo Crispinus desponsavit eam, i. 155. Mulier desponsata, a lawful wife. Henry de Fontibus gave his estate to his sister and her husband, in default of issue so lawfully begotten; Nisi hæredem habuero de muliere desponsata, i. 159.

DETACHIARE, dittachiare. By a writ of detachment to seize, or take into custody goods or persons; Nec nos nec hæredes nostri prædictum Radulphum vel hæredes suos dittachiemus vel disseisiri faciemus, i. 286.

DEVISÆ. The borders or limits of division between lands, parishes, or counties; Sic usque hetheneburn inter Akemanstrete inter devisas com. Oxon. et Buck. i. 457. Hence the Devises, or Devizes, a town in Wiltshire, situate on the confines of the West-Saxon and Mercian kingdoms.

DEVOTA Deo. A woman in her widowhood, or latter part of her life, took a religious habit, and was called a vowess, or devotee. So Edith, widow of Robert de Oily, jun. in old age grew penitent, and became memoralis matrona Deo devota, i. 129.

DEFORCIARE. Strictly and properly to turn out by violence, or to keep possession of lands in open violation of the rights of the heir or lawful owner. But it often signified no more than to fence off a suit or action, or to defend the right and property of possession. And therefore in assizes, or trials, the claimer or plaintiff was called querens, and the possessor or defendant was deforcians; Inter Johannem filium Nigelli querentem, et Sampsonem de Atringrave et Mariam uxorem ejus deforciantes, i. 410, 455.

DEFORCIATIO. A distraint or seizure of goods for satisfaction of a lawful debt; Nos et hæredes nostros distringere possint per bona mobilia et immobilia et hominum nostrorum, et deforciationem tenere quousque plenarie fuerit satisfactum, i. 414.

DISSEISIRE. To disseize, eject, or turn out of possession; Rex Richardus I. disseisivit Gerardum de Camvilla de castello et vicecomitatu Lincolnensi, i. 212.

DISTRINGERE. To distrain and keep the districiones, distresses, or distrains, till payment and full satisfaction; Possint nos et successores nostros et prædictas omnes terras—distringere ad solutionem memoratam, et districiones retinere quousque—plenarie fuerit satisfactum, i. 490.

DOMESDAY-BOOK. When king Alfred divided his kingdom into counties, hundreds, and tithings, he had an inquisition taken of the several districts, and digested into a register called Dom-boc, i. e. the judicial or judgment book, deposited in the church of Winchester, and thence entitled Codex Wintoniensis, to which king Edw. sen. seems to refer in the first chapter of his laws. The general survey taken by king Will. Conqu. was after the precedent of king Alfred, and seems but a corruption of, or rather an addition to, the same name, Doom-boc into Domesday-book. And therefore a trifling derivation to impute the name to Domus Dei, as if so called from the church, wherein it was first repositied. Nor is it any wiser conjecture to ascribe it to Doomsday, or the final day of judgment. When the appellation does really imply no more than the Doom-book, or register from which sentence and judgment might be given in the tenure of estates: whence by Latin writers commonly called Liber Judicialis. Nor may it be improper to observe, (because no notice has been yet taken of so small a matter,) that the addition of dey, or day, (Dome-book, Domesday-book,) does not augment the sense of the word, but only doubles and confirms it. For the word dey, or day, in that composition, does not really signify the measure of time, but the administration of justice. For as Dr. Hammond well observes in his Annotation on Heb. x. 25. the word day, in all idioms, does signify judgment. So 1 Cor. iii. 13. ἀνθρωπίνῃ ἡμέρᾳ, is human judgment, &c. And even now, in the North, a deies-man, or day's-man, is an arbitrator, an umpire, or judge. So as Domesday-book is no more than the book of judicial verdict, or decretory sentence, or dooming of judgment, i. 86.

DOMINA. A title given to those women, who in their own right of inheritance held a barony. So Maud, the daughter of Robert de Oily, sen. who inherited the honour of Walingford, was therefore styled Matildis domina de Walingford, i. 106.

DOMINIUM. Right, or legal power; In sylva dicti manerii sive domini de Pidintona, aut infra precinctum ejusdem non habent aliqui extranei dominium aliquo modo in parte vel in toto se intromittere, ii. 127.

DOS. It properly signified the portion brought by the wife to the husband, and not the dowry settled by the husband on the wife. Yet it was sometimes taken in this latter sense, for the jointure to be enjoyed by the widow after the husband's decease. And if an equal provision had not been made before the husband's death, his relict might sue the heirs at law de rationabili dote, for a reasonable share of the estate to be assigned for her maintenance. So Eustace, the relict of Thomas de Verdon, taking for a second husband Richard de Camvill, she claimed her reasonable dowry of Nicholas de Verdon, her husband's heir, which occasioned a legal fine; Inter Richardum de Camvill et Eustaciam uxorem ejus petentes, et Nicholaum de Verdon tenentem de rationabili dote ipsius Eustacie, quam ipsa clamat versus eundem Nicholaum de omnibus tenementis quae fuerint Thomae de Verdon quondam viri sui, i. 232. Vide Duarium.

DRAW-GERE. Any furniture of cart-horses, for drawing a waggon or other carriage; from draw, and Sax. geappe, in our Eng. geer, any preparatory utensils, or instruments, and especially clothes, and bodily habit, whence geapkin, or jerkin, a short diminutive coat. From geappian, to provide, or to clothe. This the modern Latin writers turned into geraula, which Du Fresne rightly interprets, utensilia aut quævis apparatus, but seems with some violence to derive it from the German ghe-reed, when it bears more immediate relation to the Sax. geappe, old Eng. geere, as in the obsolete proverb, Ne gold ne geere, i. e. neither money nor goods. In no geere, i. e. not ready, unprovided: whence the old word geerefull, or gierefull, well habited, or well fitted with arms, as in Chaucer, Troilus, l. 4. f. 167. To preve in that thy gierfull violence. Hence the Sax. geapd, Eng. yard, properly geard, or garden, or as now in Lincolnshire, garth, a place well fenced and cultivated. Thence gýpan, and gýpsi, to girt, a girdle, a garter. In the North, to garre, i. e. to make a garment, or do any other work. Sax. geapn, Eng. yarn, still in the North called garn, or wool worked into a thread, geapnab, Eng. to earn, or obtain by labour. The old word garth is owing to the same original, and signified any work or device, to take or to catch game. As the fish-garths in stat. 23. Hen. VIII. cap. 18. were nets and unlawful engines for catching fish, used by the garth-men, or poachers, mentioned stat. 1. 13. Rich. II. cap. 9. and an. 17. cap. 19. The sound and the sense of the Sax. geappe and geappian, are more nearly preserved in the present English head-geer, i. e. head clothes, horse-geer, i. e. harness; gearish and garish, i. e. spruce and fine. And in the North, to geer, or to gear, is to dress; whence prov. Snogly geared, i. e. neatly dressed. As in the South, we say such a person is in his geers, or out of his geers.—Pro factura de draw-gere per Walterum Carpenter de Langeton iiii. ii. 213.

DUARIUM, doarium, dotarium. The dowry of a wife settled on her in marriage to be enjoyed after her husband's decease. The English dowry is by Fr. Junius rightly referred to the old Eng. to dowe, i. e. to give, as Chaucer, To whom for evermore mine hart I dowe; whence a dose, or dows, or portion of any thing given to eat or drink, is as near the old Eng. as the primitive Greek. The same Junius does conjecture, that our English widow is hence owing to the Sax. weð, and dupe, as if a woman wedded to, or by covenant assured of, such a certain dowry. To which sense the word dowager does well agree. The wife with consent of her husband could assign a part of her dowry to religious uses; Ego Editha Roberto de Oili conjugali copula juncta consilio et voluntate ejusdem Roberti mariti mei de duario meo de Weston dedi in perpetuam elemosinam, &c. i. 126.

DYTENUM, Dictenum. A dittany, ditty, or song. Venire cum toto ac pleno dyteno, to sing harvest home; Homines de Heddyngdon ad curiam domini singulis annis inter festum S. Michaelis et S. Martini venient cum toto ac pleno dyteno sicut hactenus consueverunt, i. 453.

E

ELEEMOSINA. Sax. almerr; Eng. alms. Eleemosinaria, Fr. aumônerie; Eng. aumerie, aumbry, ambry, which in the North they now use for a pantry, or cupboard; Welch. almari. Eleemosinarius, almoner; elemosina pura et perpetua, et libera: Pure and perpetual frank-almoigne. Lands so given to religious uses were discharged from all taxes and other secular burdens; Qualiter extincta sunt feoda domini abbatibus

GLOSSARY.

quæ ab ipso petita sunt—profert chartam Roberti de Olleio, et confirmationem regis quod habet—in puram et perpetuum eleemosinam, i. 432.

EMENDATIO domorum et sepium. The repair of houses, and mending of hedges. To religious houses a privilege was often granted to receive as much wood as was needful for these purposes. So the abbey of Missenden, in right of their hermitage at Musewell, had a grant from Joan de Pidington; De bosco quod opus fuerit ad emendationem domorum et sepium suarum, i. 103.

EMENDATIO panis et cervisie. The assize of bread and beer, or the power of supervising and correcting such weights and measures; a privilege granted by the king to lords of manors: which power gave occasion to the present office of ale-taster, appointed in every court-leet, and sworn to look to the assize of bread, and ale or beer, within the precincts of that lordship; Ad nos spectat emendatio panni panis et cervisie, et quicquid regis est excepto murthero et latrociniis probato, i. 275.

EPISCOPALE onus, Episcopalia. Synodals, pentecostals, and other taxes and contributions from the clergy to the diocesan bishop. Which burden was remitted by special privilege to some churches, and especially to those free chapels that were built upon the king's demesne. So 30. Hen. II. Capellæ de Egnesham, et de Chersinton, et de Ardington; similiter etiam ecclesiæ de Stoches et de Cherlebirn ab omni onere episcopali liberæ sunt, i. 195.

ERNES. The loose scattered ears of corn that are left on the ground after the binding or cocking of it; Conducto ad præparandum usque ad carectam xxix. sessiones—ordei cum les ernes, viz. viii. den. ii. 256. From the old Teuton. ahr, an ear of corn; ernde, harvest; ernden, to cut or mow corn. Hence to ern is in some places the same as to glean, or what in Kent we call to lease. Hence ersh, in Sussex, is the stubble after the corn is cut; what in Kent we call the gratten; in the North, eddish; from the Sax. edre, roughings and after-maths. The ersh in Sussex is in Surrey the esh; as a wheat-esh, a barley-esh, &c.

ESCAETOR Regis. The king's escheator, who took into custody and accounted for all escheats to the crown, as forfeitures, lapses, wards, &c. Of which officers there was one commissioned in every county to execute the office for one year, and to certify his receipts into the Exchequer. Thomas Maunsel escaetor regis in com. Buck. computat regi xxxvs. de manerio de Lutegareshale, i. 348. This officer received all heriots due to the king, and entered upon all vacant sees and abbeys held in barony, and accounted for the intermediate profits, which arose before the restitution of the temporalities, i. 470.

ESPICURNANTIA. The office of spigurnel, or scaler of the king's writs. Spigurnellus, which word Spelman and Du Fresne recite without interpreting. It seems detorted from the Sax. ppappan, to shut up, to seal, or to secure; whence the spar of any mineral, i. e. the outward coat that involves or shuts up the ore. The spar of a door, i. e. the bolt. To spar a door in the North, is to shut the door. Spars and sparables are nails to enclose and shut up, &c. The monks of Rochester were to allow a set quantity of provisions to the king's spigurnels at their coming to that city; Pro ista autem provisione et concessione debent prior et conventus Roffensis ubicunque dominus rex fuerit quieti esse pro cera ad sigillum. Spelman in voce Spigurnellus. Oliver de Standford in 27. Edw. I. held lands in Nettlebed, com. Oxon. per serjeantiam espicurnantie in cancellaria domini regis, i. 412.

ESSOIN. Fr. essoigne; Lat. essonium, exonium. From the old Lat. sunnis, an impediment, let, or hindrance. When a person was cited to appear and answer in any court, upon any just cause or reason of absenting, he was allowed to allege his essoin, or excuse; and if the pretence were just, and well approved by the court, he had his essoin, or respite of longer time. Essonium de malo lecti was in case of sickness of the party summoned, which sickness was to be attested in open court four days successively, when the judges might appoint four knights to attend the sick person, and see him depute a proctor or attorney to appear for him. But this excuse was not allowed to the proctors or attorneys themselves, because one deputy could not depute another. Essoin was granted on a nonsuit, and the parties suffered themselves to be nonsuited to gain this respite; Predictus Johannes fecit se

esse non versus predictum priorem de predicto placito, et habuit diem per essonium suum ad hunc diem, ii. 13. Et predictus Johannes tunc fecit se essonari de servicio domini regis et habuit inde diem per essonium suum hic usque ad hunc diem, vid. a die paschatis in xv. dies, ii. 115.

ESTREGBORDS. Eastern-boards, or deal-boards brought from the eastern parts for wainscot, and other uses; Et in sex estregbords, viz. wapinscots emptis apud Steresbrugge ii. sol. iii. den. ii. 254.

EVENINGS. The delivery at even or night of a certain portion of grass or corn to a customary tenant, who performs his wonted service of mowing or reaping for his lord, and at the end of his day's work receives such a quantity of the grass or corn to carry home with him as a gratuity or encouragement of his bounden service. So in the manor of Burcester; Virgata terre integra ejusdem tenuræ habebit liberam ad vespertas quæ vocatur eveninggs tantam sicut falcator potest per falcem levare et domum portare per ipsam, i. 575. This gave occasion to the present corrupt and shameful practice of day-labourers in felling and faggotting of wood, who, at every evening, carry home with them a burden of wood, as great as they are able to bear, though it be no part of their wages or covenanted hire. Now servile tenures and customary services are extinct, this practice of labourers carrying home a load, or bundle, is no better than pure theft, and ought, in all honor and justice, to be punished and reformed.

EXACTIO secularis. Any sort of tax or imposition paid by feudatory and servile tenants, from all which the freeholders within the honor of Wallingford were exempted by special privilege; Ut quieti sint ab omni consuetudine et exactione seculari, i. 157.

EXCOMMUNICATUM capias, or a writ de excommunicato capiendo. A precept directed to the sheriff from the Court of Chancery for the apprehension of a person who has stood obstinately excommunicated for forty days. Robert de Pidington and others, imprisoned for such contempt of ecclesiastical authority, were, at the request of the archbishop of Canterbury, released, to prosecute their appeal to Rome, i. 503.

EXERCITUS bestiarum. A herd or drove of deer, or other forest game; Ille locus est magis et maximus exercitus bestiarum locius foreste, i. 353.

EXHIBITIO. An allowance for meat and drink, such as the religious appropriators made to the poor depending vicar. So in all churches appropriated to the abbey of Oseney; Vicarius habebit sufficientem exhibitionem sicut canonici quoad victualia in mensa canonicorum ubi canonici moram faciunt, i. 429.

EXPLICIA, expletia, expleta. The rents or intermediate profits of an estate in trust; Capiendo inde expletia ad valenciam, &c. ii. 12.

EXTENTA. The survey and valuation of an estate made upon inquisition or the oaths of a jury, impanelled by the sheriff by virtue of the king's precept; Extenta terrarum et tenementorum quæ fuerunt domini Johannis filii Nigelli defuncti in villa de Borstall com. Bucks. facta ibidem, i. 443. Extenta manerii de Ambrosden per duodecim juratores an. 28. Edw. I. ii. 411.

EXTRACTA curiæ. The profits of holding a court arising from the customary dues, fees, and amercements; Computant de tribus denariis receptis de extractis unius curiæ tentæ apud Burcester, ii. 251.

EYRE. A low wet place, or little island, called in some old writings an eight, which Skinner would have to be a contraction of islet, i. e. a small island. But the word bears more immediate relation to the Sax. eage; Lat. eia, an island; which in terminations is ey, the present Islandic appellation for an island; which syllable ended the name of very many of our little islands; as Eley, Shepey, Perensey, Ramsey, &c. Hence an eylet, and eylet or ilet-hole. The French, in Du Fresne's opinion, have hence borrowed their cau, water; and possibly the Irish ait, a place; Duas placius prati quæ jacent prope Thamisiâ quæ vocantur Porters-Eyte, i. 416. So the low marshy tract, that lies by the river in Blackthorn, within the parish of Ambrosden, is now called Blackthorn-Eyte<sup>1</sup>.

F

FALCARE prata. To cut or mow down grass in meadows hayned, or laid in for hay; a customary service done for the lord by his inferior tenants: Homines de Hellingdon per duos dies prata domini falcabunt, tertio vero die herbam ibi falcata vertent, i. 453. Falcatura una was the service of one time mowing or cutting grass in the demesne meadows of the lord; Tenet in bondagio, et debet unam falcaturam per dimidium diem, ibid. Falcata was the grass fresh mowed and laid in swathes; Ipse Robertus et omnes alii custumarii domine liberam falcata in prato vocato Gilbertsham sine prandio debent tornare, et inde feonum levare, et mulliones inde facere, i. 575. The customary mower had the liberty of carrying away with him at night a bundle of hay, as much as he could take up and carry off with his scythe; In manerio de Pedinton quilibet falcator habebit ad vesperam singulis diebus quamdiu falcabunt fasciculum herbe quantum potest capere sursum cum falce sua sine auxilio aliorum, ii. 138. This liberty was legal, when custom or compact settled it on servile tenants; but in our present labourers, who have their full day's wages, for them to carry home wood, or any other materials whereon they work, is no better than an open theft, which is certainly a sin for the hiring to commit, and as certainly a shame for the master to connive at.

FALMOTUM, Falchesmota, Folkesmote, Folkmote. From Sax. folc, people, and mote, or gemote, a convention, or assembly. So as the folkmot was a popular convention of all the inhabitants of a city or town, called a burgmote, or of all the free tenants within a county, called the schiremote. Which solemn assembly in boroughs or towns, upon extraordinary occasions, was to be convened by sound of bell, called the motbell. In the county folkmete, all knights and free tenants did their fealty to the king, and elected the annual sheriff on October 1. till this popular election was devolved to the king's nomination, an. 1315, 9. Edw. II. after which, the city folkmete was swallowed up in the common council, and the county folkmete in the sheriff's turn, and assizes. The word folkmete was sometimes of a less extent, and applied to any populous meeting, as of all tenants to the court-leet or baron of their lord. So to a charter of Wido de Meriton about 10. Henry II. Testes donationis sunt Fulco sacerdos de Meriton, Lævellus de Horspath, et totum falmotum meorum hominum et suorum, i. 167. Some remains of the word mote and gemote are in the moot-house, or council chamber, in some towns; Moot-hall, moot-case, mooting, &c.

FANNATIO. The fawning of does, or casting their young fauns. From the Fr. faon, a little kid; which Menagius deduces from the Gall. fan, a child. Whence Pierce Ploughman, l. 37. uses the word fauntekyns for little children; and confirmon fauntekyns. And to this seems owing the western term to fang for a child, i. e. to be godfather or godmother to that child; or in Somersetshire by the usual melting of f into v, to vang, as he vanged to me at the vout. To the same original we may ascribe the word fangles, or vangles, properly the baubles or playthings of children that are proud to be new fangled. From the Fr. faon, Du Fresne deduces the flesh faoneson, venison; which in the forest charter of Rich. I. is called foinesun. Tempus vel mensis fannationis, was the fawning or the fence month, fifteen days before Midsummer, and fifteen after; when great care was taken that no disturbance should be given to the does, or to their young; Accederent ad malefaciendum tam tempore fannationis quam alio tempore, i. 353. Tenentes de Brehull, Borstall, et Okle infra forestam prædicti manerii habent communem pasturam omnium averiorum—omnibus temporibus eis placentibus, præter cum capris bidentibus et porcis ætatis unius anni in mense fannationis, videlicet quindecim ante festum Nativitatis S. Johannis Baptistæ et quindecim post, ii. 146.

FELONIA, felonum bona. Felons' goods due to the king, and by him granted to the lords of manors, &c.—Cum messuagiis, gardinis, ædificiis, felonis, eschætis, &c. ii. 104. The learned Spelman deduces the word felon, from Sax. fælen and felen, Teuton. faelen, to fail, or offend. Or otherwise from Sax. fæh, or feah, fee or estate, and German, lon, value or price: as if felony were the trespass of a vassal against his lord, to be punished by the loss of his fee, or the mulct of his whole estate. For all those offences which now come under the name of felony, had pecuniary mulcts, or weres and weregilds, imposed on the committers, till King Henry I. an. 1108. inflicted death on thieves: and several statutes have since declared what crimes shall fall under the name and penalties of felony. Hence the old fellown, and fell, cruel. Felo de se, a self-murderer. To feal, in the North, is to hide any thing surreptitiously gotten: as in the prov. We that feals can find. Our word fellow seems to have had the worst sense of an associate in felony, which sense is still preserved in the proverb, Ask your fellow whether you be a thief.

FEODUM, feudum. Any fee, benefit, or profit; Sax. feo, feh, feoh, stipend, gratuities, and other perquisites of any place, or office; Johannes filius Nigelli habet in bosco domini regis housbote et heybote cum omnibus feodis forestariis pertinentibus secundum assisam forestie, i. 375.—Mandamus quod Henrico de Lacy com. Linc. faciatis habere feodum suum quod percipere debet, et antecessores sui in com. Linc. percipere consuervant ad scaccarium, i. 408. Feoda sometimes implied all the dues of scutage and other taxes in military service. Qualiter extincta sunt feoda domini abbatis quæ ab ipso petita sunt patebit inferius, i. 432. Feodum habere; To have or enjoy all the customary rights and profits of an office. As John Fitz-Nigel, forester of Bernwode; Debet habere feodum in bosco domini regis videlicet attachiamentum de spinis de bosco suo, i. 295.

FEODUM militis vel militare. A knight's fee; which by vulgar computation contained 480 acres, as 24 acres made a virgate, four virgates one hide, and five hides one knight's fee; for which the common relief was one hundred shillings. Yet no doubt the dimension was uncertain, and differed with times and places. In 3. King Steph. at Ottendon, com. Oxon. five virgates made the fourth part of a knight's fee, i. 126.

FEODUM laicum. A lay fee, or land held in fee by a layman, in opposition to the tenure of frank-almoigne in religious houses.—Abbas de Egnesham—pro habenda recognitione utrum duce carucatæ terræ—sint laicum feodum Thomæ de S. Valerico, vel libera elemosina pertinens ad abbatiam suam, i. 234.

FEODARY, feodatarius. The seneschal, or prime steward, who received the customary fees of the lord, aids, reliefs, heriots, &c. an. 24. Hen. VI. Robert Dower, feodary of my lord the duke of Buckingham, hath receyved of Edmund Rede, esquire, xxvs. for a relief, and vs for a tenable cyde to the marriage of the heldest daughter of my scyd lord, for the fourth part of a knight's fee in Idmugrave, ii. 373.

FEOFFAMENTUM. A feoffment, or title, by which a person is possessed of an estate in fee to himself and his heirs. De antiquo seu veteri feoffamento was the tenure of lands held from the crown before the reign of Hen. II. and those lands in which the owners were afterwards enfeoffed were called de novo feoffamento. So Richard de Camvil, in 11. Hen. II. held the manor of Middleton, as one knight's fee; De antiquo feoffamento, i. 167. an. 13. Hen. II. Henry de Oily held thirty-two knight's fees and a half of the old feoffment, and the twentieth part of a fee of the new feoffment, i. 171.

FEOFFARE aliquem in terris. To enfeoff a person or persons in an estate, as feoffees in trust, for a legal method of insuring or conveying the said estate to such persons or uses; Eduardus rex, &c. Licentiam dedimus Johanni filio Nigelli quod de duabus boratis terræ quæ de nobis tenentur in capite feoffare possit Rob. de Harwedon, et ipsi Roberto quod dare possit et concedere, &c. i. 481.

FERIÆ. Fairs, Sax. fægepp, at first occasioned by the resort of people to the feast of dedication; and therefore in most places the fairs (by old custom, not by novel grant) are on the same day with the wake<sup>m</sup>, or the festival of that saint to whom the church was dedicated<sup>n</sup>, ii. 305. And therefore kept often in church-yards, till by authority restrained, ii. 307. From the solemn feasting at wakes and fairs came the word fare, provision; good fare; to fare well; farly things, i. e. fine and curious things;

farant, and farantly, in the North, specious and handsome, as prov. Fair and farantly. So farand, in composition, for a jolly festival humour, as prov. He is in a fighting-farand, i. e. He is flustered, and in a fighting humour. And children, when they are pert and witty beyond their years, are said to be and-farand. And in our language, those persons who got a high colour by eating and drinking, were said to have a red fare, as we say, a red face.

FICTIO. Old Eng. feintise, fraud, or deceit: whence feight, faint, i. e. false and deluding; as in old law terms, a faint action, a faint pleading, &c. Absque fictione, without falsehood or knavery; Qui carucas habuerunt arabant terram domini in dicto manerio eodem modo et in tantum quo terram propriam absque fictione arare deberent, i. 453.

FIRMA. A farm, or land and tenements hired at a certain rent. From Sax. feopm, meat, or entertainment; feopman, to feast, or entertain. Whence Lat. firma, for the reception and entertainment of the king, or any other lord, and his retinue: as frequently in Domesday book a condition of tenure was pro firma per unum diem, or pro firma unius noctis. Whence firma signified the rent and profits of an estate, because in the Saxon, and part of the Norman times, the rent of lands was paid in provisions, especially to the king, till Hen. II. for better conveniency, altered the custom into an equivalent of money, which pecuniary rent was still called firma regis. So Henry de Essex, sheriff of Bucks. 4. Hen. II. computavit de lxs. de firma regis in Brehul, i. 158. Simon Fitz-Peter, sheriff of Bucks. 5. Hen. II. accounted for lii. xis. iiii. de veteri firma in Brubella, i. 160. From the Sax. feopm, Fr. Junius, does thus ingeniously and evidently derive the diet of soddren wheat called furmetie, and frometie; Fulgus Anglorum nusquam (quod sciam) frumentie, (quasi a frumento) sed receptissima ubique consuetudine frometie dicat, plane statuendum videtur cibum hunc propria voce primitus feopmetie, dictum a feopme quod prima sua acceptatione olim denotabat edulia omnia ad victum necessaria: feopman est victum præbere. Ab hoc igitur feopme veteribus feopmetie dictus videtur cibus quem prædia rustica facillime uberrimeque suppeditabant ad hospites prandio cænare excipiendos. And possibly to this original is owing the French fromage, cheese, and the Irish flummerie, made of oatmeal.

AD FIRMAM dare. To firm-let, or to let out for a reserved rent. Gilbert Basset concludes his foundation charter to the priory of Burcester; Prædicti canonici supradictas ecclesias vel possessiones non debent dare vel pro alia ecclesia vel aliis possessionibus commutare, neque ad firmam dare, i. 187. Ad firmam perpetuam credere; to let by copyhold of inheritance at a stated quit rent and other reserves; Abbas et conventus Glocester. crediderint ad perpetuam firmam omnes decimationes, &c. i. 314. Idem. i. 489, 497. Ad firmam tenere, to hold a farm; so Robert Fitz-Simon of Meriton gives the Knights Templars, Tres acras terræ in manerio de Meriton, quas acras Nicholaus Roc aliquando tenuit de me ad firmam, i. 220. Firmam reddere, to pay a covenanted rent, king John let out his manor of Brehul to Walter Borstard; Reddendo inde annuatim antiquam firmam, et de incremento xls. pro omni servitio, i. 272. Tenere pro hac aut illa firma, to hold for this or that rent; Hugo de Plesseys concedit pro se et hæredibus suis, quod omnes homines teneant terras suas in eodem manerio pro eadem firma per quam eas prius tenere consueverunt, i. 452. Affirmatus, farmed out, or let for a certain rent; Item de burgo affirmato xxiil.—Item de hundreto affirmato xl. i. 505.

FIRMARIUS. A farmer, or he that firmed or rented an estate; the tenant, or occupier of it; Nigello Travers tunc firmario de Brehul, i. 423. Si tamen hujusmodi clausuræ in manibus tenentium seu firmariorum extiterint.

FIRMARE. To fortify; Licentiam dedimus Johanni de Handlo quod ipse mansum suum de Borstall juxta Brehull, in com. Buck. muro de petra et calce firmare et kernellare possit, i. 518.

FLESCHE-AXE. A cleaver, with which butchers cut out their meat; Et in magna secure vocata flesch-axe xv. den. ii. 255. Flesh, from Sax. flære, or more commonly flæc, which was not so properly the flesh of a living creature, as of a dead one, when the skin was stripped off. Whence to flea, or to fleak, i. e. to pull off the skin. A school phrase, to be fleaked off, i. e. to have the skin fetched off by whipping. A flake is properly a piece of skin torn off the flesh, whence by metaphor, a flake of snow. Flaks or flags, in Norfolk, are the turfs which they pare off from the surface of the earth. A fleak in the North is a hurdle made of twigs, that are shaved or stripped off their rind. Fleaky, flaggy, flabby, is feeling soft, like flesh. A fleck is properly a sore in the flesh, from whence the skin is rubbed off: whence by metaphor, they use in Lincolnshire the word flecked, for spotted.

FOCALIA. Fuel, fire-wood. The prior and canons of Burcester allowed the vicar quatuor bigatas lignorum pro focalibus de silva prioris vocata Priors-wood, ii. 395.

FÆNUM vertere. To turn grass, or hay, i. 453. Fænum tornare, to turn grass, or hay, i. 475. Fænum levare, to make hay, i. 453. Fænum cariare, to carry hay, i. 453. Fæni mulliones facere, to make hay into coeks, or pouts, i. 475.

FORAGIUM. Forage, or fodder, for horse or other cattle. Pr. forage, forrage; Lat. fodrum, foderum; from Sax. fōsþe; Island.

FOODUR; German futter: whence to fodder cattle, i. e. to give them food or fodder: and by metaphor, to fodder a room, i. e. to throw things loose about it. To keep a fodder, or fudder, i. e. to fling or scatter about. The prior and canons of St. Frideswide gave to the vicar of Oakle duo quarteria avenarum pro prebenda equi sui, et decimam feni de Lathmede pro foragio, ii. 81.

FORERA, forreria. A foreland, or fore-ness, formerly called a heavod-land, now a head-land, or that part in a field whose end lies abutting on the side of another land; Fuit seisisus in manerio domini de una forreria in Alchester, ii. 101. Hence our furrow, from Sax. fýrwan, to plough. And possibly to this we owe the old word to fure, to go, as prov. Whither fured you? i. e. Whither went you? (or rather to the Sax. fapan.) and the fourn of a hare, and a form, or seat.

FORESTARIUS. Forester, or keeper of a forest, assigned by the king, or employed by knights and barons, who had lands and woods within the bounds of a forest; Rex præcipit quod omnes illi qui boscos habent intra metas forestæ domini regis, quod ponant idoneos forestarios in boscis suis, i. 242. Item præcipit quod sui forestarii curam capiant super forestarios militum et aliorum, i. 243. No sale or waste to be made of the woods within the precincts of a forest without the view or livery of the forester; Boscus de Ernicote et boscus de Pydlington fuerint afforestati post coronationem domini Henrici regis proavi domini regis nunc ad tale dampnum, quod nec ipsi nec eorum antecessores seu prædecessores per tempus prædictum usque nunc nichil de boscis prædictis capere potuerant, nisi per liberationem forestarii et ejus forestariorum voluntatem, i. 529.

FORINSECUS. Outward, or on the outside; Excepto uno selione forinseco illius croftæ versus Austrum ad faciendam quandam viam, i. e. the outward ridge or furrow for a common path.

FORINSECUM servitium. The payment of aid, scutage, and all other customary burdens of military service; Salvo forinseco servitio dominorum, i. 323. Salvo forinseco servitio quantum pertinet ad dimidiam virgatam terræ, i. 324. Salvo mihi et hæredibus meis forinseco servitio debito et consueto, i. 331. Pro omnibus servitiis forinsecis, et intrinsicis curiarum sectis et omnibus secularibus demandis, i. 491.

FORINSECUM manerium. That part of a manor which lies without the burgh or town; Summa reddituum assisorum de manerio forinseco Banbury cum molendinis forinsecis.—Item de molendinis in Banbury, i. 505.

FORSCHET, forescheta. From Sax. fop, before, and reat, a part or portion. The outer or fore-part of a furlong, that lies toward the highway, to the quantity of about half an acre; Una acra et dimidia videlicet foreschet jacent ibidem, ii. 188. Partim inter Goldwell-furlong, et partim inter unam foreschet in Busthames-furlong, ii. 188. Hæc pecia terræ prioris vocatur Herald's-peece, et habet unum foreschetam jacentem proxime juxta prædictam meram, ii. 191. Inter unam foreschetam quam Hugo Bylendon tenet, ii. 195. Hæc tres dimidiæ acræ sunt foreschets et incipiunt furlong de Long-Cotteswurth, ii. 196. Hæc furlong incipit cum una forescheta, ibid. As foreschet was a slip or small piece of land: so ferschet was the customary payment for passage over a river, from fap, a journey or passage, ere water, and reat, a scot, or tax, or equal part of payment. Whence a ferric or ferry, cross a river; ferry-boat, for which passengers pay their fare. A fellow passenger was called a fere.

FOSSATORUM operatio. The service of work and labour done by inhabitants and adjoining tenants, for repair and maintenance of the ditches round a city or town: for which some paid a contribution called fossagium. An exemption from this duty was sometimes granted by special privilege. So king Hen. II. to the tenants within the honor of Wallingford; Ut quieti sint de operationibus castellorum, et murorum, et fossatorum, i. 157.

FRANCIPLERIUM. Visus Franciplegii. From the Fr. frank, free, and plege, a surety. The ancient custom was for the free men of England at fourteen years of age to find surety for their truth and fidelity to the king, and good behaviour to their fellow subjects. This surety among the Saxons was taken in their friborg, or tithing-court, or lar, (which word lath is still preserved in the court of bayliff and jurates of Romney-marsh, convened at Dimchurch in Kent.) After the coming in of the Normans the custom was by them called rank-plege, and was continued in the court-leet of royal jurisdiction, to be held annually on the feast of St. Michael, by Magna Charta, cap. 36. So that habere visum franciplegii, to have the view of frankpledge, was no more than to have the privilege of holding a court-leet, the power of which was determined by the stat. 8. Edw. II. and 1. Edw. III. This liberty granted to religious houses as the pertinence of such a manor; Ecclesia S. Georgii data fuit fratribus Osen. et habet ibidem visum franciplegii, et totum regale servitium, i. 83. Richard earl of Cornwall granted to the abbey of Oseney, franciplegium de tota villa de Mixbury, i. 298. A right inherent in the crown, and to be conveyed to a subject only by express charter; Johannes filius Nigelli sen. summonitus fuit ad respondendum domino regi de placito quo warranto clamat habere visum franciplegii de tenentibus suis in Borstall, qui ad dominum regem et coronam suam pertinet.—Johannes dicit quod ipse et antecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria extiterunt seisiiti de prædicto visu, et quod ita sit petit quod inquiratur.—Et Gilbertus de Thornton qui sequitur pro rege dicit quod franciplegium est quedam libertas regia mere spectans ad coronam et dignitatem domini regis contra quam longa seisinam valere non debet, unde petit judicium, i. 441, 442. View of frankpledge to be held once a year, by the lord's bayliff or steward. Ballivi comitis Gloucest. venient quolibet anno ad tenendum visum franciplegii in eodem manerio, i. 450. Ad visum suum tenendum prout mos singulis annis existit, i. 472. At such court, twelve pence was in some places levied by the steward in full of all dues. So at Knyttinton, com. Berk. Seneschallus honoris S. Walerici tenuit unum visum per annum levando de eadem villata xii. denarios de recto visu pro omnibus, i. 474. The place of holding such court was on some open green, except in rainy weather, when it was adjourned to the manor-house, or the house of any tenant; Fuit locus tenendi visum ibidem in quodam viridi placea in villa de Knyttinton, et in tempore pluvioso per licentiam ballivi prioris aliquando seneschallus tenuit visum ibidem in curia prioris, et aliquando in domibus aliorum tenentium, ibid.

FRAYLE of figs. A basket in which figs are brought from Spain and other parts. Minshew derives the word from Lat. fragilis; Skinner from the Italian fragli, the knots and folding of the flags with which it is made. No doubt the name is owing to the language of that place from whence they are brought; Et in uno frayle ficuum iii. sol. iv. den. ii. 255.

FRATRES jurati. Vide Sworn brothers.

FRUMENTUM. Bread corn, or wheat, opposed to all other grain; Tria quarteria frumenti, tria quarteria avenarum, &c. i. 411. The canons of St. Frideswide allowed the vicar of Oakle quinque quarteria frumenti, et quinque quarteria ordeï, ii. 82.

FRYTTYNG of wheels. Perhaps what we now call the rinding of wheels, i. e. fitting and fastening the fellows (or pieces of wood that conjointly make the circle) upon the spokes, which on the top are let into the fellows, and at the bottom into the hub; In solutis profryttinge quinque rotarum hoc anno vii. den. ii. 253.

FUNDATOR. Founder of a religious house. This title was not only given to the first actual founders, but continued to those barons and knights who held the fee of the estates given to those monasteries, and were the patrons of them, i. 82. And if after the extinction or long intermission of this title, any person could prove his direct descent from the prime founder, he was assumed by the religious to the name and honor of their founder. So the convent of Augustine friars at Oxford; Edmundum Rede et hæredes suos in fundatorem dictæ domus suscepimus ac admisimus de jure sibi adquisito ex præfato lineali descensu, ii. 400. And accordingly received him with solemn procession, ibid.

FURCA. A fork to gather up and pitch hay and straw; called in old Eng. a gib: whence the furca, gallows, Sax. gälga, was called a gibbet. A nut-hook in the North is a gibbon. A quarter-staff is a gib-staff. And in Sussex, a gibbet is any great cudgel which they throw up in trees to beat down the fruit. A hanging-coat, that was cast over the shoulders, and hung down with two long sleeves, was called a gipe, and a gippo, and gippon. The furca in the Roman agriculture was the twist or forked piece of wood, which they set under the rods or fore-part of the plaustrum to bear it up, which in the North they now call a nape or neap; Furcare carectam, was, I suppose, to hang a waggon, or to fit the body of it to hang upon the axle and wheels; Allocantur eisdem pro Richardo Plumbario furcante carectam per xii. dies iiis.—et pro Johanne Boredon furcante carectam per unum diem iiid. ii. 213.

FURENDELLUS, Fardella, ferlingus. A fardingel, furundel, or ferling of land, i. e. the fourth part of an acre, which in Wiltshire is now called a fardingale, and in other parts a farthindale; from Sax. feopð, fourth, and ðel or ðeal, a part. Whence a farthing, or fourth part of a penny. And in the North a furundel or frundel of corn is two gawns or gallons, i. e. the fourth part of a bushel. Hugh Richards of Borstall granted to John de Handlo unum furendellum prati in Bradmoor, i. 483. Which fourth part of an acre is in the East Riding of Yorkshire called a stang.

FURNUS. An oven; Johannes le Baker et Christina uxor ejus tenent quatuor domos cum curtilagis et unum furnum cum secta custumaria ad eundem, i. e. one public oven in a common baking-house, with the customary profits of it. For the tenants were formerly obliged, as to grind their corn at such a mill, so to bake their bread at such an oven, and to pay furnagium, furnage, or such a custom for baking, as toll for grinding. The word furnus is now translated from an oven to a furnace.

G.

GABALUM, gabulum, gablum. From Goth. ΓΙΒΛΛ; Island. gabl; German, geehvel; Dutch, gevel; Eng. gavell and gabell, the head or end or extreme part of a house or building. As the galle-head, the galle-end; Quandam particulam terræ—extra gablum molendini octo pedes in latitudine, i. 283. Quæ domus sita est inter gabulam tenementi mei et gabulam tenementi Laurentii Kepeharm, i. 403. Quod situm est inter messuagium quod Robertus le Webb aliquando tenuit, et gablam capitalis messuagii quod H. Haber aliquando tenuit, i. 567. Hence a wide gabling room.

GALLUS silvestris. A woodcock; Et in octo gullis silvestribus emptis et datis domino Lestraunge ad octab. Epiphaniæ xii. den. ii. 259.

GALLYs, galls. From Sax. gealla; German, and Island. gall; In solutis suppriori pro coprose et gallys emptis pro encausto ii. den. ii. 253.

GAPPE. A breach or gap in a hedge; Alia roda jacet ad inferius capud del Olde-dich juxta le gappe, i. 569. From Sax. geapan, to open or to gape; Dan. gaber. Whence our Eng. to gabber, i. e. to open the mouth without articulate sound. Thence Goth. gæpstock; in the northern English, a gobstick, a spoon. To gobble, to open the mouth wide and swallow greedily any gob, or goblet, or goblet.

GARBA. A sheaf of corn, of which twenty four made a thrave. From Fr. gerbe, and garb. Posito ad caput ejus frumenti manipulo quem patria lingua seaf (alias sceaf) dicimus, Gallice vero garbam. Mat. West, p. 166. It extended to a cock of hay, a fagot of wood, or any other bundle of the fruits or product of the earth. Manasser Arsic, baron of Coges, gave to the priory at Coges two garbs of tithe at Fritwell, while the third garb was only paid to the parish priest, i. 110. Which two garbs were resigned by the prior of Coges to the prior of St. Frideswide, in consideration of two shillings yearly rent, i. 170. Custumarius dominæ in autumpno, si sit ligator, ad dictas precarias habebit unam garbam seminis de ultimo blado ligato—Et quoties ligator habet prandium, non habebit garbam, i. 575. Within the manor of Pidington; In autumpno qui operantur super proprium custum, omnes et singuli ligatores herbarum habebunt unam garbam ad vesperam, ii. 137. Hence a gerbe in heraldry. Garbage, any collection, especially of filth, as guts and garbage. The dust and sillage of drugs and spices is called the garbles in stat. 21. Jac. I. cap. 19. The officer whose duty it was to garble spices; or to separate the dregs and refuse, is called the garbler of spices, 21. Jac. I. cap. 9. And the garbling of bow-staves, was choosing out the best, and throwing aside those which were of no use or service. Stat. 1. Rich. III. cap. 11. And possibly from hence by metaphor, the choicest garment was called a garb, from which the person was said to be in a neat or handsome garb. What we call a sheaf of arrows, was formerly a garb of arrows, which by the laws of Rob. I. king of Scotland, was to consist of twenty-four arrows.

GARCIO. Any poor young servile lad, or boy-servant. Fr. garçon. It seems of old Gallick or British original; for in the present Irish garsun is an appellative for any servant. In all the churches appropriated to the abbey of Oseney; Canonici vicario clericum invenient—et ipsi vicario similiter garconem invenient ipsius obsequio deputatum, quos in omnibus suis expensis procurabunt, i. 429. Et in datis Willielmo Skynner garconi de pistrina ex curialitate falcatorum per x. dies xii. den. ii. 256. Et in solutis Thomæ Takkele adducenti quendam garconem nuper servientem Johannis Grene ad castrum Oxon. in ebdomeda natalis domini, quia convenit servire priori, et non implevit, ii. 257.

GELD. Any tax or imposition. From Goth. 𐌴𐌹𐌸𐌰; Sax. gels; German, gelt. In the North they still call the rate paid for the agistment of cattle nowt-geld, or neot-geld. The mint-master of Wallingford had his house free from geld, while he coined money, i. 75. Whence Lat. geldare; Sax. gelban, to pay taxes: whence by liquelaction to yield or pay. To gelt, or extort a man's money from him: and possibly by metaphor, to geld, or castrate. Quietum esse a geldis was a special privilege. So king Henry II. granted to the tenants within the honor of Wallingford, Ut quieti sint de geldis et danegeldis, i. 157. Hence the Lat. gilda; Eng. gild; a fraternity or society, who gelded or paid all public charges out of a common stock, and were called gildones and congildones, and made their gilden or public feast in a gild-hall, or guild-hall: of which John Bale, in his preface to the Journey of Johan. Leland, 12<sup>mo</sup>. an. 1599. writes thus: This most worthy commodite of your countrey, I mean the conservacion of your antiquities, and of the worthy labours of your lerned men. I thynke the renown of such a notable acte wolde have much longer endured than of all your belly banketts and table triumphes, either yet out of your newly purchased haules to kepe S. Georges feste, i. e. Gyldehawles.

GERSUMA, guersuma. Sax. geapsuma, which Mr. Soumer derives from the old Sax. geaps, ready, and sum or some, as if ready money. Gersum signified any expence or payment, but was commonly used for the ready money, or other valuable consideration paid in hand, to bind or confirm any bargain, which we call earnest; Pro hac concessione dedit dictus Richardus duas marcas argenti in gersumam, i. 173. Pro hac mea donatione—dedit mihi prædictus Johannes in gersuma quadraginta solidos sterlingorum, i. 247, 272, 317, 461.

GORE. A small narrow slip of ground; Dux rodæ jacent juxta viam scilicet le Gores super Shorteforlong, i. 571. Una acra et dimidia jacent simul ibidem, et vocantur quinque gores, ii. 189. Una acra cum uno gore, ii. 191. The Lat. gors, Eng. gort and guort, which occur in the Domesday-book, are by Spelman interpreted a narrow part of a river, or weir, for the catching of fish. And a gord of water is by Gouldman explained to be a narrow stream of water. Hence a slip of cloth sewed into any garment we call a gore, and gorette, and guset. The old Fr. and Eng. gort, guort, and gorz, Latin gordus, are by Du Fresne deduced from Lat. gurgus, whence the French and Eng. borrow their gorge, a throat; to be gorged, or over-fed; a gorget, to wear under the throat or round the neck; gore-bellied, fat and corpulent, &c.

GLOSSARY.

GRANGIA. A granary or grange; commonly taken for the country farm and out-houses where the religious reposed their corn; Ordinavimus eidem vicario nostro tresdecim quarteria bladi boni percipienda de grangiis predictæ ecclesie per annum, ii. 81. But more properly taken for any barn with a thrashing floor; In hebdomada proxime post festum S. Martini quilibet virgatiarius terræ arabit domino tres rodas terræ, et etiam intrabit grangiam domini ad semen dictæ terræ triturandum, ii. 137. In Lincolnshire they call every lone house, or farm that stands alone by itself, a grange.

GRAS-HEARTH. The customary service for all the inferior tenants to bring their ploughs, and do one day's work for the lord within four days after Michaelmas; Quando autem facient consuetudines sive redditus, venient omnes carucæ infra villam de Pydinton ad arandam terram domini uno die quem eligere voluerit ballivus infra quatuor dies proxime post festum S. Michaelis per summotionem ballivi vel præpositi quod vocatur gras-hearth, ii. 137. In eodem manerio—præpositus erit quietus ab omni servitio pro labore præter gras-hurt, ii. 138. Goth. GRAS; Sax. gæpp, and gær; whence what we commonly call grass, is in some Northern parts called gers.

GRAVA. Sax. gær, a grove. Thomas de Druessel gave to the abbey of Eghesham, quandam gravam juxta Epelthanger, et quandam insulam proximam villæ de Stoches, et servitium quod Adam de Wodecote fecit ei in dicta grava et insula, i. 470. Whence a grovette, or grotte, or grotto.

GRAVEN-HILL. The hill of graves, or sepulture of the dead. Sax. gær, a grave; Island. grafi, to dig; Goth. GRABAN; whence to grub, or dig up. A gripe, or grip, or ditch; which in Lincolnshire is called a grove; in Southern parts, a grippe, and a grindlet; in the North, a grupe. Hence to be groveling on the ground; to grave, or cut in wood, or metal, or stone; A groove<sup>o</sup> or grove, a furrow or deep line struck by a joiner.

GROPYS. Hooks and irons belonging to a cart or waggon. From Sax. gupan, to take or hold; whence to gripe, or hold fast; gripping, or covetous; to gripe, or feel out; to grapple, or fasten with grappling-irons; in old Eng. grapenels; Et in clavis carectatis gropys et aliis ferramentis emptis Oxon. de Johanne Mylton, yrenmonger xii. sol. iv. den. ii. 253. They have an iron hook fastened to the axis with a short chain, to hook upon a stave of the wheel, to keep it from turning round on the descent of a hill, which they call skidding of a wheel, Lat. rotam sufflaminare.

GROSSUS. Conducere in grosso, to hire a workman by the great, for performing such a work without computing the time; Et Willielmo Hykkedon conducto in grosso ad mensam domini ad dolandum et perficiendum le crest super cancellum prioratus ibidem xxiv. sol. ii. 254. Grossus denarius, a groat.

GUERRA. Public war, or private dissension. From Sax. gæp, arms or weapon; Quantum inde habuit ante guerram, et discessit occasione ipsius guerra, i. 257. Thence to uarn, i. e. to challenge.

GULA AUGUSTI. The calends or first day of August, the festival of St. Peter ad vincula. Durandus suggests a reason of the name from a young lady being cured on that day of a quinsy in her throat by kissing the chains of St. Peter. But perhaps gula Augusti signified the first day of that month only, as gula was the mouth or entrance of any thing. As gula fluvii, the mouth of a river, &c. Die sabbati post gulam Augusti, i. 322.

GWAYF, waif, waivium. Such goods as felons, when pursued, cast down and leave in the high way, which become a forfeiture to the king or lord of the manor, unless the right owner legally claim or challenge them within one year and a day; Recognitum est militibus et liberis hominibus—quod ad nos spectat le gwayf, &c. Ita et statim redditum est nobis le gwayf le Ernieot sci licet ii. porci cum v. porcellis, i. 275.

H.

HABUNDA. Abundance, plenty; Receptis de casco et butiro, et eo minus propter halundam casci maximam, ii. 212.

HATA. A hedge, from Sax. hegge, hæg, in Lincolnshire, a hack. Hence in Kent, a haw, i. e. a small close hedged in. A haw-

thorn, i. e. a hedge-thorn. Haws, or in the North haghes, the fruit of that thorn. The hagge, or hatch of a door. Heck, a door in the North. The hatches of a ship. As from the Lat. haia, hey-bote, or hedge-bote, i. e. liberty for taking wood for reparation of fences. A hay, or net, to take conies. To dance the hay, &c. Proverb in Chaucer, Neither busk nor hay, i. e. Neither wood nor hedge; Terras et tenementa cum aquis hais fossatis, &c. i. 387. Cum gardinis, curtisagiis, pratis, hais, muris, fossatis, i. 559.

HAKE. A sort of fish dried and salted, called Poor John. In the west parts hakot, from Sax. hacod. A prov. in Kent, As dry as a hake; Et in tribus copulis viridis piscis, cum uno viridi lynge, cum tribus congere, et cum una copula de hake, ii. 255.

HAMMA. From Sax. ham, a house. Hence, what we call home, they term hame in the North, and hamely for homely. To this we owe the termination of so many English places in ham, as Buckingham, &c. Hence a hamlet, a collection of houses; Blakethorn quæ est hamletum in parochia de Ambresdon, i. 493. But as haya was both a house, a hedge, and a close; so ham, or heam, had all those acceptations. It sometimes signified a hedge, whence to hem in or to enclose, the hem or outward border of a garment. It farther signified a small croft or enclosed meadow; Quoddam pratunculum quod vocatur hamma, i. 186. Quatuor acras prati in gore juxta hamam Gilberti, i. 245. Dimidia acrae prati propinquioris prato nostro quod vocatur Gileberds-ham, i. 246. Quoddam pratum domini mei quod vocatur Kinsith-beam, i. 255. Computant de sex solidis octo denariis receptis de duobus hammys prati in campo de Wendleburg, i. 251.

HASTA porci. A shield of brawn; Johanna de Musegrave tenet terras in Blechesdone de domino rege per servitium deferendi domino regi unam hastam porci precii iid. et ob cum idem dom. rex, &c. fugaverit in parco suo de Cornbury, ii. 74.

HAVEDELOND. From Sax. heafod, a head land, now commonly a had-land; whence the head-way, or had-way; Item unam pecia terræ jacet ibidem cum haveadelonds, et jacet pro duabus acris et dimidia, ii. 193. In superiore fine acrae S. Edburgæ jacent quatuor brode-londs quas alii vocant Prestes-haved-londs, ii. 195.

HEKFORE. An heifer, which in the East Riding of Yorkshire is called a whee or whey; and in some midland parts a twinter, i. e. of two winters. And in Oxfordshire, a splayed heifer is termed a martin; Computant de xii. denariis receptis de debili vitulo cujusdam hekfore vendito Johanni Grene, ii. 212. Vide Bovicula.

HELOWE-WALL. The hell-wall, or end wall that covers and defends the rest of the building. From Saxon, helan, to cover; Scotch, hele; in North-Wales, hilio. Hence in the North of England, the hylling of a bed, i. e. the bed-clothes, or covering, which our Oxford bed-makers call the heulings. Whence in Kent, to heal up a child in a cradle, or any other person in a bed: and in some parts, to heal a house is to cover the top. And in the West, the workman who covers a house with slates or tiles, is called a hellier, or healer: whence, to heal a wound, i. e. to cover it with skin; and by metaphor, to heal any sickness, to be hail and healthy. In some Northern parts helow, or heloe, is bashful, or close and reserved, with a face covered. To the same original are owing the hulls, or cods, or coverings of beans, pease, &c. the hulls or chaff of other corn; helmet, or covering of the head. A helm in the North, i. e. a hovel, or any covered place. Possibly, the healm, or hawm, with which they thatch or cover houses. To sheal, or uncover, as the shealing of beans, pease, &c. A shell, or outward covering. In the North, to shel, or sheal milk, is to curdle it, or separate the parts. Hollen, in the North, is a wall set before dwelling houses to secure the family from the blasts of wind rushing in when the heck, or door, is open: to which wall, on that side next the hearth, is annexed a sconce or screen of wood or stone; In solutis eidem domine pro quodam belowe-wall unius domus apud Curthlyngton annuatim ii. den. ii. 251.

HEN. Old: whence Henshaw, in Cheshire, is by Leland derived from hen, old, and shaw, a wood. Henley, in Oxfordshire, which Dr. Plot thinks to be so denominated from hen and ley, a place, being the old town of the Ancalites in the time of Julius Cesar, i. 3. So Gual-Hen, Vallum Antiquum, now Wallingford, in the opinion of Humph. Lluyd, i. 6.

HERBAGIUM. Herbage, or grass, espe cially to be cut or mowed. Salvo mihi et hereditibus meis herbatio dicti stagni, et herbatio ex altera parte aque, quantum aliquis homo pro profunditate aque poterit metere, i. 283. Herbatio antierius, the first crop, in opposition to alter-math. Dicunt quod est communis via, et sua communis pastura, quum fienum et antierius herbatio amoveantur, ii. 86.

HERCIARE. To harrow. Hercia, an harrow, from herper, herpicia, contracted hercia. Homines manerii de Hedingdon solos equos habentes terram domini ibidem herciabunt, et per duos dies in Quadragesima similiter arabunt, et herciabunt, i. 453. In manerio de Pydinton omnes virgatarii terre arabilis per quatuor dies per totum annum—venient cum uno equo et uno crate ad herciandam terram domini quousque plene persemineatur, ii. 137. Et allocantur pro tribus novis cratibus emptis ad herpicandum, ii. 213. Thence to harry and hurry, to be harried and hurried up and down, har-rassed.

HEREMITORIUM. A hermitage, which signified strictly a convent of hermites, or friar minors, who, under the institution and discipline of Fr. Paul, inhabited desert and solitary places; Johannes Stokton prior conventus Oron. ordinis fratrum heremitarum Sancti Augustini, ii. 399. But secondly, this name was attributed to any one religious cell, built and endowed in some private and recluse place, and then annexed to some larger abbey, of which the prelate or governor was called heremita. So Ralph the hermit built a hermitage in a close retirement at Masewell, with a chapel dedicated to the Holy Cross, annexed to the abbey of Missenden, i. 103. King Hen. II. gave the hermitage of Finemere, which was of the fee of Rowland Malet, of Queinton, to the abbey of St. Mary's Noleley, in Crendon, com. Buck, i. 164. King Hen. III. gave the hermitage of St. Werburg, at Brehul, to the prior and canons of Chetwode, i. 348. King Edward III. Rex omnibus, &c. Licentiam dedimus—Nicholas Jurdan de Burcester heremite custodi capelle beati Johannis Baptiste de Burcester quod ipse quoddam hospitale—apud Burcester de novo fundare possit, ii. 114.

HERIETUM, Heriotum, Hariotum. Sax. hepgeat, from hepe, an army, and geat, a march, or expedition. For heriots were first paid in military arms and horses; which proportion of horse and armour, according to the different quality of the deceased, was settled by the laws of king Canute, cap. 69. and is still commonly the best riding horse of which a tenant dies possessed. Heriot-service was a reserve by charter, or other conveyance, and made one condition of the tenure of estates in fee simple, which is now for the most part extinguished. Heriot-custom, when a tenant for life was by custom obliged to such payment at his death; which payment to be made not only by the next heir in blood, (as a relief was only due,) but by any the next successor. It was the practice of our devout ancestors to have a heriot paid to the parish priest, which was commonly the best horse of the deceased, led before the corpse, and delivered at the place of sepulture; of which piety several instances are given by Dugdale, Antiq. Warwic. p. 680. This no doubt was one sort of soulcheat, or legacy, to the church, for satisfaction of all tithes and dues ignorantly detained. In abbeys of royal patronage, at the death or cession of an abbot, his cup and horse were paid for a heriot to the king; Cum ex consuetudine approbata et obtenta habere consueverimus palefridos et cuppas episcoporum et abbatum regni cedentium et decedentium. Prynne, Histor. Collect. tom. ii. p. 834. Abbas de Oseneia obiit anno regni regis Edwardi 25.—Petiit eschaetor ad opus domini regis cupam et palefridum dicti abbatis defuncti, et etiam lanus bidentum ejusdem abbacie de tempore vacationis, i. 470. Those who held in bondage or villanage paid a heriot. In manerio de Wrechwyke—Juliana Hardy que tenuit de domino unum messuagium et unam virgatam terre in bondagio diem clausit extremum, et accidit domino nova heriota, ii. lxxv. pret. xvii. ii. 83. Robertus Hikes tenens domini de Wrechwyke qui tenuit in bondagio—diem clausit extremum, et accidit domino nova heriota, unus bos pret. viiis. et una vacca pret. vs. ii. 85. Willielmus Foul qui de domino tenuit—apud Wrechwyke in bondagio, diem clausit

extremum et debentur domino nominibus herietæ et mortuarii ii. vaccæ pret. xii. ii. 101. In manerio de Pidington si quis villanus morietur super feodo domini, dabit domino meliorem bovem suum, ita scilicet, quod sustentabit uxorem ejus in domo et terra quamdiu vixit, si teneat se viduam, sive occasione nemo maritabit filiam suam sine licentia domini, ii. 138. The religious appropriators reserved the live heriots, i. e. such as were paid in cattle to themselves; and allowed the inanimate heriots, as of less value, to the poor vicar. So in the endowment of the vicarage of Oakle, the prior and canons of St. Frideswide; Ordinavimus eidem vicario universa herieta inanimata, ii. 81. And some appropriators exacted a heriot from every dying vicar, as a badge of servile subjection to them; Et carius de Cestreton post ejus decessum dabit herietam rectori et conventui domus de Asherunge, ii. 203.

HEYBOTE. From Sax. hay, a hedge, and bote, repair, or emendation. The liberty of cutting so much underwood and bushes within the premises as is necessary for mending and maintaining the fences or hedges. John Fitz-Nigel, forester of Bernwode, had—in dominico bosco domini regis husebote et heybote pro custodia dictæ forestæ, i. 295. Vide Husebote.

HIDE of land. Not as Polydore Virgil fancies, from the hide of a beast, as if an English hide of land were like the extent of Carthage; Quantum taurino possint circumdare tergo; but from Sax. hýd, a house or habitation, from hýdan, to cover. The word was sometimes taken for a house, as we still preserve the word hut, for a cottage. And what Bede calls familias, (which familia seems to have been a circuit of ground sufficient for the maintenance of a family,) his Saxon interpreter king Alfred calls hýdelanþer. The quantity of it was afterwards described to be as much as was sufficient to the cultivation of one plough; Hida Anglice vocatur terra unius aratri culturæ sufficiens; whence our term of plough-land. The quantity of a hide was never expressly determined. Ger-vase, of Tilbury, makes it one hundred acres. The Malmsbury MS. cited by Spelman, computes it at ninety-six acres, one hide four virgates, and every virgate twenty-four acres. And yet the history of the foundation of the abbey of Battle (Mon. Ang. tom. i. p. 313.) makes eight virgates go to one hide. But Polydore Virgil blunders most, who reduces a hide to twenty acres. The truth seems to be, that a hide, a yard-land, a knight's fee, &c. contained no certain number of acres, but varied according to different places. In the Domesday inquisition, the first inquiry was, how many hides, i. 88. One hide of land at Chesterton, 15. Hen. II. contained sixty-four acres, i. 173. The yearly value of a hide of land in Blechesdon was forty shillings in 35. Hen. III. i. 345.

HIDAGIUM. Any royal aid or tribute to be raised in such a proportion upon every hide of land. Will. Conq. an. 1084. imposed six shillings on every hide; William Rufus four; and king Henry I. three shillings. To be exempted from this common tax was a peculiar privilege granted to the tenants within the honor of Wallingford; Ut quieti sint de geldis et danegeldis et de hidagio, i. 157. When the lord paid hidage to the king, the tenants paid a proportion to the lord of the manor; Prior et bursarius de Burcester computant de liii. sol. iv. den. receptis de redditu in Arnecone cum hidagio ibidem hoc anno, ii. 249.

HILL. Though by this word we now commonly mean any rising ground, yet some would have it restrained to such risings, as were occasioned by the burial of the dead, as barrows and tumuli. As the word hell, which though now appropriated to the place of the damned, yet at first signified no more than a grave, from helan, to cover, i. 50. Whence Island. hel, is death.

HOBELERS, Hobelarii. A sort of light horsemen, who rode on small nimble horses, with light armour, which made them fitter for any expeditious service, like our present dragoons. The word is commonly supposed to come from their hobbies, or small horses, which Casaubon, Fr. Junius, and others, deduce from Gr. ἵππος; yet Sir James Ware, Antiq. Hiber. cap. 7. says, they were Irish horses, and so called from their easy pace. Hence we still call a little nag, a hobby, a hobby-horse; and our ploughmen, to some one of their cart-horses, generally give the name of Hobin, the very word which Phil. Comines uses, Hist. l. 6. cap. 7. And therefore the hobelers were by the French, or rather by the Armoricans, called hobiners. Forty men at arms, and thirty hobelers, ii. 87. The Lat. haba, and hoba, signified a country house, or small cottage, from Sax. hope; Teuton. hoff; modern German, höfe; Eng. hovel. Whence the coloni, ccorls, or clowns, were called hobarii; to which we owe the name of country-hobs, plough-hobbers, now plough-jobbers, hobbernouls, now jobbernouls, or jolt-headed country fellows. To the same huta possibly we owe the hub of a wheel, a habbul, or confused clamour, &c.

HOKK. A hook, nook, or corner; Sic usque le hoke versus le Fierestone, i. 459. The Lat. huchia; in Picardy and Scotland, huche; Eng. hutch, was a long wooden box, from whence possibly a huckster, who carried about goods to sell in such a box; and perhaps things are thence said to be laid or kept in huggermugger.

HOKEDAY. HOW-DAY. The Tuesday fortnight after Easter day, celebrated with sports and rejoicing in memory of the Danes being killed on that day, and expelled this island, an. 1002, under king Ethelred. Mr. Lambart makes it hucxeverseg, dies Martis irrisorius. Spelman, from German hocken, to besiege or to bind. But possibly hokeday was no more than headag, high day; Sax. hea, Fr. haut, corrupted into hock, and hog, as haut-goust into hogo; Item inter howday et diem S. Martini bene possunt ibidem ducente quadraginta multones sustentari ad comodum domini ad terram suam compostandum, ii. 136.

HOMINES. All sort of feudatory tenants. They claimed a privilege of having their causes and persons tried only in the court of their lord. When Gerard de Camvil, 5. Richard I. was charged with treason, and other high misdemeanors, he pleaded that he was homo comitis Johannis, and would stand to the law or justice of his court, i. 212.

HOMAGIUM. The duty of submission and professed dependance made by every homo, or feudal tenant, at first accession to an estate held from a superior lord. The manner of paying this homage was determined by the stat. 17. Edw. II. If the lord accepted the homage, it was a concession of the tenant's right; Optulit ei Ber- nardus homagium, sed recusante abbate Godefrido, Robertus secundus episcopus Lincolnice suscepit illud, salvo jure abbatis et conventus de Egnesham, i. 184.

HOSTIÆ. Consecrated wafers in the holy Eucharist, or Host. Isabel, countess of Albemarle, confirmed to the convent of Burcester five quarters of bread corn; Ad hostias faciendas in domo prædicta, i. 381. From this Lat. hostia, Mr. Somner deduces the Saxon hysel, the Lord's Supper, and huphan, to administer that sacrament; and old Eng. to housal, to receive it. And hence no doubt the old word oste, the altar; and oste-cloth, the altar-cloth; both which are transferred by metaphor to the top of a kiln for drying malt, and to the hair cloth on which the malt is laid.

HOSTRICUS. From Lat. astur, a gos-hawk. The manor of Broughton, com. Oxon. in the reign of Edw. II. was held by John Mauduit; In capite per serjantiam mutandi unum hostricum domini regis, vel illum hostricum portandi ad curiam domini regis, ii. 247.

HUNDREDUS. The word is not only used for the division of itself, but for the levy or contribution paid to the hundredarius, or chief constable, of every hundred, for better support of his office. From which imposition some persons were exempted by special privilege. So Hen. II. to Bernard de S. Walery; Ut terræ sue sint quietæ de scyris et hundredis, i. 169. Secta hundredi was to pay a personal attendance, and do suit and service at the hundred court, held in some places once in three weeks, and in others once a month; Bardolphus de Cestreton debet sectam ad hundredum de Chadlington de tribus septimanis in tres septimanas, i. 450. By the stat. 14. Edward III. these hundred courts were reduced to the county courts; yet some few hundreds have their old franchises remaining. Hundredus affirmatus, the profits of a hundred court firmed out for a standing rent; Item he lugo affirmato xxiii. Item de hundreto affirmato, i. 505.

HUSEBOTE. From Sax. huf, a house, and bote, amends or repair. The liberty of cutting as much wood on the premises as is necessary for the support and repair of the farm house and adjoining buildings; Concessi prædictæ Alesie heybotum et housbotum in dominicis boscis meis de Ales,

i. 365. De antiqua consuetudine tenentes de Pidington habent housbote et heybote in bosco domini per licentiam domini, et per visum ballivi ejus—Et si boscus domini abeat in vastum, tum acquietabunt dominum de prædictis housbote et heybote, ii. 138. We now call it estovers, or rationabile estoverium, quod duplex est ædificandi et ardendi. Coke on Littleton, f. 41. Whence stover, in Sussex, is used for the fodder of cattle. From Sax. bote, comes our Eng. no boot, i. e. no profit. What booteth it? i. e. to what purpose. To give to boot; i. e. to give odds, as in compensation. Bote, a remedy, as Chaucer, Bote of his bale, i. e. remedy of his grief.

I.

ILLUSIO mandati. An evasion or contemptuous omission of any order or command; In nostri contemptum manifestum, et mandatorum nostrorum illusionem, i. 477.

IMPANALARE. To impanel, or return upon a jury. From Lat. panella, which, says Spelman, is properly pagella, atque inde deducta g in n transeunte. More naturally a contraction of paginella, which was the narrow scroll, or slip of paper or parchment, whereupon the sheriff wrote the names of the jurors. As Fortescue de Laud. Leg. Ang. cap. 25. Vicecomes retornabit breve prædictum coram justitiariis una cum panello nominum eorum (juratorum) quos ipse ad hoc summonivit. It is a sorry supposition of Sir Edward Coke, Gloss. ad Littleton. sect. 234. Panel is an English word, and signifieth a little part, for a pane is a part, and a panel is a little part. Non ponatur nec impanaletur in aliquibus assisis, juratis, recognitionibus, &c. ii. 575. Hence the counter-pane of an indenture, or the duplicate responding sheet. The cover or counter-pane of a bed. A pane and pannel in glass and wainscot. The brain-pan. A pan, or broad plate, now commonly an earthen dish. A pancake, not because made in a pan, but in the fashion of a panella; as a marche-pane, i. e. a sugar-cake. In the North, a pan in building is a term of architecture for that piece of timber which lies on the top of a wall, to which the bottoms of the spars or rafters are fastened; which in timber buildings is commonly called the rasen, or resen, or resening. Thence to pan, i. e. to close or join together. As prov. Ueal and women cannot pan, but two and women can. Dr. Skinner gives this silly derivation, Pannell a Lat. pannus, q. d. Pannellus, metaphora a segmento panni ad segmentum ligni tabulati traducta.

IMPLECTO. Idem ac Implacito. To implead in a court of justice; Cum homines de manerio de Hedingdon Hugonem de Plesseys in curia domini regis implectassent, i. 452.

IMPORTUNITAS viarum. Badness of the ways. Capellæ parochianis ipsis ex gratia sunt concessæ, quia ad matricem ecclesiam pro importunitate viarum et temporum—accedere nequeant, ii. 270.

INCLAUSA. An inclosure round a house; Dicunt per sacramentum suum quod capitale messuagium valet per annum cum tota inclausa, iis. i. 443.

INCREMENTUM. An advance in rent or other payment; Reddendo antiquam firmam, et de incremento xls. i. 229. Taxatio spiritualitatis una cum incremento per relaxationem, i. 446. To which was opposed decrementum abatement, whence decrements in our buttery books.

INDICTATIO. An indictment or presentment of those who committed any illegal trespass. The benefit of which indictments in the swainmote was given to the forester. So in the forest of Bernwode, John Fitz-Nigel had indictiones siquæ fuerint de viridi et venatione, i. 294, 375.

INFANTHEGEF. A liberty granted from the king to some lords of a manor to try all thieves, their tenants, within their own court. As outfangethef was a liberty of trying foreigners or strangers apprehended for theft within their own fee. Sir John de Molins had a charter for these privileges in his manors of Brill, Ludgare-shale, &c. ii. Edward II. ii. 69. From Saxon ðef, a thief, and fangan, to take. Whence in the North, to fang is to take, and thence possibly the fangs or tusks of a boar.

INFIDELES. Inter infideles connumerare, to excommunicate. So Henry bishop of Winton threatened Brien Fitz-Count, lord of Wallingford; Et vos nisi correxeritis inter infideles Angliæ connumerabo, i. 136.

GLOSSARY.

INHOC. This word is neither interpreted nor mentioned in any Glossary I have yet seen. It signified any corner or out-part of a common field ploughed up and sowed (and sometimes fenced off) within that year wherein the rest of the same field lay fallow. It is now called in the North an intock, and in Oxfordshire a hitching. It seems derived from Sax. inge, a field or meadow, and hoke, a corner or nook. Whence an inge now, in Lincolnshire, signifies any open field or common. The making of such inhoke, or inclosure, by any one lord or tenant, was a prejudice to all who had the right of common; Prater Walterus prior Berencestrice fieri fecit quoddam inhoc in campo uaretabili utriusque Ernicote in Mucklecroft sub curia ejusdem prioris per quod abbas Osen. dicebat se de communi pastura ibidem disseisiri, i. 419. Noverit universitas vestra nos fecisse quoddam inhokium in campo de Dunthrop sine assensu et voluntate prioris et conventus de Cold-Norton—unde quorundam fratrum et aliorum amicorum fracti consilio prædictum inhokium voluit depascere, i. 420. This trespass or encroachment was expressly prohibited in some charters; Hac ratione quod dominus hayam nec pasturam separabilem faciet ab hominibus infra campum warectabilem, ii. 137. The nature of an inhoke is more plain by this deed; Anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis quinquagesimo secundo die S. Barnabe apostoli facta fuit hec conventio inter fratrem W. abbatem Osen. et priorem de Coges, et dominam Katherinam Lovel, Robertum de Broc dominos ville de parva Tywa et alios liberos tenentes ejusdem ville ex una parte, et Johannem de Pratellis dominum de magna Tywa ex altera, videlicet, cum dictus Johannes seminasset et inhokam fecisset de quadam cultura que vocatur Costoua sine voluntate dicti abbatis et aliorum prenominatorum, et insuper in defensum posuisset communem pasturam totius uarette interioriam que vocatur Wodewey, et parvam Tywam, quam communam dictus abbas et prenominati clamaverunt ex antiquo esse jus suum, &c. Dictus Johannes recognovit il- lam communam pasturam esse jus ipsius abbatis et aliorum dominorum prenominatorum quotiens a dictis culturis bladum asportatum fuerit, et terra seminata non fuerit. Et obligavit se et heredes suos imperpetuum per fidem et presens scriptum quod nunquam de dicta pastura quicunque seminabit nec inhokam faciet in prejudicium dicti abbatis, &c. Ex Regist. Osen. MS. penes Decan. et Capit. Aed. Ch. Ox. MS.

INLANDYS. Inland was that part of an estate which was held in demesne, or to the proper uses of the lord, in opposition to the outland, which was set to tenants; or rather the inclosures, as distinguished from the common fields. Thomas Billingdon quit claimed his right of commonage in all the inlandys of Edward Rede, lord of Borsall, 15. Hen. VI. ii. 324.

INQUISITIO. An inquest on the oaths of twelve or more legal men to give verdict in any cause, for licence of which a fine was paid to the king; Thomas de Fekingham debet regi quinque marcas et unum palefridum, sic quod inquisitio fiat utrum, &c. i. 239.

INSECTOR. A prosecutor or adversary; Quod etiam ejus insectatores parvo post tempore duraverunt, imo dira morte perierunt, i. 557.

INSTAURAMENTUM. Store or breed; Et de instauratione tria jumenta, i. e. three store cattle, i. 406.

INSTITUTION. A clerk might be instituted in an ecclesiastical benefice, either in person or by proxy; Johannes le Fleming præsentatus ad ecclesiam de Ambresdon et admissus, et rector in persona Johannis de Scalleby presbyteri procuratoris sui canonice institutus, i. 476.

INVADIARE. To engage or give security. From Lat. radium, gnadium, a pledge or surety. Thence a gage, a wager, a mortgage, to wage war or law, wages, &c. Habenda sibi et hæreditibus—et cuicunque dare, vendere, invadiare, assignare, &c. voluerint, i. 369.

INVESTITURA terræ. Livery of land and tenements from the lord to any inferior tenant; Quando aliquis tenens de Wiche-

GLOSSARY.

uyke mortuus fuit, et terra sua sit seminata, et uxor ejus non potest invenire plegios ad tenenda messuagia et terras quas ipse et ipsa in vita sua tenuerint, quod erit ad electionem domini quis habebit investituram prædictæ terræ, ii. 86.

JURNALE. The journal, or diary of accounts, or receipts and expences, in a religious house; Ut patet per jurnale hoc anno—ut patet per prædictum jurnale, ii. 249, 250. From Fr. jour, a day; whence journey was properly one day's travel. Journe was in old Eng. one day's work. A journey-man, or one who works by the day. To adjourn, &c.

JUSTITIA. Just rights, liberties, and privileges; Dummodo diocesani episcopi eis suffragetur assensus, et per novam structuram veterum ecclesiarum justitia non lædatur, ii. 280.

K.

KALENDÆ. Rural chapters, so called because held on the kalends, or first day of every month, as at first every three weeks, and at last only once a quarter, ii. 347.

KERNELLARE. To build a wall or tower, kernelled, or crenellè, with *crany*s, or notches, out of which they shot their arrows. Spelman derives it from the Sax. cýpnæl, a seed or kernel; from whence, says he, cýpnelen, to rise in knobs or bunches. But Du Fresne justly reflects on this violence done to the word, and finds it to be quarnellus or quadranelus, a four square hole, or notch, ubicunque patent quarnelli sive fenestræ. This form of walls and battlements for military uses, and chiefly for shooting with bows and arrows, might possibly borrow name from quadrellus, a four square dart.

Nec tamen interea cessat balista vel arcus,
Quadrellos hæc multiplicat, pluit illa sagittas.

Licentiam dedimus Johanni de Handlo quod ipse mansum suum de Borstall juxta Brehul in com. Buck. muro de petra et calce firmare et kernellare possit, i. 518. Sir John de Molins obtained leave to fortify his manor houses of Stoke-Pogeis and Ditton with walls of stone, and kernelled, ii. 92.

KEVERE. A cover, or vessel, used in a dairy house for milk or whey; Compotus Henrici Deyce et Johanne uxoris de exitibus et proventibus de Dayri—Allocantur pro novo kevere empto viii. den. Hence in Devonshire, a keeve is the vat, or fat, wherein they work their beer. And in Kent, a keeler is a broad shallow vessel of wood, wherein they set their milk to cream, and their wort to cool. The kevels in a ship are the holes, wherein they lay up the shrouds and tackling.

L.

LACRYMATORIES. Small earthen vessels, wherein the tears of surviving friends were reposed and buried with the urns and ashes of the dead, i. 17.

LACÆNA, a Gr. λάγνας. Whence Sax. flaxa, Eng. flaggon, and flesk of wine, flask for gun-powder, flasket for clothes, old Eng. flash of arrows, &c. Claret was eight pence and Muscadine sixteen pence per lagenam at Burcester, in 3. Hen. VI. ii. 254.

LARDARIUM. Lardi locus. The larder, or place where the lard and meat were kept. Wence to lard with bacon; Tenentes de Pidington cariabunt salem domini de foro ubi emptus fuerit ad lardare domini, ii. 138.

LEGATUM. A mortuary. In all churches appropriated to the abbey of Oseney, the perpetual vicars by endowment were to have every second mortuary, if to the value of sixpence; and one half of it, if beyond that value; Vicarius per abbatem et conventum Osen. præsentandus et instituendus ab episcopo—habebit secundum legatum ad valentiam sex denariorum, et quod ultra sex denarios fuerit, intra ipsum et canonicos dimidiabitur, i. 429. So at Burcester, ii. 230.

Per LEGEM Angliæ tenere. To hold by the law or courtesy of England: when a man is tenant for life to the inheritance of his wife deceased; Hen. de Lacy, com. Line. tenuit manerium de Burcester ad terminum vite sue per legem Angliæ de hereditate Margarete uxoris sue, i. 515.

LEGALES homines. Persons who are legally qualified to serve in a jury, as being neither excommunicate nor outlawed; Ab- bas Robertus implacitavit—et electi sunt duodecim homines legales de vicineto, i. 184.

LEES. A common pasture. From Sax. læsse, whence in the North leasow, a meadow. And in Kent most of the wide common heaths or pastures are called leeses, as Braborn-Lees, Postling-Lees, &c. Dimidia acra bi Lese-mor-side, i. 573. One close in Adingrave called pennec-leys, ii. 324. Though this latter seems from the Sax. leaz, a field, whence a lay and ley of land, and the laies in a common field.

LEVARE denarios. To levy or raise money; Petrus de Asherugge tunc seneschallus honoris S. Walerici appropriavit dictum manerium ad honorem S. Walerici, et ibidem tenuit visum per annum levando de eadem villata xii. denarios de recto visu pro omnibus, i. 474.

LEVARE fœnum. To make hay, or properly to cast it into wind-rows, in order to cock it up; Debent quinque dies de consuetudine videlicet per unum diem fœnum levare, et per tres in autumpno metere, i. 323. Homines de Hedingdon venient cum fœcis suis ad dictum fœnum levandum et thassandum, i. 543. Una levatio fœni, one day's hay-making; a service paid the lord by inferior tenants.—Alicia quæ fuit uxor Richardi le Grey—faciet unam sarculaturam, et unam wedbedripam, et levationem fœni, i. 576.

LIBELLUS. A libel, or declaration in a court of civil or ecclesiastical judicature. Petitio libelli, the suing for or taking out such libel; Possint eos et eorum successores per omnem censuram ecclesiasticam ad omnium et singulorum præmissorum observantiam absque articuli seu libelli petitione et quocunque strepitu iudicii compellere, i. 490.

LIBERA. A livery, or delivery of so much grass or corn to a customary tenant, who cuts down or prepares the said grass or corn, and receives some part or small portion of it as a reward or gratuity; Habebit liberam ad vespas quæ vocatur evenyngs, i. 575. So the livery of hay and oats, as giving out such a quantity of provender for the feeding horses, i. 542. Whence a livery-stable, livery-horses, servants in livery. A white livered fellow, &c.

LIBERATURA et seisina. Livery and seisin given by the superior lord of the fee. When a minor was in ward, and came to age, the estate of military service in the king's hands was delivered up: for which livery the heir paid a fine or composition. So Gerard de Canvil having married Eustace, daughter of Gilbert Basset, gave two thousand marks and ten palfries to the king, for livery of her father's inheritance, i. 232.

LIBRA ad numerum. A pound in ready money opposed to libra ursa et pensitata, a pound weight in solid metal. In Domesday register the king's manor of Brill, reddebat tempore regis Edwardi xviii. libras ad numerum, i. 230.

LIGIUS. Liege, pure, lawful. Viduitas ligia, pure widowhood; Ysabel Gargat filia mea in ligia viduitate et libera potestate sua, i. 266. Potestas ligia, free and absolute disposal; Ego Ela de Aldithleia in libera viduitate mea et ligiu potestate, i. 396.

LINTEAMEN. A towel, or other coarse linen cloth; Et in canvays empt. London. per Richardum Dymby—pro lintheaminibus faciendis iii. sol. ii. 254.

LITERATURA. Literature, in old Eng. lethure. Ad literaturam ponere, to put out children to school. Which liberty was denied to some parents who were servile tenants, without consent of the lord. So in the lands at Burcester, which were held in villanage from the prioress of Merkyate; Quilibet custumarius non debet filium suum ad literaturam ponere, neque filium suam maritare sine licentia et voluntate priorissæ, i. 575. This Julian-like prohibition of educating sons to learning, was owing to this reason; for fear, the son being bred to letters might enter into religion, or sacred orders, and so stop or divert the services which he might otherwise do as heir or successor to his father.

LOCUTORIUM. A parlour. The religious, after they had dined in their common refectory, had a withdrawing room, where they met for discourse and conversation: which room for that sociable use they called locutorium, a loquendo, and parlour, a Fr. parler; et Willicmo Hykledon latamo conducto per quatuor dies ad faciendum limen hostii locutori versus autam prioris xvi. den. ii. 254.

LOKYS. Sax. locap, locks, or flocks of coarse and refuse wool, which in Kent are called lucks and dag-wool; Computant de duobus solidis receptis de lana fracta vide-

licet Lokys collecta in tonsura civium vendita Johanni Deye hoc anno, ii. 250. Whence a lock of hair; and a hard, matted, or clotted lock of hair in the neck, is called an elflock. Thence lock, a thread; and lockram, linen cloth of a coarser thread.

LOQUELA sine die. A respite in law, or demur to an indefinite time; Si vir tenens fuerit infra ætatem et uxor plene ætatis, cum implacitati fuerint, non remanebit loquela sine die propter minorem ætatem viri, i. 296.

LUMINARE°. A lamp or candle set burning on the altar of any church or chapel; for the maintenance of which, lands and rent-charges were frequently given to religious houses and parish churches. So Gilbert Basset gave to his new priory at Burcester unam virgatam terræ in Stratton ad luminare prædictæ ecclesiæ, i. 188. It was sometimes expressly provided, that this luminary should burn all night, and in the day at canonical hours, and during divine service. So Richard de Camvil and Eustace his wife gave a virgate of land in Burcester to Robert Clerk; Ita tamen quod prædictus Robertus Clericus vel hæredes sui invenient lampadem unam ante altare sancti Nicholai in majori ecclesia S. Mariæ et S. Edburgæ de Berencester,—qualibet nocte totaliter, et quolibet die dum divina celebrantur, et ad horas canonicas ardentem, i. 250. Which virgate of land seems to have been one part of candle-meadow, so called from being thus charged with finding a light or candle in the conventual church, which part of the said meadow was afterwards resigned to the said prior and convent. Philippa, countess of Warwick, gave seven shillings yearly rent to the priory of Burcester; Ita tamen quod dicti canonici—unam lampadem semper ardentem coram altari beati Johannis Baptistæ in ecclesia conventuali de Berencester in perpetuum invenient, i. 328. Hugh de Plugenet granted to the priory of St. Frideswide common pasture in his manor of Hedingdon, &c. to find one lamp in the said church of Hedingdon, i. 475. A luminary at the great altar was sometimes maintained by the rector of the church; and in vicarages this expence was charged on the appropriators.—So in the ordination of the vicarage of Meriton appropriated to the abbey of Egnesham; In censum luminare in cancello consecratum dictos religiosos et eorum successores supportare volumus et ordinamus imperpetuum suis sumptibus et subire, ii. 120. By the ecclesiastical constitutions in Normandy it was ordained, that once in a year, about Pentecost, the priest and capellanes should come with their people in a full procession to the mother church, and for every house should offer on the altar a wax taper to enlighten the church, i. 286. The rents that were given to this use were sometimes embezzled by the parish priest; against which abuse, bishop Grosthead provided in this diocese; Præcipimus etiam ut redditus assignati per devotionem laicorum ad luminaria vel ad alios usus honestos in ipsis ecclesiis non committantur per ipsos rectores in usus et emolumenta eorundem. Constit. Rob. Episc. Linc. MS.

MANERIUM. A manor. Skene gives it an affected derivation, manerium quasi manurium, such a circuit of land to be manured, or cultivated by handy-work. But it is truly from the Fr. manoir, habitation, or Lat. manendo, the place of residence to the chief lord. This word was brought in by the Normans; Gulfridus Constantiensis episcopus—dono Gulielmi regis ducentas et octoginta villas, quas a manendo manerios vulgo vocamus, obtinuit, Order. Vital. l. 4. The constitution of a manor was this; The king granted to some baron, or military man, a certain circuit of ground for him and his heirs to dwell upon and to enjoy, holding some part in demesne to their own use and occupation; and letting out other parcels to free or servile tenants, who were to do their suit and service at the court of the said manor, now called the lord's court, and court baron. Manerium was sometimes used simply for the court, or mansion of the lord; whence we say the site of the manor, and the manor house, called otherwise manerium domus, as Reginald earl of Bologne, and Ida his countess, gave to the priory at Cold-Norton; Manerium

domus sicut sedet et constitutum est, i. 227. Again, it was sometimes taken for the manor house, and all the demesne land belonging to it; Habebit vicarius de Cestreton totum altaragium ac omnes decimas minores et oblationes ad dictam ecclesiam qualitercunque spectantes, decimis tamen quibuscunque de manerio ibidem provenientius totaliter exceptis, ii. 203. In the Domesday tenure, one village or parish was often held for two or more manors. So Robert de Oily held Burcester pro duobus maneriis, i. 88. At present the word manor does not so much imply the seat or the land, as it does the royalty and jurisdiction belonging to a court baron. For a man may now have the manor, though he has not a foot of land within the bounds of it, which is called a manor in gross. As the other may be called a manor appendant, which goes along with the manor house, or site, or other ground.

MANSIO canonicorum. The court, or chief country house of the religious upon one of their manors, where they kept their courts, and sometimes resided for health and diversion. In Weston virgatam, ubi mansio canonicorum est, i. 277.

MANSUM capitale. The chief manse, or manor house, or court of the lord. Henry de Oily gave to the abbey of Oseney, Capitale mansum meum in Weston cum ejus pertinentiis, i. 209. Called sometimes curia capitalis.—Thomas de S. Walery gave to the abbey of Oseney, totum manerium meum Mixebury cum capitali curia, i. 210.

MANSUS presbyteri. The manse of the parish priest, the parsonage or vicarage house; Habeat etiam dictus vicarius (i. e. de Ambresdon) pro inhabitatione sua illum mansum in quo presbyter parochie dictae ecclesiae inhabitare consuevit, et duo cotagia eidem adjacentia, ii. 39.

MANUPRISOR. One who was bail, pledge, or security for another person. Sir Eubulo le Strange, in 5. Edw. III. was a manuprisor for Hugh de Spensar, ii. 20. Whence, without bail or mainprise.

MARA. A moor. Either from Lat. mare, or rather Brit. mor. The word mara was used for any lake, pool, pond, or other standing water; Sedens super lacum quem usu quodiano loquendi maram vocamus, Will. Gemet. l. ii. cap. 20.—Castrum et manerium de Bolyngbroke cum soke mara et marisco, ii. 18. Called sometimes mera, from Brit. mér; Sax. mep, water; whence a mere-swine, a dolphin; a meor, or lake; mire, or dirt; the meers or ditches, or mere-stangs, or other boundaries of land.—Istud præcedens furlong jacet ab Oxenford-wey usque ad quandam meram terræ dominicæ dom. Lestraunge, ii. 186. A lousmongers-path prædicta jacet una viridis mera, et in fine inferiore ipsius meræ descendit quidam sulcus fluens inter medium de Standfordmore, ii. 188.—Incipiendo juxta quoddam parvum more jacens ad finem cujusdam semitæ pedestris vocatæ Seynt Edburgh-wey, ii. 187.—Cum marisco integro qui vocatur Crockwell-moor, p. 187. Hence to moor a ship, i. e. to lay her up in the mud of a haven.

MARINARIUS. A mariner. Marinarius capitaneus, the admiral or warden of the ports; which offices were commonly united in the same person. The word admiral not coming in before the latter end of king Edw. I. Rex capitaneo marinariorum, et eisdem marinariis—salutem, i. 457.

MARCHIO. From the Lat. marchia; Sax. meape, limit or bounds. Hence the marches, old Eng. marchis, or borders of Wales. The march or limited motion of an army; though this military marching seems rather from the Brit. and old Gall. march, a horse; from whence Sax. meape; Eng. mare. Marchio was strictly the governor of the marches; but any keeper or constable of an eminent castle was called marchio. As Brientius filius comitis marchio de Walengford, i. 116. Whence our titles of marquis, and marchioness.

MARITAGIUM. dare in maritagio, to give an estate as a marriage portion to a daughter; Concessimus Thomæ Basset terram de Dedinton quam dederat Willielmo Malet in maritagio cum filia sua, i. 254. Tillam de Menclida quam Alanus de Dunstanwill pater ipsius Cecilie dedit ad se maritandam, i. 238. Maritagium liberum, frank-marriage; when a baron, knight, or freeholder, granted such a part of his estate with a daughter, to her and her husband, and the heirs of her body, to hold without any homage or service to the donor. So Mand, daughter of Simon St. Liz, gave to the abbey of St. Neot's, com. Hunt. the third part of the manor of Cratesfeld, held by her in frank-marriage; Dedi tertiam

partem totius manerii mei de Cratesfeld quod est liberum maritagium meum, i. 107. Willielmus Longspe dedit et concessit Henrico filio Edmundi de Lacy Margaretam filiam suam et heredem, et cum ipsa in libero maritagio maneria sua de Burcester et Midlington, i. 355. In libero maritagio suo, in her pure widowhood, when the relict held the lands which she brought to her late husband; Post mortem Roberto de Oily Editha in libero maritagio suo plurimas terras dedit canonicis de Oseneia, i. 123. In marriage it was a custom for the woman to be endowed at the church door, i. 558. Maritagium habere, to have the free disposal of an heiress in marriage, a favour granted by the king, who was guardian of all wards or heirs in minority. Mandatum est vice com. Oxon. et Berks. quod habere faciant W. com. Sarum. maritagium filiae Richardi de Camvil genitæ de Eustachia—ad opus Willielmi sui primogeniti, i. 253. Pro maritanda filia, a fine or composition paid to the king by every baron or military tenant, for leave to marry a sole daughter and heir. Gilbert Basset 6. Rich. I. gave one hundred pounds fine to the king, that his daughter Eustace might be married to Thomas de Verdon, i. 214. If any person married such an heiress without the king's leave, he lost her whole estate, unless he could compound by a severe fine. So Robert de Peesley paid sixty marks and one palfry to be reconciled to the king, for having married Alice de Chesterton, i. 224. John Giffard paid three hundred marks for marrying without licence Maud the widow of William Longspe, i. 388. Jordan de Meriton paid twenty marks fine for taking Maud, the relict of John le Mersh, i. 435. Sir John de Handlo compounded for one hundred pounds upon marriage of Maud, widow of John Lovel, i. 531. Alice, countess of Lincoln and Sarum, lost the greatest part of her estate for this trespass of marrying Eubulo le Strange, i. 561. Some inferior tenants were under the same obligations to the lords, as the lords to the king; Si homines de Heddingdon filias suas extra libertatem dicti manerii maritare voluerint, dabunt domino pro qualibet filia sic maritata duos solidos,—et hoc pro catallis extra libertatem dicti manerii cum ipsa remotis: et si infra libertatem ejusdem manerii eas maritaverint, nihil dabunt pro maritagiis earundem, i. 454. In the manor of Wrechwyke; Willielmus Searich ad habendum in uxorem Johannam quæ fuit uxor Willielmi Foul venit hic in curia, et dat domino de fine pro eadem in maritagio habenda xs. et habet inde diem solvendi, ii. 101. Among the customary tenants at Burcester Kings-End, who held from the prioress of Merkyate; Quilibet costumarius non debet filium suum ad literaturam ponere, neque filiam suam maritare sine licentia et voluntate dominæ priorissæ, i. 575. The widow of a tenant in villanage held her husband's estate during her widowhood; Matilda quæ fuit uxor Roberti Hikkes clamavit totum prædictum—dum vixerit sine marito faciendo servitia et redditus omnes, ii. 85. The fine or composition paid by such tenants for the liberty of disposing their daughters was called merchetum, merchet; from the Scotch, marchet, marsheta, which was a commutation of money or cattle given to the lord to buy off the old impious custom of the lord lying the first night with the bride. Hect. Boet. Hist. Scot. p. 260. Buchan. l. 7. Skeneus in voce, &c. From which marsheta mulieris, used sometimes for the said commutation, and sometimes by metaphor for a maidenhead, possibly comes the prov. Such a woman's marchet or market is spoiled: more especially applied to her who has lost her marshet, or virginity. Hence in several parts of England the word merkin is used for pubes mulieris. From the word marry, they use marrow in the North, for a companion or fellow; as, gloves and shoes are not marrows, i. e. are not well matched, or not fellows.

MARTYROLOGIUM. Martilegium. A martyrology, or register kept in religious houses, wherein they set down the donations of their benefactors, and the days of their death; that upon each anniversary they might commemorate and pray for them. And therefore several benefactors made this a condition in their charters: Isabel Gargate covenanted with the prior and canons of Burcester; cum de hac vita migraverimus, facient nomina nostra scribi in martirologio suo, i. 265. Henry Lacy, earl of Lincoln, was a benefactor to the canons of Burscough, com. Linc. on this condition, that they should insert in their martyrology and canon his name, and the name of Margaret his wife, i. 434. The canons of St. Mary Overy, in Southwark, for the favours of Sir John de Molins, covenanted, that as soon as they should hear of the death of him, or of Egidia his wife, they would inscribe their names in their public martyrology, and make recital of them annually in their chapter, ii. 29. The religious granted the promise of this civility to their patrons, as a compliment of gratitude and respect; Nos Johannes Clyfton et conventus canonicorum regularium mon. Dorcestre Lincoln.—Volumus et ordinavimus quod cum contigerit eundem Edmundum (i. e. Rede de Borstal) ab hac luce migrare, ut nomina omnium supradictorum cum obitu eorum in nostro martilegio inserantur, et singulis annis futuris perlegantur in die anniversariorum suorum præsentem conventu in domo nostra capitulari, ii. 328.

MATTES. Mats made of straw or rushes. From Lat. matta, Ovid. l. 6. Fast. In plastro scirpea matta fuit; which perhaps the Romans borrowed from the old Teuton. matte; Sax. meatte. To make bed-mats of reeds or straw was a great employment of the ancient monks. Hence to be matted or entangled; In quinque scottellis minoris sortis emptis ibidem pro cæteris officiis ix. den. et in x. matts ibid. hoc anno xii. den. ii. 253.

MEDIETAS Beneficii. The moiety, or half the annual profits of an ecclesiastical living, which some of the clergy freely contributed to king Edw. I. to maintain a war with France; for which benevolence the king granted his special protection; Cum dilectus nobis magister Radulfus de Mertival persona ecclesiæ de Ambrosden medietatem beneficii—Nobis in subsidium nostrum de anno præsentis juxta taxationem ultimo inde factam liberaliter concessit et grateranter, i. 457.

MERCANDISA. All goods and wares exposed to sale in fairs and markets. In omnibus burgis et villulis nostris, et etiam in singulis mundinis, et mercatis nostris libere valeant emere et vendere omnes mercandisas absque ullo theloneo seu stallagio, i. 439. And therefore mercatores was not restrained, as it now seems to be, to merchants, or traffickers, in foreign commodities, but extended to all sort of traders, pedlars, buyers, and sellers; Omnes homines et mercatores honoris de Wulingford, i. 157.

MERENNUM, Merannum, Merremium, Maremium, Maeremium, quodvis materia-
men unde vocis origo, called in French le merrien and marren. Any refuse wood, or old pieces of timber and boards that are left among the rubbish after building or repairing, or pulling down of houses; In diversis hominibus conductis ad seponendum et extrahendum vetus merennum massam et lapides x. den. ii. 254. Et in merenno empto apud Curtlyngton cum cariagio ejusdem pro collistrigio apud Dadyngton de novo faciundo ii. 257.

METTESHEP. Perhaps it ought to be mittenscepe, from Sax. mitten, to measure, or metta, a mete or measure, and ceap, goods or chattle; for the metteshep seems to be a fine or penalty paid by the tenant for his neglect or omission of doing his customary service. In the manor of Pidington—quelibet virgata terræ solvet per an. quinque solidos et quatuor dies de consuetudine, videlicet unum diem ad pratum domini falcandum ad cibum domini, vel domino dabit quadraginta denarios pro metteshep, ii. 137.

MINISTRALLUS, Ministrellus, a ministrando. At first any buffoon or actor of ridicule, commonly retained for the diversion of persons of quality, and afterward restrained to a player on music, a minstrel; Et in datis cuidam ministrallo domini Lestraunge in eodem festo xii. den. ii. 259. These minstrels, or merry fiddlers, were in several parts of England a sort of corporation, and had a king of minstrels for which a charter and confirmation of it may be seen in Mon. Ang. tom. 1. p. 365.

MISSALE celebrare. To say mass, and administer the sacrament of the mass; Habebit de oblationibus ad altare prevenientibus unum denarium quotiens missale celebraverit, et denarius provenierit, i. 429.

MOLITURA, Mulitura, Multura, a molo, to grind. It sometimes signified a grist or sack of corn brought to the mill to be ground. But more commonly taken for the toll paid for grinding. So Sir Wido de Meriton, in his charter to the Knights' Templars—Concesserunt mihi fratres unam libertatem ad suum molendinum scilicet molendi segetem pro multura reddenda pro segete quæ est in tremuta, et meum brasium sine multura, i. 167. Molitura libera, free grinding without paying toll; a privilege which the lord generally reserved to his own family; Salva mihi et hæredibus meis molitura libera familie nostre quæta in dicto molendino. i. 334. Salva mihi et hæredibus meis secta curiæ, et molendini mei de Bigenhull cum omnimodo blado et brasio, i. 418. Our Eng. mill is from the Sax. mýlen, Island. míl, to grind, in præterito mulde; whence in Lincolnshire, a mill is called a miln, and in other parts a muln; as muln-uey, i. e. the mill-way, i. 566. Hence the Sax. molb, Island. molto, Eng. mould, or what is ground to dust; old Eng. mulle, powder or dust. Mouldy, and ready to moulder away. Mullock, in the North, dirt or rubbish; and a mole, from casting up the mould, is called a mould-wasp. A mullet, the stone on which painters grind their colours. Molter, in the North, the toll of a mill.

MOLNEDA, Mulneda. A mill-pool. Gilbert Basset, in his foundation charter to the priory of Burcester, gave—quoddam pratunculum quod vocatur Hamma, quod extenditur de crofta Serici de Wrechwic per la multedam usque illuc ubi norus rivulus descendit in veterem rivulum, et ipsam mulnedam ad faciendum ibi molendinum, i. 186. Molta, Fr. moulte, was to be paid for the service of grinding, or the use of a mill. If I should from hence derive our Eng. malt, Dutch mout, it would be a less absurd conjecture than that of Dr. Skinner, who would deduce it from the verb to melt, quia, ut omnibus notum est, aqua maceratur, donec germina emittat.

MORTMAIN. Statute made in 7. Edw. I. de terris in manum mortuam non ponendis, to restrain the donation of any lands or tenements to religious or pious uses, where they lay in a dead hand, without succession or due service to the lord and the king. By any such donation after the said statute, the lands were forfeited to the king, if the more immediate lord of the fee made not his claim within one year after such alienation; Accepimus per inquisitionem coram notis factam quod abbas et conventus de Oseney appropriarint sibi et domui sue duas virgatas terræ in Chesterton—post publicationem statuti de terris et tenementis ad manum mortuam non ponendis editi sine licentia regis, i. 524. When the kings by special licence dispensed with this statute, there was a previous inquisition ad quod dampnum, and a return upon oath, that it would be no prejudice to the dignity and revenues of the crown, i. 547. This law is now relaxed by stat. 39. Eliz. cap. 5. of giving lands to hospitals; and 14. Car. II. cap. 9. of purchasing lands and tenements for the poor within the cities of London and Westminster.

MORTUARIUM. A mortuary. The word was used in a civil, as well as an ecclesiastical sense, and was payable to the lord of the fee, as well as to the priest of the parish; Debentur domino (i. e. munerii de Wrechwyke) nominibus herietæ et mortuarii duæ vaccæ pret. xii. sol. i. 101. Vide Herietum et Legatum.

MULLO, Mullio. A cock or pout of grass or hay; Ut strepitum rugientis aquæ audivit—monticulum fæni quod extra turgurium erat, velociter ascendit. Impetus autem irruentis et omnia involventis aquæ fænum sublevarit, et de loco illo mullonem huc et illuc fluctuantem longe transtulit. Order. Vital. l. 13. p. 899. Ipsæ Robertus et omnes alii customarii dominicæ liberam falcata in pruto vocato Gilberdsham sine prandio debent tornare, et inde firmum levare, et mulliones inde facere, i. 575. Alicia quæ fuit uxor Richardi le Grey—faciet unam sarculaturam, et unam wedbedripam, et levationem fæni, et inveniet unum hominem ad mullionem fæni faciendum, i. 576. Hence in old Eng. a moult, now a mow; Sax. mope. of hay or corn.

MULTO, Mutilo, Molto, Muto, Mutto. A mutton or sheep. Several ridiculous derivations are given of this word. Job. de Garlandia, from mutus, dumb; Et cum sit mutus, poterit bene muto vocari. Menagius, from mons, as if creatures that fed chiefly in the mountains. Ferrarius would fetch it a montando, because forsooth the venereal rams do mount or cover the ewes. And Dr. Skinner, with like modesty, from the old Lat. muto, the yard of a man or beast, as if rams, of all creatures, were best provided in that member. I suppose the original was British; for molt, in the present Irish tongue, signifies a ram, or male wether, to which the Lat. multo is always restrained, and does not extend to the female sheep or ewe; Quatuor boves, sex mutilones, i. 405. Inter howday et diem S. Martini bene possunt ibidem ducente quadraginta multones sustentari ad opus domini ad terram suam compostandam, ii. 136. In stauro sunt lii. matres oves, xxxv. multones, xii. agni mures, et xiv. agni feminales—xxxii. oves lactrices, iii. multones, xl. oves otiose; i. e. thirty-two milch-ewes, three rams or wethers, forty barren ewes. Cartul. Abbat. Glaston. MS. f. 39. Hence the gold pieces, impressed with an Agnus Dei on one side, were from that figure called multones, which were common in France, and current in England, as appears by a patent 33. Edw. III. cited by the learned Spelman, though he had not then considered the meaning of it; Rex tenetur Ottoni de Grandisono in decem millibus multonum auri. And hence the military engine, like the Roman battering ram, is called monton by Froissart, Hist. vol. 3. cap. 102.

MURDREDUM, Murdrum, Mordrum. Murder, from Saxon mord, death; Island.

MORD. By the laws of Edw. Confess. cap. 15, if any person was murdered, the murderer was to be apprehended by the friborg where the body was found, and delivered up to justice. If he could not be immediately taken, a respite of one month and a day was allowed to the said inhabitants; and if he was not then produced, a fine was imposed upon them of forty-six marks; of which sum, by the laws of Hen. I. cap. 91. forty marks were paid to the king, and six to the nearest relations of the party murdered. So that quietum esse a murdredo was an exemption from this fine, and was a special privilege granted to the tenants within the honor of Wallingford, ut quieti sint de murdredis et de variis ad murdredum pertinentibus, i. 157.

MURORUM operatio. The service of work and labour done by inhabitants and inferior tenants in building and repairing the walls of a city or fortress. From which duty some were exempted by special privilege. So King Hen. II. granted to the tenants within the honor of Wallingford, Ut quieti sint de operationibus castellorum et murorum, i. 157. For which expence a tax was levied called murage. Whence those officers, who in the city of Chester are to supervise and repair the city walls, are now called murengers.

MUSIVUM opus. Mosaic, and corruptly, Mosaic work. Parimenta tessellata, pavements of curious little pieces of brick, or tile, or marble, about the bigness and form of dice, with which the Romans generally paved the place, where they fixed the pretorium, or general's tent: of which several have been ploughed up in this county, i. 16. Fr. Junius cites this account of them from a MS. Saxon Glossary of Laurence Noel; Musaike work, which is a kind of ornament made in picture with little square stones like dies of all colours, set together with certain fine cyment upon a wall or floor, so that the forms of things be therein pourtrayed and expressed as though they were paynted. Also it is more durable than any kind of paynting, by reason that neither by weather, wearing, nor washing, the colour can be taken away, which hath the thickness of the little dies wherewith this work is made. Of this kind of work is little in England. Howbeit I have seen of it, especially upon church floors before altars, as is to be seen before the high altar at Westminster, although it be but gross. In Italy it is almost every where, and in most churches to be met.

MUTO, mutare. To mew up hawks in the time of their muling or molting, or casting their plumes. Hence the muta regia, the mew's near Charing Cross, in London, now the king's stables, formerly the falconry, or place for the king's hawks. The manor of Broughton, com. Oxon. in the reign of Edw. II. was held by John Mauduit, per serjuntiam mutandi unum hostricum domini regis, vell illum hostricum portandi ad curiam domini regis, ii. 246.

MYLLEWELL. A sort of fish, the same with what now in Lancashire is called mil-wyn, which Spelman renders green fish, but it was certainly of a different kind; Et in tribus copulis viridis piscis, et in xv. copulis de myllewell minoris sortis x. sol. vi. den. et in xv. myllewell majoris sortis xii. sol. ii. 255.

N

NATIO. A native place. The jurors of the borough of Wallingford return upon oath, quod nullus de natione istius burgi pro quocunque facto quod fecerit debet suspendi, imo secundum consuetudinem istius burgi debet oculis et testibus privari, i. 365.

NATIVUS. A servant, or villane, by birth and descent from servile tenants; Servi aut nascuntur, aut fiunt; nascuntur, autem ex nativo et nativa alicujus copulatis vel solutis.—Item nascitur servus, qui ex nativa soluta generatur, quamvis ex patre libero, quia sequitur conditionem matris, quasi vulgo conceptus. Bracton, l. i. cap. 6. sect. 4. Terram Willielmi Hamond nativi domine—Nicholai Safford nativi domine, i. 570. Rogerus Mortimer nativus prioris de Berencester, i. 578. Cum omnibus servitiis liberorum hominum et nativorum de Heyford et Caldecote cum corporibus dictorum nativorum catallis et eorum sequelis, ii. 162. Hence the old Eng. neise, a bond-woman, mentioned stat. 9. Rich. II. cap. 2. and 1. Edw. VI. cap. 3.

NAVIS, Navicula. A caster, or small silver dish, to hold the frankincense before it was put into the thuribulum, or smoking pot; Inter ecclesie ornamenta—Turribulum cum navi, ii. 285. It seems so called from the shape resembling a boat or little ship, as a cogue of brandy, from the like reason. Vide Cock-boat.

Illa die comedent iidem homines, et omnes dicti mессores cum domino ad nonam, et prefati homines, et non mессores eodem die cum domino cœnabunt, i. 453. The monks and other religious had their refectionem nonæ, or biberes nonales, properly their dinner; Non licet clericis ante horam tertiam prandere. Can. cit. a Spelman. Which biberes, or refection, given to schoolboys and children about three afternoon, we still call a drinking. It was from this nona, formerly the chief eating time, we take our word noon, though removed to another hour. And it is from hence, that in Kent a noonchion, or nunchion of bread, or any edible, is a great piece, enough to serve for the nooning, or dinner of any common eater.

NUTRIMENTUM. Breed of cattle; Quilibet custumarius domine non debet vendere equum masculum neque bovem de proprio nutrimento suo, i. 575.

O.

OBLATIONES altaris. Oblations or offerings from the parishioners to the parish priest were solemnly made four times in a year; Ordinavimus eidem vicario (i. e. de Oakle) omnes oblationes quæ quater in anno ab omnibus parochianis offeruntur, ii. 81. The customary oblations at Burcester in the ordination of that vicarage, about the year 1212, were one penny for a burial, one penny for a marriage, one penny for churching a woman: and the altar or sacrament offerings were threepence at Christmas, twopence at Easter, and a penny at the two other principal feasts, besides the offerings at Confession, ii. 227. Among the altar oblations were reckoned the little sums paid for saying masses and prayers for the souls of the deceased. As in the churches appropriated to the abbey of Oseney; Vicarius habebit de oblationibus ad altare provenientibus unum denarium, missale quotiens celebraverit, et denarius provenierit, et quicquid ex devotione fidelium et rationabiliter fuerit collatum, i. 429.

OBLATIONES funerales. If the corpse of the party deceased was carried from the mother-church to any other place of sepulture, there were customary offerings due to the parish priest where the party died: of which offerings the sordid appropriators sometimes engrossed three parts, and allowed only one to the oppressed vicar; Ordinavimus eidem vicario (i. e. de Oakle) quartam partem omnium obventionum fune- ralium dictorum parochianorum alibi quam apud Acleiam sepultorum que de jure vetere vel novo debentur ecclesie parochiali, ii. 81. At the burial of the dead, it was a custom for the surviving friends to offer liberally at the altar for the pious use of the priest, and the good estate of the soul of the deceased, which the appropriators were sometimes so just as to allow the vicar: Omnes oblationes in nuptiis, purificationibus, sepulturis, anniversariis, ibid. This pious custom does still obtain in North-Wales, where at the rails which decently defend the communion table, I have seen a small tablet, or flat board, conveniently fixed, to receive the money, which at every funeral is offered by the surviving friends, according to their own ability, and the quality of the party deceased. Which seems a providential augmentation to some of those poor churches.

OCTAVUS. The octaves, in old Eng. the ut, or eight days after any festival, for the observation whereof Alcuinus gives this reason; Octavæ, quas hodie colimus, ideo reverenter celebrantur, quia primis diebus concurrunt sicuti unus dies dominicus ad alterum, qui eadem die celebratur.—Infra octavas, within the said term of eight days. They were only some prime and remarkable feasts which were thus attended with octaves, which feasts are enumerated in the laws of Edw. Confess. cap. 12. Ecclesia de S. Frideswidæ annuatim persolvit ecclesie de Coges duos solidos vel bisantium unum infra octavas S. Michaelis, i. 170.

OFFICIARIUS episcopi. The bishop's chancellor, or official, in his court Christian; Idem Ychelus ipsum abbatem ea de causa jam in curiam Christianitatis coram officariis diocæsani prædicti trahit in placitum, i. 468.

OFFICINÆ. Washhouse, brewhouse, and what we call out-offices; Capitale messuagium valet per annum cum tota inclausa iis. et non plus, salva reprints domorum et aliarum officinarum, i. 443.

OPERA. Works or services done by vassals or tenants in bondage to the lord; Johannes præpositus tenet unam virgatum terre arabilis de Bardulpho, et debet opera que valent quolibet anno xiiis. iyd. ob. q. i. 450. But servile tenants had their wives and their shepherds excused from these labours. Vide Pastor.

OPERATIO. One day's work performed by such inferior tenants; Homines de Heddingdon facient Hugoni et heredibus suis pro quolibet virgata terre sexdecim operationes, videlicet, uno die inter festum, &c. i. 452.

OPILIO. A poor person, or indigent beggar; Et in datis opilioni de Crockwell in die S. Valentini martyris ii. den.—et in datis duobus opilionibus ii. den. ii. 259.

ORDEAL. From Sax. op, great; and dele, judgment. The old judicial custom of proving the guilt, or attesting the innocence of parties accused, chiefly by water, or hot iron. As Queen Emma submitted to the walking blinded and barefoot over nine hot ploughshares laid at an unequal distance, and thereby purged herself from the charge of incontinence, i. 73. This was simply called judicium, in opposition to bellum, duel or camp-fight, which was the other customary purgation: and neither of them was abolished by Will. Conq. though Sir W. T. does so assert. Vide Bellum. Servants or other deputies might undergo this trial in the cause and name of their masters, especially of those lords who were bishops and ecclesiastical men. As in time of Will. Rufus, Remigius episc. Lincoln. de regia prodicione aliquando accusatus, sed famulus suus igniti judicio ferri dominum purgans, regio amori restituit. Mat. Par. sub an. 1085. So Brien Fitz-Count, in his challenge to Henry bishop of Winchester, an. 1144. Contra Henricum præsum probare vel bello vel judicio per unum clericum, vel per unum laicum, i. 138.

ORDINARIUS. He that has the ordinary jurisdiction in ecclesiastical matters, as the bishop of a diocese, &c. Richardus de Gravesend quondam Lincolnice episcopus loci illius ordinarius, et advocatus prædictæ abbatiæ, i. 502.

ORDINES. A general chapter, or other solemn convention of the religious of such a particular order; Et in solutis fratribus Roberto Lawton et Willielmo Meriton pro suis expensis versus ordines existentes apud Hygham-Ferrers ante festum S. Michaelis hoc anno vii. sol. ii. 256.

ORDINUM fugitivi. Those of the religious who deserted their houses, and renounced their orders in contempt of their oath, and other duty. The favouring and protecting such fugitives was charged on Thomas earl of Lancaster; Ordinum fugi-

P.

PAKTHRED. Pack-thread. From old Teuton. pack, a bundle; packen, to make up a load, or burden. Hence a pack-horse, a pack-saddle, a pack-needle, to pack up, a packet of cloth, to pack away, &c. And possibly from hence the Saxon pocca; Island. pose; Eng. poke or bag, and poket or pocket. In the East Riding of Yorkshire, poke is the general word applied to all measures, as a met-poke, a three bushel poke, &c. Perhaps from pack or packed, may come, by abbreviation, a pad or bundle, a pad of straw, to pad or to bind up. But a pad or horse, and a padder or highwayman, are more plainly from the Sax. paad, a path or way. Et in octo snoden de packthred emptis ibidem pro quodam reti faciend, ii. 253.

PALAFREDUS, Palfridus. A Lat. paraveredus, a palfry or saddle-horse. This was commonly part of the fine or composition with the king for seisin, or livery of an estate. Richard de Camvill gave two thousand marks and ten palfries for the inheritance of his wife Eustace Basset, i. 232. This seemed a remainder of the old custom of paying the relief in horse and arms, as a proper badge of military service, till in 27. Hen. II. there was a commutation of money for the arms, but the horses, or part of them, were still delivered in specie. A palfry was part of the fine or penalty imposed for a transgression against the king. So Robert de Pisellee paid sixty marks and one palfry, to be reconciled to the king, for the offence of marrying without the king's consent, i. 224. A palfry was paid to the king for licence to obtain a trial for the right of lands; Abbas de Egnesham debet unum palefridum pro habenda recognitione duodecim legalium hominum, i. 234. At the death of every bishop and abbot who held in barony, a palfry of the deceased was part of the heriot to the king; Obiit abbas de Oseneia,—petiit escaetor ad opus domini regis cupam et palefridum dicti abbatis. i. 470.

PARCUS, a park. From Fr. parc, or parque, or rather Sax. peappoc, and peappuc, an inclosure. John Ross, of Warwick, asserts the first park in England to have been made by Hen. I. at Woodstock, an. 1119. But Spelman proves from the Domesday-book and other authorities, there were parks in the time of the Saxons, who called them depepaldor, i. e. deer-folds. Parcagium was a contribution paid by adjoining tenants, toward repair of the walls, pales, or other mounds of a park. Operationes parcorum were so many days' work for that purpose. An exemption from this duty was granted as a special privilege to the tenants within the honor of Wallingford; Ut quieti sint de operationibus castellorum et — parcorum, i. 157.

PANDOXATUS, Pandoxata, Pandoxator, Pandoxatrix. An inn-keeper, or alchouse-keeper, from Gr. πανδοχῆιον, hospitium; Et in cervisiis videlicet cxxxii. lagænis et dimidia emptis de Johanna Spinan, Alicia Bedale, et aliis pandoxatis, ut patet per bullam iv. sol. x. den. ii. 254.

PARROC. Sax. peappoc, a parrack, puddock, or puddock, a small park or inclosure, near a house or chief seat, for the convenience of securing deer, to be turned out and hunted. In the donation of Gilbert Basset to the priory of Burcester, duæ acre et dimidia quæ vertuntur in parroc, i. 188. Whence a pattock, or paddock course.

PARCELLA honoris vel manerii. When one parish or hamlet pertains to another honor or manor, as a part or parcel of it. Johannes de la Vache—seisitus de manerio de Hokenorton, cum pertinentiis. — Johannes Trilloue seisitus de Chesterton in dominico suo ut de feodo unde prædictus locus est parcella, ii. 261. Terra et boscus in Rytherfield Grey tenentur de abbate de Abingdon ut parcellum de feodo de Padenale, ii. 314. It was to this parcelling of baronies and manors, that it now happens, we have part of one parish remote, and encompassed in another; and whole parishes belonging to one county lie out of the common extent, and within the very bowels of some other county.

PAROCHIA. The word to be understood a diocese, not a parish in that expression; Honorius provinciam suam in parochias divisit, ii. 269. The beginning and gradual advance of parishes and parish churches, ii. 271.

PAROCHIANUS. A compellation given by a bishop to any person living within his diocese and jurisdiction; Alexander Lincolnensis episcopus Guidoni de Charing parochiano suo, i. 122.

PARTICULA. A slip, or small parcel. Simon de Gerardmulin gave to the abbey of Missenden, the chapel of holy cross at Pidington, and—quandam particulam nemoris que est inter eandem capellam et nemus de Bruhelle, i. 147.

PASNAGE, Pannage, Panonage. Lat. pastio, pastionuticum, pastinaticum, pasnagium, pannagium. From the Fr. pasuag; Lat. pasco; the feeding of hogs: or from the old Eng. paens, i. e. the mast of beech and oak, and fruit of other forest trees. Cowel gives it a much harder derivation from Fr. panez, or panets, the root of wild parsnip: and it is no less absurd in Dr. Skinner, to deduce it from the Fr. pain, or Lat. panis, bread, or other food. Pannagium had a double acceptation; first, for the running and feeding of hogs within a forest; secondly, for the price or rate paid for their so running. Liberum aut quietum pannagium, was free pannage, or liberty of hogs running within the limits of such forest or woods; a privilege granted to some private persons, and to several religious houses. Aubry, earl of Damarun, confirmed to the abbey of Missenden, the hermitage of Musewell; Et pasnagium quietum de suis dominicis porcis, i. 180. Sir William Fitz-Elias granted to Alicia de Maydwell, heybotum et housbotum in dominicis boscis de Akle ad porcarias suas faciendas ubi sibi placuerit, et ad habendos porcos suos quietos de pannagio, i. 365. Gilbert Basset granted to his new priory at Bureester, Quietantiam de pasnagio, i. 186. The price of pannage within the liberties of the abbey of Battle, com. Suss. was twopence for every hog of full age. So at Estaples in Picardy, twopence for every grown hog, and two deniers for a little hog, (which young hog of the first year we call in Kent a sheat, and in Sussex a shote,) to be paid on St. Andrew's day. In Scotland the tithe or tenth hog was paid for pannage; as in those forest laws; Iste autem est modus pannagii, videlicet de qualibet eindre, id est de decem porcis, rex habebit meliorem porcum, et forestarius unum hogastrum. This custom obtained in England, and was here called tack; Dabit pannagium vocatum tack, videlicet, pro decem porcis unum porcum meliorem, et si non habet decem, dabit domino decimum denarium porcorum suorum cum appretiati fuerint per vicinos suos. Ex lib. baronie de Shereborn MS. In 19. Hen. III. the four agistors within the forest of Bernwode were obliged to take care of the running hogs, from holy-rood day to forty days after Michaelmas, and then to take the pannage of one farthing for every hog, i. 308. If the pannage were not duly paid, there was a process from the Exchequer, and distraint by the sheriff; Quia constat per inspectionem rotulorum de scaccario—debent de pannagio—Mandatum est vicecom. ut distringat ipsos vel haeredes vel tenentes terras eorum ad reddendas regi portiones ipsos contingentes de predictis denariis, i. 366. The tithe of pasnage was sometimes alienated from the parish priest to the appropriators. As the tithe of pannage at Musewell, within the parish of Ambrosden, was granted to the abbey of Missenden, as a part of the endowment of their cell or hermitage of Holy Cross at Musewell. And so confirmed by William king of Scots, 13. Hen. II. Cum tota decima de dominico de Pedyngton in omnibus rebus que decimari debent, et de decima de padnagio, i. 172.

PASSAGIUM. A tribute or toll paid by travellers or passengers for the repair and maintenance of some road or passage: from which contribution some were by special privilege exempted. As king Hen. II. granted to the tenants and traders within the honor of Wallingford, ut quieti sint de thelonio, pontagio, passagio, i. 157.

PASSAGIUM. A channel, or dike, cut for a watercourse on the side of a river, or a weir for fish. So Wido de Meriton to the Knights Templars; Dedi—omnes percapturas quas fratres inceperunt versus me in faciendo passagium suum, i. 166.

PASTOR. A shepherd<sup>a</sup>. When inferior tenants were obliged to bring themselves and their whole family to do work and services for the lord, an exception was made of their wives and their shepherds, as also of the cowherds: for this reason, that the first might alway attend their houses, and the other their flocks and herds. So the tenants in Hedingdon; Tri-bus diebus autumno metent blada domini sumptibus ejusdem domini, primo scilicet die cum omnibus famulis suis, exceptis uxoribus et pastoribus suis, i. 453. Cum tota familia sua præter uxorem suam, i. 575. Sunt ibi sexdecim cotarii, quorum alii sunt bubulci domini, alii sunt pastores, qui si non essent, deberet quilibet unum opus singulis septimanis per annum. Cartul. Abbat. Glaston. MS. f. 40.

PATRONUS. The advocate, or patron of a church, who had jus patronatus, the right of advowson, which was at first acquired by endowing a parochial church at the foundation of it with manse and glebe, which endowment was generally made by the lord of the manor; to which piety we owe the original of lay-patrons, i. 313, 314. The patrons, for a mark of honour, had precedence in their own churches, and in all solemn processions within the limits of the parish, wherein they had a right of carrying the chief flag, or first colours, ii. 29. No other laymen, but the patron only was to be admitted within the bars or partition of the chancel from the nave of the church, in time of divine service; Ad hæc adjicimus ne laici stent vel sedeant inter clericos in cancello dum divina ibidem celebrantur, nisi forte ob reverentiam vel aliam rationabilem causam et manifestam. Hoc solum patronis permittitur. Constit. Rob. Episc. Linc. MS.

PAX firma. Peace and freedom from arrest, or any other molestation. Henry bishop of Winchester to Brien Fitz-Count lord of Wallingford; Firmam pacem omnibus ad feriam meam venientibus a vobis et vestris dari quæsierim, i. 137.

PECIA, petia. A piece, or small parcel of ground; Cum duabus peciis—dictæ terræ pertinentibus, i. 339. Whence to piece and to patch.

PELTYS. Lat. pelves. Pelts, or sheepskins, when the wool is off. Germ. peltz. Hence the pelt-rot, when sheep die of poverty, or ill keeping. Pelt, in falconry, is the skin of a fowl stuffed, or any carcase of a dead fowl thrown to the hawks; Computant de tribus solidis, uno denario, ob. receptis de xv. peltys bidentum de stauro necatarum in hospitio inter tonsuram et festum S. Michaelis, ii. 250. The Lat. peltis was in Sax. pæl and pælt; whence our fellmon-

ger, who dresses the skins. A felt, or hat made of coarser wool. Pelvis, in old Eng. a pelt, was likewise a leathern bag made of sheep skin, in which they carried salt, &c. —Homines de Dukelechurch debent habere unum baconem de tribus solidis, et duos caseos, et duas pelves plenas salis, et duas summas de ligno. Cartul. Abbat. Glaston. MS. f. 40.

PENTECOSTALIA. Pentecostals, or Whitsun-contributions, that were allotted to the bishops, and are still paid in some few dioceses: of which the first occasion was possibly owing to the oblations made to the cathedral church at that season of the year, ii. 284.

PERCAPTURA. A wire, a fishery, or place in a river made up for the better convenience of preserving and taking fish. Of which kind there were several artificially contrived in most waters and streams. So Wido de Meriton granted to the Knights Templars, omnes percapturas quas fratres inceperunt versus me in faciendo passagium suum, i. 166.

PERTICA. A perch; which in the reign of king John was the measure of twenty foot, and was the same as virga; Quelibet virga, unde quarantanæ mensurabuntur, erit viginti pedum. Mon. Ang. tom. iii. p. 16. So in 33. Ed. I. Quadragenas unam acras et unam rodam et dimidiam per perticas viginti pedum, i. 499. But now commonly a perch, a rod, or pole, in Wiltshire a log, is sixteen foot and a half in length, whereof forty in length and four in breadth make one acre of ground. Yet there is no such fixed standard, but that it differs by custom in several counties.

PICAGIUM. Picage. A custom or duty paid at fairs and markets for breaking the ground, and pitching of stalls and standings. From Lat. pica; Fr. pic; Eng. pick, pick-axe; and in Sussex, a pitch; old English, pekois. Whence to pick, or peck; a picker, a pecker; to pitch down, to pitch up; a pitchfork, in Wiltshire a pick; a soldier's pike; a peek, or high top, as a woman's peak, the peak of Derby, &c. To have a pique, or quarrel, to be piquant, &c. King Henry II. granted to the tenants within the honor of Wallingford, ut quieti sint de thelonio, pontagio, passagio, et picagio, i. 157. The profit of picage was generally granted in charters for the holding a fair or market, 19. Hen. VI. Rex concessit Roberto Brook—picagium, stallagium, bothagium, et tollagium, una cum assisa panis et cervisie de novo mercato infra villam de Burcester, ii. 410.

PIETANTIA. A pietance, or pittance, or allowance of bread and beer, or other provision, to any pious use, especially to the religious for an augmentation of their commons; Quos quidem quatuor solidos—attornari ad unam pietantiam in conventu Oseueiensi annuatim in perpetuum in die anniversarii mei obitus pro anima mea, i. 400. From the Lat. pietas comes our pity, which Duglass calls pietie, thence petans, piteous, pitiful, &c.

PISCARIA. A fishery, or were, wear, or wire, Sax. ƿæp; Bernard de S. Walery granted to the nuns of Godstowe unam piscariam de Werehama, i. 177.

PLACIA. A place, or plat of ground, commonly the site of a house, or other buildings. In Yorkshire and Lancashire a plack, from Sax. place. Whence the court or principal seat in a village is in several parts of England called the place, and place-house. Yngeram de Kirtlington gave to the prior and canons of Burcester, totam illam placiam quæ se extendit, i. 294.—cum quadam placia terræ, i. 364.

PLACITUM. A plea, suit, or trial. Whence pleas of the crown, common pleas, pleading, pleader, &c. Placitum motum fuit inter dictos religiosos et nos, i. 402. In placitum trahere, to prosecute, or cite into any court of justice. Idem Ychelus ipsum abbatem ea de causa jam in curiam Christianitatis coram officario diocessani predicti trahit in placitum, ipsum multipliciter ibidem inquietando, i. 468. Placitum conventionis, a composition or final agreement of a depending suit by mutual compact; Unde placitum conventionis sumptum fuit inter eos in eadem curia, scilicet quod predicti, &c. i. 404. Concordia facta in curia domini regis—unde placitum conventionis sumptum fuit inter eos in eadem curia, i. 455.

PLANUM. Plain or open ground, opposed to woods and coppices; Communione pasture tam in bosco quam in plano, i. 103. In viis et planis, in aquis et molendinis, i. 261. Hence a plane, or instrument of planing, a plot, plot, or smooth place, the plan, or plat form of a building. A plate, platter, a plash of water, to plash or cut down; plat-footed, &c. And what we now call the blade of a sword or knife, was formerly termed the plat.

PLEBANIA. A mother church with depending chapels: thus defined by the old canonists; Plebania est aliud genus beneficii, et majus quam rectoria, habet sub se capellanus, et dignitatem esse putant interpretes, ii. 268. et seq.

PLOWSHO. The plate of iron that is a shoe or defence to the bottom of the plough, as wheels are said to be shod or shoed, when they are guarded with iron; Cum uno vomere et una cultura et dimidia toughe cum uno plowsho emptis xxiii. den. ii. 213. A plough, by the Allemans called pluch, and plug; by the Danes, ploug; by the Dutch, ploeg; by the Anglo-Saxons, ful; whence the aratrum now in Wiltshire is called a sullow, and the word plough is there attributed to any other waggon or carriage. But no question the Saxons had likewise the word pluce for a plough, and their pluccian; our to pluck, was originally to draw or pull along the plough, which by metaphor was applied to any other sort of plucking or pulling. To this we owe a plug, or piece of wood to stop a hole, and to be plugged, or pulled out at pleasure.

PLURALITY of ecclesiastical benefices. This corruption was so great in the reign of Edw. I. that Bogo de Clare, rector of St. Peter's within the city of Oxford, was presented by the earl of Gloucester to the church of Wiston, com. Northamp. and obtained leave to hold it with one church in Ireland, and fourteen other churches in England; all which benefices were valued at 238l. 6s. 8d. i. 412.

PONTAGIUM. Pontage, a toll or custom paid by travellers or passengers over a bridge toward the repair and maintenance of it. King Henry II. granted to the tenants and traders within the honor of Wallingford and Bereamstead, ut quieti sint de thelonio, pontagio, passagio, &c. i. 157. This privilege some donors called pontem liberum, as to the prior and canons of Burcester at their mill in Kirtlington; Concessi etiam dictis canonicis quod habant pontem liberum ultra aquam ad bladum carvandum, i. 283. It is a good pious custom that still obtains in Ireland, where the natives at passing over any bridge pull off their hats, or give some other token of respect,

PONTIUM operationes. The customary service of work and labour done by inferior tenants for making and repairing of bridges: from which servile duty some persons were by special privilege exempted, as the tenants within the honor of Wallingford were—quieti de operationibus castellorum et pontium, i. 157.

PORCUS, a swine; Sax. ppȳn, a hog, called a porke, especially in those counties where sheep of the first or second year are called hogs, and hoggreles. Dare porcōs in bosco, to grant pannage, or free running of hogs in such a wood or forest; Ego Ricardus le Bigod de Merston dedi canonicis de Nuttele quadraginta porcōs in bosco meo. i. 310.

PORCORIA, called in Lindwood porcitecum. A hogsty, which in the north is called a swinhull, and a swine-crue. In the woods and forests where the hogs run for pannage, there were several of those porcoriæ, or huts, where the swineherds at night secured their drove of hogs; Concessi Aliciæ heybotum et housbotum in dominicis boscis meis de Acle ad faciendas porcorias suas in boscis prædictis, i. 365. In manerio de Dorcestre—summa reddituum porcoriarum et bercarum si fuerint ad firmam vs. vid. i. 506.

PORTMOTA. Sax. port-gemote, a port-mote, port-meeting, or convention of the inhabitants of a port or borough, in which some customary dues were paid to the lord of the fee. The prior and bursar of Burcester, in 3. Hen. VI. accounted—de firma manerii de Clyfton—cum extentis curiarum, portmotis, et tolneto fori, ii. 248.

POSTULATIO. A postulation made upon the unanimous electing of any person to a dignity or office, of which he is not capable by the ordinary canons or statutes, without special dispensation. So a chapter postulated for a bishop actually possessed of another see. And the religious postulated for a prelate to be taken from another convent; Johannes supprior Bernecestr a canonicis de Chetewod postulatur, i. 363. An election could be made by a majority of votes, but a postulation must have been nemine contradicente.

POTAGIUM. Pottage, or liquid broth, of which porridge and posset are evidently corruptions, though Dr. Skinner violently fetches porridge from porrus, an onion, because forsooth the Romans put leeks in their broth; and posset, from the Fr. poser, to settle, because the curdled or coagulated parts do fix or settle. It is pity men's wit should be so much above their judgment. From hence a porringer, or potage-dish, formerly called a pottenger; and the smaller vessel, which we now call a pipkin, was formerly a posnet. The appropriators were sometimes so liberal, as to allow peas-porridge to the vicar. So the prior and canons of St. Frideswide to the vicar of Oakle—unum quarterium pisarum de melioribus dicti manerii sui pro potagio suo, ii. 81.

PRATUNCULUM. A ham, or little meadow, which word meadow, Sax. meše, Fr. Junius derives from the old Teuton. maiden, to mow; and says the Danes call a mede or meadow, meaie; the Dutch mayland; and the old Frisians miede. Gilbert Basset, in his foundation charter to the priory of Burcester, gives—quoddam pratunculum quod vocatur hamma, i. 186.

PRÆBENDA. A prebend, an endowment in land, or pension in money, given to a cathedral or conventual church in præbendam, i. e. for a maintenance of a secular priest, or regular canon, who was a prebendary, as supported by the said prebend. Twelve shillings per ann. was given out of the manor of Hedgingdon for a prebend in the conventual church of Oseney, and was continued a rent charge upon the whole manor, i. 475. Ecclesia præbendalis, a church appropriated to a cathedral or religious house, the profits whereof were assigned for a prebend either in gross to the whole society, or to some particular member; Prior et conventus de Bernecester dimiserunt ecclesiam prebendam de Sotton cum capella de Bokingham, i. 487. Præbenda, in profane and common acceptation, was any sort of allowance or provender for cattle. As the prior and canons of St. Frideswide gave to the vicar of Oakle duo quarteria frumenti pro prebendu equi sui, et decimam feoni de Lathmede pro foragio suo, ii. 81. Vicarius de Burcester habebit fœnum et prebendam ad equum unum de prioratu, ii. 226.

PRÆCEPTORIA. A preceptory, or commandery. As the larger monasteries had their remote country cells, which were subordinate to the mother house of religion: so the Knights Templars, and Hospitallers, sent part of their fraternity to some country cell, governed by a preceptor, or commander, and thence called a preceptory, or commandery; all which were subject and accountable to the prime body, who had their principal seats in London. So the preceptory of Sandford, com. Oxon.—Hoc factum est tempore fratris Johannis existentis præceptoris de Covele, i. 168.

PRÆPOSITUS manerii. The bailiff or steward of a manor, who was to collect the rents, to levy distresses, to prevent trespasses, to keep the peace, and to do all the offices of equity and right between the lord and tenants; Computavit Johannes Canon præpositus de Clifton de manerio de Clifton, i. 405. Sibilia filia Walteri filii præpositi de Pyria, i. 465. Nicholaus præpositus de Bygenhull, i. 577, 578. This provost or steward of a manor was elected by all the tenants at the lord's court, and there took an oath of impartial fidelity in his office. So 17. Edw. III. Omnis status de Wrechwike elegerunt Hugonem Kyng ad officium præpositi, et juramentum suscepit, ii. 83. Part of his office was to take into the lord's hands such lands as the tenant through poverty was not able to occupy; Jurati dicunt quod uxor ejus (i. e. Thomæ Bavard nativi domini tenentis domini de Wrechwike) non potest tenere prædicta messuagium et terram propter paupertatem, ita ut præpositus possit capere in manibus domini prædicta messuagium et terram, ii. 85. The clergy, or secular priests, were sometimes elected into this office, till they were restrained by ecclesiastical authority, as particularly by the constitutions of Robert Grosthead, bishop of Lincoln; Walterus Hardy clericus est præpositus domini, et præstitit sacramentum ad officium præpositi bene et fideliter faciendum, ii. 101.

PRÆSTATIO. A payment; Prædicti prior et conventus Burncestrie omnia onera ordinaria et extraordinaria et omnes præstationes ratione dictarum decimarum semper sustinebunt, i. 489.

PRECARIA. A bedrep, or day of customary work and labour done to the lord by his servile tenants, especially in the time of harvest; Virgata terræ ejusdem con-

ditionis faciet tres precarias in autumpno, videlicet precariam sine prandio cum tribus hominibus, et unam precariam sine prandio cum uno homine, i. 575. Alicia quæ fuit uxor Richardi le Grey—faciet tres precarias in autumpno sine cibo, i. 576. The tenants who thus paid their bounden service to the lord, besides their ordinary meals and repasts, had a more solemn entertainment at the end of harvest, when they came to the court or seat of the lord, cum toto ac pleno dyteno, i. e. in a full body to sing harvest home. Which is the original of our now obtaining custom, though the reason of it is altered. This treat given now to the tenants and labourers is in Kent at the end of wheat-harvest, and is called a whetkin: but in these inland parts it is at bringing in the latest corn, and is termed a harvest home. Vide Bedrepium.

PRESBYTER. The parish priest, in opposition to the capellane or curate. Huius testibus; Waltero capellano de Heyfyrd, Waltero presbytero de Meriton, i. 168. Fulcone presbytero de Meriton, ibid.

PRISO-onis. A prisoner. From French prendre. The tenants were sometimes obliged to maintain at their own charge all prisoners who were apprehended within the extent of their own manor. Homines de Hedingdon omnes prisiones qui infra dictum manerium capiuntur sumptibus propriis custodient, i. 454.

PROCURARE. To provide for, or to entertain. In all the churches appropriated to the abbey of Oseney, Canonici ipsi vicario invenient clericum et garconem, quos in omnibus suis expensis procurabunt, i. 429.

PROCURATIO. A pecuniary sum or composition paid to an ordinary or other ecclesiastical judge, to commute for the provision or entertainment which was otherwise to have been procured for him. A procuration of two marks paid to the bishop for consecrating a church; Nos ecclesiam de Elscfeld—delicasse, et recepisse a procuratore rectoris dictæ ecclesiæ duas marcas nomine procurationis ratione dedicationis ecclesiæ, ii. 164. In 3. Hen. VI. the prior and bursar of the convent of Burcester accounted pro procuracione convocationis cleri tentæ London. ante natale Domini hoc anno ix. den. Et in solutis pro procuracione domini papæ vii. sol. ii. den.

GLOSSARY.

Et in solutis domino archidiacono Oxon. pro procuracione ecclesie parochialis Burcester hoc anno vii. sol. vii. den. ob. q. ii. 252. The archdeacon's procuracion was commonly laid upon the appropriators, yet often injuriously thrown back upon the vicar; Cetera onera ipsius ecclesie (i. e. de Ambrosden) ordinaria subeat vicarius predictus, preter procuracionem archidiaconi, quam iidem religiosi solvent in futurum, ii. 38.

PROCURATORIUM. The procuratory or instrument by which a person or persons did constitute or delegate their proctor to represent them in an ecclesiastical court or cause; Tenor vero procuratorii dictorum religiosorum, ii. 266.

PROCURATORES Ecclesie Parochialis. Churchwardens who were to act as proxies and representatives of the church for the true honor and interest of it; Johannes Peris sen. et Johannes Bailly procuratores ecclesie parochialis de Acle, ii. 236.

PROCURSUS bestiarum in foresta. The walk, or range, or running, for deer and other beasts in a forest. The jury found it would be a prejudice to assart, i. e. to grub and cultivate, two acres of land upon Fernhurst, within the forest of Bernwode; Quia si essent assartate, bestie amitterent procursus suos ad transversum foreste, i. 353.

PROHIBITIO. A prohibition, or writ from the king in behalf of one prosecuted in the court Christian, upon an action or cause belonging or pretended to belong to the temporal jurisdiction. John de Pydington had a prohibition against William, vicar of the church of Little Brickhill, 20. Edw. 1. i. 449. This liberty of suing a prohibition was expressly renounced in some covenants between the religious; Renuntiantes in hoc facto omnibus impellationibus super hoc habitis, appellationibus, in integrum restitutioni, regie prohibitioni, et omni alii remedio, i. 490.

PROTECTIO. A writ of protection was given to religious houses, and to particular priests, for contributing freely to the king; Ex hac causa libentius providere volentes suscepimus in protectionem et defen- sionem nostram specialem prefatum Radulphum et singulos de predicto Radulpho homines terras, res, redditus, et omnes possessiones ejusdem, i. 457, 468.

PULIANUS, Pullus. A colt, or young horse; by Chaucer, called a stod; as now in the North, a stot; Sax. ƿæda and ƿeod; Eng. steed—duo pullani fœmini (i. e. two mare colts) quatuor boves, &c. i. 406. Tres pulli masculi, unus fœminus, ibid. De octo solidis receptis de uno pullano vendito per Johannem Deye apud Bucks. ii. 249. Sex pulli et tres equule, et unus equulus de duobus annis, et duo pulli de uno anno. From the Lat. pullus came the Sax. folle, old Eng. phully, now filly, a young colt, or in some parts only the mare colt. In a team, the horse which goes in the rods is commonly called the fillar, and the fill-horse. It is a sorry ignorance in Minshew to derive filly, a colt, from filia, a daughter. And a very learned man could only trifle on this word. Fillie recepto sæpe nomine generosioribus quibusdam Anglis dicitur equa præter cæteras adamata. Fortasse nimirum aliquis equulæ suæ adblandiens glæx olim dixerit, atque inde remanserit hæc denominatio. Fieri quoque potest eos equulam præcipue in deliciis habitam phillie nuncupasse, ab illo Phyllidos nomine, quod perditæ dilectis amicabus passim tribuunt impotentiores Amasii. Fr. Junius in voce Phillie.

PURPARS. Fr. pour part, pro parte. A purparty, or that part or share of an estate, which, being held in common by copartners, is by partition allotted to any one of them; Inquisitio de hæreditate Margaretæ et Elizabethæ—liberes habenda in purpartem ipsius Elizabethæ, ii. 145.

PUTTA. Sax. pitte, a pit, stone-pit, chalk-pit, &c. From puteus, a well, or rather putus, little; Una in Crocwell-furlung quæ jacet ad puttam inter terram Johannis le Palmer, &c. i. 261. This in the broad country tone is still called a putte. Stane-puttes, the stone-pits, i. 570. Hence, by metaphor, Lat. and Ital. putta, Fr. putte, a whore; and putagium, in old English putre, fornication on the woman's side. As now in London, a buttock, or puttock, is a plain-dealing whore, opposed to a file, or pick-pocket whore. In the North, a puttock-candle is the least in the pound, put in to make weight, called in Wiltsh. a puissing candle; in Kent, a make-weight.

Q.

QUADRARIUM. A quarry or stone-pit. Vid. Carrum.

QUARENTENA. A quarentine, a forty long, or furlong. From the Fr. quarente, forty. A measure of forty perches; Quarentana vero quadraginta perticis. Mon. Ang. tom. i. p. 313. In which computation the perch was twenty feet; Quælibet virga unde quarentenæ mensurabuntur, erit viginti pedum. Mon. Ang. tom. 3. p. 16. In the Domesday Survey, it was the usual mensuration of wood-land. So in Burcester there was—Silva unius quarentenæ longitudine et unius latitudine, i. 89. A quarantine was also the space of forty days, wherein any person coming from foreign parts infected with the plague, was not permitted to land or come on shore, till he had performed his quarantine, or forty days were fully expired. A quarantine was likewise a benefit allowed by the law of England for the widow to continue in her husband's chief mansion-house (if it were not a castle) for the space of forty days after his decease.

QUARTERIUM. A quarter, a seam, or eight bushels of corn; Tria quarteria frumenti, tria quarteria avenarum, et unum quarterium fabarum, i. 411. Vide Summa.

QUERELA. An action preferred in any court of justice, in which the plaintiff was called querens, and his breve, complaint or declaration, was querela, whence our Eng. quarrel. Quietos esse a querelis was to be exempted from the customary fees paid to the king or lord of a court for the purchasing a liberty to prefer such an action. But more usually, to be exempted from fines imposed for common trespasses and defaults. So king Henry II. to Bernard de S. Walery; Terræ suæ sint quietæ de omnibus placitis et querelis, exceptis muredredo et latrocinio, i. 170. Quatuor hidæ apud Cestreton liberas et quietas ab omnibus querelis excepto muredredo et danegeldo, i. 578.

QUIETUS. A writ of discharge granted to those barons and knights, who personally attended the king in any foreign expedition, and were therefore exempted from the claim of scutage, or a tax on every knight's fee. So Gilbert Basset had his writ of quietus in 2. king John for seven knights' fees within the honor of Wallingford, i. 226.

QUINTAN, by the French termed quintain, by the old English quintane and schintane, now commonly corrupted into quintal. At first a Roman military sport, still retained in those parts of England, which lay adjacent to the Roman garrisons and ways; and now made a customary sport at weddings, i. 24.

R.

RAISES. The northern term for the risings, the barrows or hillocks raised for the burial of the dead, i. 50. They use likewise in the northern parts, near Scotland, a ram raise, to signify the motion of stepping backward for the better advantage of taking a leap forward.

REA, or rey<sup>1</sup>, an appellative for a river, whence Suthrey, the county on the south side of the river Thames, i. 36. The small rivulet that runs through Burcester and across Otmoore, is called the Rea, or Rey; which in Latin was termed Burus; whence Burcester, Bury-end, or river-end, in opposition to Kings-end. And in Wurp end feld, there was Whout-repe-croft, Recher-rent-croft, and Over-repe-croft, ii. 194. So St. Marie Overies on the Southwark side of London<sup>2</sup>.

RECOGNITIO. The impanel of a jury, or inquest of twelve or more legal men, who were therefore called recognitores. Habere recognitionem, to have a trial or verdict of jurors; for liberty of which a fine was paid to the king; Albas de Egre-

<sup>2</sup> It is more probable to deduce it from the Sax. ofep, or ofpe, a bank, in the genitive ofpep. So as St. Marie Overies is St. Marie on the bank. Hickesii Gram. Sax. p. 5.

GLOSSARY.

ham debet unum palefridum pro habenda recognitione duodecim legalium hominum de vicineto de Erdinton, i. 234. Recognitio novæ assisæ, a new trial; Richardus de Camvill et Eustacia uxor ejus debent unam marcam pro habenda recognitione novæ assisæ, i. 241.

RECTUM. Right of inheritance. Brien Fitz-Count engaged to serve Maud the empress; Eam auxiliari rectum suum acquirere quod vi aufertur i. 138. Right and satisfaction to be obtained in a legal course of justice. Alexander bishop of Lincoln to Guy de Charing; Ne pro recti vel justitiæ penuria amplius audiam clamorem, i. 122. Vide Breve de Recto.

RECTORIA. The word used for a parsonage house, even where there was no instituted rector. As at Stratton-Audley, a chapel appendant to Burcester and appropriated to that priory; Pro cariagio albi straminis a rectoria de Stratton. ii. 113.

REGARDATORES Forestæ. Those officers who were every year upon oath to make a regard, or to take a view of the forest limits, and to inquire into all the damages and trespasses committed, and present them in writing at the next swainmote, or forest-court. Manwood refers their institution to king Henry II. but Spelman believes the name at least was since given; and that in the reign of Hen. II. they were called custodes venationis. Per sacramentum omnium regardatorum et agistorum, i. 294.

REGRESSUS. A re-entry upon an estate passed away, which was commonly renounced in the charter of conveyance. Bernard de S. Walery gave the site and advowson of Godstow to king Henry II. — Ita quod neque ego neque hæredes mei regressum habeamus, vel calumpniam aliquam versus aliquos de præfato manerio, i. 176.

RELEVUM. A relief or fine paid to the king by all who came to the inheritance of lands held in capite, or military service, to relieve, or as it were to redeem their estate, and obtain possession of it. It consisted at first in horses and arms, till by the assize of arms, 27. Hen. II. every man's armour was preserved for his heir, and the relief payable in money, of which the fixed rates were determined by magna charta. An earl for his whole county one hundred pounds. A baron for his whole barony one hundred marks. A knight for his whole fee one hundred shillings; and so in proportion, to be paid by every inheritor of an estate, at full age, the heir male at twenty-one, female at fourteen. Thomas de S. Walery, lord of Ambrosden, indebted to king John one hundred and seventy marks for a relief, i. 222. Sir William Fitz-Elias paid one hundred shillings for his relief of one knight's fee in Oakle, 11. Hen. II. i. 285. The judges determined that William Longspe should pay two hundred pounds for the relief of two baronies, i. 347. One hundred pounds paid for the relief of one barony by Hugh de Plesssets, 47. Hen. III. i. 367. One hundred pounds by Theobald de Verdon, baron, i. 397. If the baron were beyond the seas, at the time of his coming to full age, the estate was by the king's special favour surrendered to his use, with security given for paying a reasonable relief at his return; Cum idem Henricus sit in transmarinis partibus &c. volentes ei gratiam facere, omnia predicta ipsi reddimus, accepta securitate de rationabili relevio, ii. 100. Reliefs were payable not only to the king as prime lord, but to all barons and knights by those tenants who held under them by military service. This was chargeable on estates of this tenure given to religious houses. As the priory of Poghele, in com. Berks. at the succession of every new prior, paid to Sir Ralph de Chesterton, lord of the fee, one hundred shillings for the relief of one knight's fee in Bettretton, i. 330.

RELEVARE. To pay such relief, and obtain possession of such estate. Some customary and servile tenants did relieve or pay a fine for renewal of a tenure on the death of the last possessor, which in one virgate was double the rent, and four shillings over. So in the manor of Hedingdon, 20. Edw. I. Cum integram virgatam terræ tenens decesserit, hæres ejus duplicationem sui redditus annualis et per quatuor solidos terminum ultra relevabit, et qui minus tenuerit de una virgata, ultra redditum suum duplicatum, minus det secundum quantitatem tenementi sui, i. 452.

RELIGIOSI. The religious, or all regulars of a religious order, as opposed to laymen, and to the secular clergy. Before the statute of mortmain, the nation was so sensible of the extravagant donations to the religious, that in the grant and conveyance of estates, it was often made an express condition, that no sale, gift, or assignation of the premises should be made to the religious; Tenenda sibi et hæredibus suis, vel cuicunque vendere, dare, vel assignare voluerint, exceptis viris religiosis et Judæis.

REPASTUM. A repast, or meal. Unum repastum, one meal's meat given by custom to servile tenants when they laboured for their lord. Tenet in bondage, et debet unam wedbedrip pro voluntate dominæ, et habebit unum repastum, i. 575.

REPRISA. The deductions and charges paid out of lands and tenements to be allowed and excepted in the clear value of the estate. Capitale messuagium valet per annum cum tota inclausa ii. sol. et non plus, salva reprisa domorum et aliarum officinarum, i. 443.

RESPECTUS. Respite, or longer time. Se ponere in respectum, to gain a continuance of term, or forbearance, in order to make the better proof or defence in a cause depending. Robertus Frere et Joshua Phelippes attachiati—se ponunt in respectum quousque melius poterit per fide dignos probari, ii. 86.

RESTITUTIO in integrum. A writ of restitution, to put a person into repossession of such lands and tenements, as whereof he had been wrongfully disseised. The procuring such writ was expressly renounced in some covenants of sale, the better to secure a title to the purchaser; Remittantes in hoc facto omnibus impellationibus super hoc habitis, appellationibus, in integrum restitutioni, regie prohibitioni, &c. i. 490.

RESTITUTIO temporalium. All bishopricks and abbeys held in capite, upon every vacancy or death of a prelate, were taken as a lapse into the king's hands by the escheator, who was to receive the intermediate profits, and upon the election and confirmation of a successor, a writ was issued out de restitutione temporalium. Abbas de Oseneia obiit 25. Edw. I. et ante restitutionem temporalium dictæ abbacie successorî dicti abbatis dictæ domus electo factam, petit escheator ad opus domini regis cupam et palefridum, i. 470.

RETINEMENTUM. Reserve. Sine ullo

retinemento ad me vel hæredes meos pertinente, i. 225.

ROTULUS curiæ. The court roll of the lord, in which the names, rents, and services of the tenants were copied and enrolled. Per rotulum curiæ tenere, by copyhold.—Matildis le Taillur tenet per rotulum curiæ unum messuagium, i. 569.

ROTULI placitorum. Court records, or the register of trials, judgments, and decrees, in a court of justice. Dicti homines præmissas conventiones in rotulis placitorum domini regis de anno supradicto ad majorem securitatem inrotulari procurarunt, i. 454.

RUDGE. The back or top of any thing; thence by metaphor applied to a hill, or any ascent. As Asherugge, mons fraxineus, a hill of ashes. From Sax. hprge, hprick; Dan. ryc. Hence a rack, and rick of hay, or straw. A rack of mutton, dorsum ovile. A ridge of land. The ridge of a house. Rugged, or high-backed; a rug, rough, rough-ings; rigging, or clothes. To rig, or lade a vessel. And in old Eng. the word rigge was used for the back, as Pierce Ploughman describes the pedlar with—a pake at his rigge, i. e. a pack at his back.

RUSTICI. Those corts, churls, clowns, or inferior tenants, who held cottages and land by the service of country work, or hand-labour. The land of such ignoble tenure was called by the Saxons, garolland; as afterwards socage tenure; and was sometimes distinguished by the name of terra rusticorum. So Gilbert Basset gave to his priory of Burcester, unam virgatam terræ in Strattun collectam de terra rusticorum, quæ data fuit in dote prædictæ capellæ, i. 188.

S.

SACERDOS. The parish priest, rector, or vicar, as distinguished from his chapel-lane or curate. So to the donation of the hermitage of Musewell to the abbey of Missenden, the witnesses are—Willielmus senex sacerdos de Burcester, cum Willielmo capellano suo, et Willielmo sacerdote de Ambrosden, i. 103. To a charter of Sir Wido de Meriton to the Knights Templars, Testes donationis sunt Fulco sacerdos de Meriton, &c. i. 166.

SACRAMENTUM. An oath. The common form of all inquisitions made by a jury of free and legal men. Qui dicunt super (aut per) sacramentum suum, i. 443. Whence possibly the proverbial offering to take the sacrament in affirming or denying, was first meant of an oath.

SACRAMENTUM altaris. The sacrifice of the mass, or what we now call the sacrament of the Lord's Supper: for which communion, the bread and wine was provided by the priest out of the ample offerings, and in appropriated churches this burden was often laid on the vicar. Panem et vinum pro sacramento altaris vicarius illius ecclesie (i. e. de Meriton) propriis sumptibus exhibebit, ii. 120.

SACRILEGIUM. Sacrilege, or an alienation to laymen, and to profane or common purposes, of what was given to religious persons and to pious uses. Our forefathers were very tender of incurring the guilt and scandal of this crime. And therefore when the Knights Templars were dissolved, their lands were all given to the Knights Hospitallers of Jerusalem; Ne in pios usus erogata contra donatorum voluntatem in alios usus distraherentur, i. 561.

SALARIUM. A salary. At first it signified the rent or profits of a sala, or house. In Gascoigne they now call the seats of noblemen sales, as we do halls. It afterward stood for any wages, or annual allowance; Qui quidem capellanus et successores sui nomine salarii sui recipient singulis annis in perpetuum omnimodis decimas, ii. 381.

SALT-SYLVYER. One penny paid at the feast of St. Martin by the servile tenants to their lord, as a commutation for the service of carrying their lord's salt from market to his larder. In manerio de Pydinton quilibet virgatus dabit domino unum denarium pro salt-sylver per annum ad dictum festum S. Martini, vel cariabunt salem domini de foro ubi emptus fuerit ad lardarium domini<sup>x</sup>, ii. 137.

SARCLARE. To weed standing corn. From Lat. sarclum, sarculum, a weeding hook. Tenentes de Hedingdon per duos dies in quadragesima similiter arabunt, et herciabunt, et uno die postea sarclabunt blada domini ibidem, i. 453. Et in solutis diversis hominibus et feminis primo die Julii conductis ad sarculandum diversa blada, ut patet per tatham, contra agillarium hoc anno xiv. sol. x. den. ii. 256. Una sarclatura, the service of one day's weeding for the lord. Tenet in bondagio, et debet unam aruram, et unam saculaturam, i. 575. Alicia quæ fuit uxor Richardi le Grey faciet unam sarclaturam, et unam wedbedripam, i. 576.

SAY. Silk. A Lat. sericum; Ital. seta; Teuton. seide; Saxon, seene. Whence our satin, which yet Vossius deduces from Lat. and Gr. σάτυν; as that from the Syriac, sadni.—Et in bolt rubei say propter anabatam faciendam iv. sol. viii. den. ii. 254.

SASSONS. The corruption of Saxons; a name by which the English were formerly called in contempt, (as they still are by the Welch,) while they rather affected the name of Angles.

SALICETUM. An osier-bed, or low moist place on the bank of a river for the growth of osiers, willows, or withies. Sax. pehger; old English, wickers. Thence a wicker-basset, a wicket, or door made of basket work. The wicket or cross stick to be thrown down by the ball at the game called crickets, &c. Molendinum de Kertlington cum quadam particula saliceti, quæ de meo feodo est, i. 283.

A SCEAP. A measure of corn. Lat. schappa, schaphula; a scapha, a boat, or scipp, or kiff. Sceppa salis, a quantity of salt. Mon. Ang. tom. ii. p. 284. — Twenty-eight quarter and one sceap of wheat, ii. 292. Hence a basket is called a skip, or skep, in the south parts of England, and a beehive is called a beeskip.

SCHOZEARS. They seem to have been plough-wheels, from Sax. roor, shoes, and epian, to plough, or ear. Et in uno pari rotarum vocat. Schozears empto ibidem vii. sol. ii. den. ii. 253.

SCIREWYTE. An annual tax or imposition paid to the sheriff of the county or shire, for holding the assises, or county courts. In solutis pro quadam pensione vocata scirewyt annualim iv. sol. ii. 253. Shire, schyre, from Sax. scýpan, to divide; whence a share, or division; a shore, dividing sea and land; a skry, to cleanse and <sup>x</sup> The college and schole at Eaton hold some things by a custom of offering salt to travellers. It is, I think, on the first day of Hilary Term. The schole master and all his scholars goe to a tumulus or barrow near to Slough, upon the road about a mile from the college, and offer salt to all that pass by. J. Aubrey on Gentilism, MS. p. 2.

GLOSSARY.

separate corn; a skreen, or partition in a room. To shear, or to cut with a pair of shears; a wheat-shearing, in Kent, is the time of cutting wheat. A sciver, now a shiver or shavings of wood, a skewer for meat, a schrift or shift, a schred or shred, a scheart or shirt, sceord or short, a sceort or skirt, &c. In Kent we call a bridle-way a sheer-way, as separate and divided from the common road, or open highway.

SCOTELLA. Scutella, a scutum. Sax. reutel, reutzel, any thing of a flat and broad shape, like a shield: especially a plate or dish, as a shallow platter, is still called a wooden scuttle: and in Kent the shovel with which they turn their malt is called a scuttle. To the same Lat. scutum we owe the scuttles of a ship, a weaver's shuttle, a shuttle-cock, &c. Et in duabus scotellis manualibus emptis ibidem vii. den. et in quinque scotellis minoris sortis emptis ibidem pro cæteris officiis ix. den. ii. 254.

SCRUTINIUM. A view and inquest made by neighbours as select arbitrators to adjust any depending difference. Idem prior facto inde per vicinos diligenti scrutinio certioratus per eosdem, i. 419.

SCUTAGIUM. Scutage, from Lat. scutum, a shield, whereon they wore a device or military distinction; whence scutum armorum, a coat of arms. Fr. escusson, whence our escutcheon, or scutcheon. All tenants who held from the king by military service, were bound to attend personally in wars and expeditions; or for default of personal service, a scutage or composition tax on every scutum militare, or knight's fee, and the proportionable parts, was assessed and levied for the king's use. In 7. Hen. II. there was a scutage of two marks on every knight's fee, i. 163. A scutage of one mark in 13. Hen. II. i. 171. A scutage of ten shillings on every fee collected in 3. Rich. I. i. 206. A scutage of twenty shillings for the king's redemption, 5. Richard I. i. 214. A scutage of two marks in the first of king John, i. 223. The same scutage in 2. king John, i. 226. A scutage of three marks in 27. Hen. III. i. 326. A scutage of twenty shillings on each fee for marriage of the king's eldest daughter in 29. Hen. III. i. 332. A scutage of forty shillings for making prince Edward a knight in 39. Hen. III. i. 352. A scutage of forty shillings in 6. Edw. I. i. 409. If a baron or knight had paid his personal attendance in any expedition, he had the king's discharge from scutage to himself, or to his heir.—Rex Vic. Oxon. Sciatis quod H. Longspe quondam comes Sarum fuit notiscum in exercitu nostro Muntgumery. Ideo tibi præcipimus quod de scutagio quod per summonitores scuccarii exigit a filio—pacem ei habere permittas, i. 281. The barons and knights when they paid a scutage to the king, had power to levy the same tax of those tenants who held from them in military service. And this was often made an express condition in subordinate grants and conveyances. So Amfride Fitz-Richard gave to the abbey of Oseney one hide of land in Chester-ton; Ita quod quando dominicu terra de Cestreton dat scutagium, dicta terra dabit quintam partem unius scuti, i. 174. De liberis tenentibus dicunt, quod Robertus Pickereil tenet de octo virgatis terre cum pertinentiis in Meriton, que pertinent ad manerium de Pydinton, et tenentur de domino ejusdem per servitium militare, et quum scutagium currit domino, dabit unam marcam, ii. 136. The barons upon other extraordinary occasions obtained the king's precept, whereby they were empowered to tax their inferior tenants. As when Richard, king of the Romans and earl of Cornwall, was to visit Rome, upon his own and his royal brother's urgent affairs, the king issued one writ to the said earl, to authorize him to demand, and another to his tenants to oblige them to pay, a certain scutage to him. And at another time, by the king's order, a scutage was imposed on all the tenants of the said Richard, to raise the money which he had expended for his redemption when a prisoner to Monfort's party, i. 378.

SEAL. Sax. figel, from Lat. sigillum. Those persons who had no proper seal of their own, procured the seal of some other private friend or public officer, to be affixed to their acts and deeds. So Margaret le Frankleyn in 10. Hen. III. put the seal of Gerard de Wyzeri, because she had no seal in her own right, i. 280. If persons thought their own seal to be obscure and unknown, they generally procured the affixing of some more authentic seal; as in the form of several charters; Quia sigillum meum penitus est incognitum—ideo sigillum—apponi procuravi, ii. 384, 388.

GLOSSARY.

SECRETARIUS, a secretis, a secretary. The word formerly signified any confident, favourite, or intimado; Cuncta denique agenda sua ad nutum unius secretarii sui passim committere, i. 558.

SECTA curiæ. Suit and service done by tenants at the court of their lord; Homines de Hedingdon facient sectam curiæ domini sex septimanis, et si breve domini regis in dicta curia attachietur, tunc sectam illam facient de tribus septimanis in tres septimanas, i. 453. This suit or attendance was often remitted to the religious as a special privilege. So Richard, earl of Cornwall, confirmed to the abbey of Oseney their land in Mixbury; Quæ terra quandoquidem consuevit facere sectam ad curiam nostram de North-Oseney, hanc sectam, &c. relaxamus in perpetuum, i. 299.

SECTA Schirarum et Hundredorum. The attendance, suit, and service, done by tenants in the county and hundred courts. Quietos esse de hac secta, was a privilege to be exempted from such customary service. So the abbot of Abbotsburie, in com. Dorset. had this privilege in the hundred of Whitchurch; Prædicti abbas et prædecessores sui sunt quieti de secta illius hundredi per concessionem Roberti de Mandevil quondam domini ejusdem hundredi. Mon. Ang. tom. i. p. 279. So king Hen. II. granted to the free tenants within the honors of Wallingford and Beramsted, ut sint quieti de sectis schirarum et hundredorum, i. 157. The religious had commonly their tenants discharged from this duty for those lands which they held in Frank-Almoigne; Electionem liberam et quietam ab omni sectantia et exactione, i. 182.

SEED-COD. A basket or other vessel of wood carried upon one arm of the husbandman, to bear the seed or grain which he sows with the other hand. From Sax. ræs, seed; and codde, a purse; or such like continent. Hence codd in Westmoreland is a bolster, or pillow, and in other northern parts a cushion; as a pin-cod, i. e. a pin-cushion; a horse-cod, i. e. a horse-collar, to guard his neck. The cod of a man or beast, a cod-piece, a peas-cod, &c.—Pro uno seed-cod empto iud. ii. 213. This seed-cod was commonly by the Saxons called ræs-leap, which very word seed-leap is still retained in Essex, but here in Oxfordshire corrupted into a seed-lip, and in other parts a seed-lib. The Saxon leap was properly a basket or panier made of osiers; whence a weel made of willows or osiers to catch fish, is now in Leicestershire called a leap. From this continent they borrowed the Latin word lepa, a lepe, or measure of about five gallons, as in this citation from an extent of the manor of garinges produced by Sir Hen. Spelman; Debet triturare tres bussellos frumenti, et dimidiam lepæ, vel quinque bussellos fabarum, pisarum, vel vescarum. And more evidently from an extent of the manor of Terring in Sussex, 5. Edw. I. quoted by Mr. Somner; Willielmus le Cuper tenet ferlingum unius virgatæ continentem quatuordecim acras pro octodecim denariis solvendis,—et colliget de nucibus in bosco domini tertiam partem unius mensuræ quæ vocatur lepe, quod est tertia pars duarum bussellorum, et valet quadrantem. The words leap and lib in Sussex, do now signify the measure of half a bushel, or four gallons.

SELIO. A ridge of ploughed land, or as much as lies between two furrows. In old Eng. a selion of land, and a stitch of land. Coke on Littleton derives the Lat. selio from the Fr. sellon, a ridge. But the learned Spelman gives its original to the Sax. ŕul, or ŕyl, a plough; which in the North is still called a sull, and in Wiltshire a sul-low. Joan, prioress of Merkyate, and her sisters, granted to Henry, prior of Burcester, and the canons—duas seliones in Hodesham, i. 246.—quatuor seliones terræ quæ vocantur buttes, i. 261. Alice Segrin granted to Sir John de Handlo, duas seliones terræ arabilis in Southcroft, i. 495. Octo acræ jacent apud le Bowelonde in novemdecim selionibus,—et duæ acræ continent quatuor seliones cum duabus buttis, ii. 34. Ad præparandum usque ad curectam xxix. seliones ordeï, ii. 256. From the Sax. ŕul came the Lat. sulinga, old Eng. sulinge, a plough-land, which thus occurs in an old charter of king Offa to archbishop Janibert; In nomine Jesu Salvatoris mundi, &c. Ego Offa rex totius Anglorum patriæ dabo et concedo Janiberht archiepiscopo ad ecclesiam, aliquam partem terræ trium aratorum, quod cantianiste dicitur three sulinge. From sull, a plough, we must derive to sully, i. e. to throw up dirt, and perhaps the looks and colours of sullen, and sallow; nor is it unlikely our Eng. soil, and to soil, are rather owing to the Sax. jul, than to the Lat. solum.

SEISINA, Saisina. From Fr. saisir, to take, or possess. Ponere in seisinā, to give or put in possession. Constituo—attornatum meum ad ponendum Johannem filium Nigelli jun. de Borstall nomine meo in seisinā de omnibus terris, i. 388. Longa seisinā, long and immemorial possession. Franciplegium est quedam libertas regia mere spectans ad coronam et dignitatem domini regis, contra quam longa seisinā valere non debet, i. 442.

SENEŠCHALLUS. A seneschal; from the Germ. sein, a house, or place; and schale, a servant. The seneschal of a baron was his chief steward, or head bailiff, that kept his courts, received his rents, and managed his demesne lands. Hugh de Bochland was seneschal to Brien Fitz-Count, lord of Wallingford, i. 137. Edmundus comes Cornubiæ dilecto et fideli suo Simoni de Grenhull seneschallo honoris S. Walerici salutem, i. 472. When the baron was absent out of England, his seneschal acted all matters as his lord's attorney, or proxy; Nec est prætermittendum quod quotiescunque priorissam eligere contigerit ad eundem prioratum, de seipsis priorissam de assensu meo, vel seneschalli mei si in Angliā non fuero, eligere licebit. Mon. Ang. tom. i. p. 486.

SEPARIA, Separaria. A several, or divided enclosure; Placia quæ jacet juxta separiam prioris et conventus de Burncester, i. 479.

SEQUESTERARE. To sequester the profits of an estate or benefice, or detain them from the use of the proprietor or owner. A power of sequestration reserved to the bishop against the appropriators, if they failed in any performance of covenant or pension. As in the ordination of the vicarage of Merton; Licet eo ipso, et non servato ulio processu, nobis et successoribus nostris episcopis Lincolnie omnes fructus redditus et proventus ipsius ecclesiæ sequestrare, et sub tuto tenere sequestro, donec dicta pensio cum suis areragiis integre persolvatur, ii. 121.

SEQUI. To prefer an action, and prosecute a cause, as attorney of the plaintiff. Gilbertus de Thornton qui sequitur pro rege dicit quod franciplegium, &c. i. 442.

SEQUELA. Suit and service, and all other customary duties of those tenants who depended on the lord. William de Longspe confirmed to the priory of Burcester their land in Wrechwick—cum villanis et eorum sequelis et catallis, i. 305.—Villanos cum villanagiis omnibus catallis et tota sequela ipsorum, i. 406.—Una cum villanis, coterellis, eorum catallis, servitiis, sectis et sequelis, et omnibus suis ubicunque pertinentibus, i. 439.

SERA pendibilis. A pad-lock, which pad Minshew makes to be a contraction of pendible, but Skinner from the German padde, seræ latibulum, the staple into which the bolt runs. Et in ser seris pendibilibus emptis ibidem xviii. den. ii. 253. The Saxon loc signified not only the lock of a door, but any sort of enclosure; whence a lock, or restraint of water on the river; a lock, or pen for sheep.

SERJANTIA, Servientia. A serjeantry, or service done for the holding of lands; either grand-serjeantry, some honourable military service paid only to the king, as to carry his banner, to bear his sword, to find him a certain number of men and horses, &c. or petit-serjeantry, some inferior and less noble service paid to the king or any other lord, as reception and entertainment, provender for horses, to give a bow, spurs, gloves, &c. Johannes filius Nigelli tenet de rege unam hidam terræ arabilis in Borstall per magnam serjeantiam custodiendi forestam de Bernwode, i. 374. Isabella de Handlo tenuit unum messuagium quatuor carucatas terræ, et triginta unum solidatos, et quatuor denariatos redditus in Hedindon a domino rege in capite per magnam serjeantiam inveniendi unum hominem, et custodiendi forestam de Shottover et Stowode, ii. 130. Richard de Prescote held one hide of land in Blechesdon, per serjeantiam portandi unam hastam parci, by the petty serjeantry of carrying a shield of brawn to the king as often as he hunted in the forest of Cornbury, i. 345. Joan de Musegrave held the same lands by the same tenure in 13. Edw. III. ii. 73. Oliver de Standford in 27. Edw. I. held lands in Nettlebed, com. Oxon. per serjeantiam espicurnantie in cancellaria domini regis, by the office of espigurnel, or scaler of the king's writs in chancery, i. 412. Ela, countess of Warwick, held the manor of Hokenorton, com. Oxon. per serjeantiam scindendi coram domino rege die natalis Domini, et habere cultellum domini regis de quo scindit, i. 435.

GLOSSARY.

The manor of Broughton, com. Oxon. in the reign of Edw. II. was held by John Mauduit in capite, per serjantiam mutandi unum hostrium domini regis, vel illum hostrium portandi ad curiam domini regis, ii. 247. Aston-Bernard, com. Buck. held in 20. Edw. III. by John Molins, from the king in capite, by the serjeantry of being marshal of the king's falcons and other hawks, ii. 247. William de la Pole, marquis of Suffolk, held the manors of Neddying and Kittilberston, com. Suff. by the serjeantry of carrying a golden sceptre with a dove on the head of it, on the coronation day of the king's heirs and successors. As also another sceptre of ivory with a golden dove on the head thereof on the day of the coronation of the queen, and all succeeding queens of England, ii. 334. Sir John de Molins held the manor of Ilmere, com. Buck. by the serjeantry of keeping the king's hawks, ii. 72. Amory de S. Amand held the manor of Grendon, com. Buck. and the advowson of the church of Beckley, com. Oxon. by the petty-serjeantry of furnishing the lord of the honor with one bow of ebony and two arrows yearly, or sixteen pence in money, i. 512. Summa reddituum assisorum de manerio Banbury—item de serjantia cxi. gallinæ, et mccc. ova, i. 506. By the stat. 12. Car. II. when all tenures were turned into free and common soccage, the honorary services of grand-serjeantry were alone excepted.

SERVI. Servile tenants. Our northern servi had always a much casier condition than the Roman slaves. Servis non in nostrum morem descriptis per familiam ministeriis utuntur. Snam quisque sedem, suos penates regit. Frumenti modum dominus, aut pecoris, aut vestis, colono injungit, et servus hactenus paret. Tacit. de Mor. German. Which plainly describes the condition of our Saxon and Norman servants, natives, and villains. No author, to my knowledge, has fixed the distinction between servus and villanus, though undoubtedly their servitude was different: for they are all along in the Domesday Book divided from one another. So in Burcester there were quinque servi, et viginti octo villani, i. 88. I suppose, the servi were those whom our lawyers have since called pure villanes, and villanes in gross, who, without any determined tenure of land, were at the arbitrary pleasure of the lord appointed to such servile works, and received their maintenance and wages at discretion of their lord. The other were of a superior degree, and were called villani, because they were villæ et glebæ adscripti, held some cottage and lands, for which they were burdened with such stated servile offices, and were conveyed as a pertinence of the manor to which they belonged. The ancilla, or woman servant so disposed at the pleasure of the lord. Sir Simon de Meriton granted to the Knights Templars, Augnetem de Meriton quæ fuit filia Willielmi patris Walteri ejusdem villæ, et omnia catalla quæ habet vel habere poterit, et omnes proventus qui de ea exierunt vel exhibunt, i. 173.

SERVITIUM regale. Royal service, or the rights and prerogatives that within such a manor belong to the king, if lord of it: which were generally reckoned to be these six. 1. Power of judicature in matters of property. 2. Power of life and death in criminal causes. 3. A right in wayfs and strays. 4. Assessments. 5. Minting of money. 6. Assise of bread, beer, weights and measures. All these entire privileges were annexed to some manors in their grant from the king, and were sometimes conveyed in the charters of donation to religious houses; Ecclesia S. Georgii data fuit fratribus Osen. et habet ibidem visum franciplegii et totum regale servitium, i. 83.

SERVIENTES vicecomitum. The bailiffs of sheriffs, who had an auxilium or customary aid paid to them, from which some persons were by special privilege exempted. So king Hen. II. granted to the homines et mercatores honoris de Walingford, ut quieti sint de auxilio vicecomitum et servientum, i. 157.

SERVIENS de manerio. A steward who is employed by the lord to occupy such grounds, and to account for the yearly profits of them. Computat Walterus de Gaung serviens de Arnkote coram auditoribus de omnibus receptis, i. 405.

SEWER, dapifer mensalis. An officer like our clerk of the kitchen, who ordered the serving up of dishes to the table. Dr. Cowel derived it from the old Fr. asseour, a disposer. William Martel, sewer to king Stephen, i. 133.

SIDELINGE. A ridge, or butt of arable land lying along the side of a stream or river; Cujus aqua manat ultra et præter dictas buttes, et ideo vocantur sydelynges, nec pertinent ad furlong de Long-Stanford nec ad Busthames furlong, sed jacent inter medium, ii. 187. Deinde transeundum est ad furlong de Thromwell cum le sidelynge adjacente, ii. 188. Ab hac furlong procedunt le sidelynges de quibus patet superius, ibid. From Sax. flæð, flæbe. Thence a side or party, to side or adhere to, a sideman or assistant, to side about or turn. In the North, waistcoats are called side-coats; from a situation on the side, or along by, in Lincolnshire, and most northern parts, they use the word side for long, as a side field, a long field; and for high, as a side-house, a side-mountain; and, by metaphor, for proud, as a side woman, i. e. a haughty proud woman; which in Sussex is sidy, as a sidy-fellow, i. e. an imperious surly fellow.

SIGNUM. A cross prefixed to the name of a subscribing witness, as a sign of attestation and approbation to a charter, or other deed, commonly used among the Saxons and first Normans, before the use of seals or military coats of arms. + Signum Roberti episcopi Lincoln. + Signum Nigelli de Oily, i. 106.

SIMONY. Upon proof of simoniacal presentation, the clerk was ejected, the patron lost his next turn, and the bishop collated; as in the church of Bucknel, an. 1524. ii. 316.

SLADE. Sax. flæð. A long flat piece of ground; Pratum vocatum le slade, ii. 95. Slade-furlong, ii. 195. Furlong de la slade, ibid. De le Slade versus Gravenhull nichil in denariis hoc anno quia remanet ad staurum domini, ii. 251. Hence Sax. flæð; Dan. slær; Eng. sleet; i. e. smooth and plain. To slide, a slide or sledge; to sleek clothes with a sleek-stone; to slib or slip, slape or smooth in Lincolnshire; slape-ale, i. e. plain ale opposed to wormwood, scurvy-grass, or other medicinal ale. A slab, or smooth plank. A slate, or flat step of a ladder in the North; where butchers call the tongue and root of a hog killed and cut out, a slot of pork. In Northumberland, the slot of a door is the bolt; and in the South, to slot a lock is to thrust it back. Slate, or smooth mineral stone. A slappel, or smooth piece in Sussex. A slap, or flat box with the open hand. A slog or slough of smooth water and dirt. Slaps, or seamen's breeches. Slippers. A stiff or sleeve. To slubber, or run smoothly over. Old Eng. slidder, small rain or sleet. A slape, or smooth descent. To slitter, or cut smooth. A sliver, or smooth piece, &c.

SMIGMA, Migma, a Gr. μῖγμα, misceo. Soap, or a confection of soap and other unctuous matter, for washing and cleansing of boards, clothes, &c. Et in smigmatem empto quadam vice ad lavandam aulam prioris I. den. ii. 253.

SNODDE. A smooth roll or bottom of silk or thread. From Sax. snob, a fillet, or hair-lace, with which women smooth up their hair, which, in the North parts of England, is now called a snude, and in Scotland a snod. Which snod, as an adjective, in the North, is a common word for smooth. And snoddy, for smoothly and neatly, as snoddy geared, i. e. smoothly and finely dressed. And wheat ears are said to be snod, when they have no beard or awns. And a tree is snod when the top is cut smooth off. Hence, to snod along, to go close and smooth; to lie snod and snug, to lie close; Et in octo snoden de Pakthreath emptis ibidem pro quodam reti faciundo pro curculis capiendis hoc anno sex sol. ii. 253.

SOLARIUM. An upper room, chamber, or garret, which in some parts of England is still called a sollar; Istud cellarium et illud solarium sita sunt intra domum meam, i. 466. Pro duobus cellariis et duobus solaris eisdem ad terminum vitæ traditis et concessis, ii. 70. The Sax. sol, signified a rope or halter to tie cattle in their stall, which in several parts of England is still called a soul, and a sole; whence to sowl, to pull and tie up; and by easy metaphor, to sowl one by the ears, i. e. to pull one's ears, a common phrase in Lincolnshire, upon which Dr. Skinner is thus ridiculously witty: To sowl one by the ears, vox agro Linc. usitatissima, i. e. aures summa vi vellere, credo a sow, i. e. aures arripere et vellere, ut suis canes solent.

SOCAGE, Soccagium, Sax. roc, roca, right and jurisdiction. Socage was a tenure of lands by which a man was enfeoffed freely, or in fee simple, without any military service, relief, ward, or marriage, paying only to the lord a stated rent in money or provisions. So the kings of England often firmed out their demesne lands; as Brill, com. Buck. let out in soccage for the reserve of one hundred capons to the king's table, i. 72. Tenants who held in soccage might by custom be obliged to some services of plough, or cart, which were called soccagia, and sometimes were expressly renounced by the lord,—pro omnibus serviitiis, tallagiis, soccagiis, et pro omnibus secularibus exactionibus et terrenis demandis, i. 369. To prove the tenure of soccage was a sufficient discharge from claim of scutage and military service to the lord of the fee; Qualiter extincta sunt feoda domini abbatis quæ ab ipso petita sunt—Residuum quod habet de honore Sancti Walerici tenetur de abbate regalis loci per assignationem comitis per soccagium, et non habentur ibidem nisi tria contagia, i. 432.

SOKA, Soca, Sax. soen. A liberty or franchise of holding a court and exercising other jurisdiction over the socmen, or soccage tenants, within the extent of such an honor or manor; Castrum et manerium de Bolyngbroke cum soka, mara, et marisco cum pertinentiis, ii. 19. From soccage, commonly called the plough tenure, in the North they still call a ploughshare a sock, or plough-sock.

SPURARIUM Aureum. A spur royal. Lat. spaurones, spurs; Sax. ppopa, a spur; ppop, a tread, or track; whence the sporling of a wheel, i. e. a wheel-track in the North. A sporre-way, or spur-way, in Sussex, i. e. a sheer-way, or bridle-way. Spopnan, to spurn, or to kick. To walk or run a spurt. To spur, or to strike. A sparthe, or double axe, as Spencer—He hath a sparthe of twenty pound of weight. But this rather from Lat. sparus, Sax. ppapa, Eng. spear. Nor is it absurd to think that our English sport was originally foot-ball-play, though since extended to any other game; Pro hac recognitione Johannes dedit prædicto Hugoni unum spurarium aureum, i. 455.

STALLUM. Some think it a contraction of stabulum. Sax. stal, a stall, a seat, a standing; and in old English, any sort of chair or stool, as Spencer; A woman at a door sate on a stall. From stall, as applied to the standing or apartment of horses in a stable, comes the Lat. stalonus, Eng. stallion, and old Eng. a stallere, i. e. a groom. A still, or stand, to set beer upon in a cellar. A stage. To stall, in Lincolnshire, to feed, or fill, or make fat. A stalled ox, i. e. a fat ox. And perhaps the stale and staling of horses. Sax. stal-peope. stalwart, strong, as Duglass renders fortia corpora in Virgil, stalwart bodyis. The stalking or walking of a horse. In the chancel of every conventual church, the religious had each of them a stall. As now in cathedral quires; Willielmi de Longspe animam Ela abbatissa de Lacock vidit carbo penetrantem in stallio suo, et eoram cæteris sororibus denuntiavit, i. 345.

STALLAGIUM. Stallage, a customary rent paid in fairs and markets for the liberty of a stall, or standing, by the stall-langers, or the creamers, i. e. those traders who exposed their goods to sale in the said stalls. To be exempt from this duty, or to have a free standing, was a privilege granted by king Hen. II. to the tenants and merchants within the honor of Wallingford—ut quieti sint de thelonio, stallagio, &c. i. 157. Edmund earl of Cornwall to the Bonhommes of Asherugge, and their tenants—ut in singulis burgis et villis nostris, et etiam in singulis nundinis et mercatis nostris libere valeant emere et vendere omnes mercandisas absque ullo theloneto seu stallagio nobis vel hæredibus nostris inde præsentando, i. 439. From the stall of wares and goods comes the staple of merchants, staple-commodities, &c.

STAPRON. A coarse apron; Et in stipendio Katherine Colins Jacienti muntalia coquinae hoc anno xx. den. et in datis eidem pro uno stapron iii. den. i. 256.

STATUS de manerio. All the tenants and legal men met in the court of their lord to do their customary suit, and enjoy their customary rights; Apud curiam de Wrechwike tentam in festo S. Andreae, an. 17. Edw. III.—Omnis status de Wrechwike elegerunt Hugonem Kyng ad officium præpositi, et juramentum suscepit, ii. 83.

STACURUM. Any store, or standing stock of cattle, provision, &c; Computant de quatuor solidis provenientibus de stauro boverie, ii. 249.—de duobus coriis vaccarum stauri de la Breche, ibid.

STERLINGI, Esterlingi. Sterling money, old Eng. starlinges. Lindwood has a childish fancy, that a starling, or bird, was impressed upon such old coin. Some pretend, it was the purer metal which the easterlings, or eastern merchants brought into these parts. Others would presume it first coined at the castle of Sterling, in Scotland. But Mr. Somner seems most happy in the derivation of it from the Sax. ƿæpe, a rule or standard, from ƿæpan, to guide, or govern. So as sterling money seems to be that sort of coin, which for metal and value was to be a common standard of all current money. Which seems the more probable, because such money, at the first coming in of the Normans, was called sterilensis. As Orderic. Vital. sub an. 1082.—Porrigam quindecim sterilensium. From the same Saxon ƿæpan, comes our Eng. to steer right; the steer, or stern, and the starboard of a ship. A steersman, or pilot. To stare, or fix the eyes. To start. The stirrup in a saddle. Sterbrech in our old law, i. e. a trespass in stopping or molesting the common road; whence a stray, and to go astray. Mr. Somner does ingeniously conjecture, that the termination of ster, in several faculties and trades, is owing to the same original, and signifies the mastery or command of such an art, as a maltster, a gamester, a spinster, a songster, &c.—decem solidos sterlingorum γ, i. 179.

STRAKYS. The strakes or streaks of a wheel; i. e. the iron plates that shoe the fellows of a wheel, or are nailed round the circumference of it. A Lat. striga, a long furrow; Sax. ƿæpe; Germ. stroke; Eng. stroke, or streak. Whence a small stalk, or young straight branch, is in Kent, and other parts, called a strig. A strickle, or smooth straight piece of wood, to strike corn in the measure of it. To stroke down. To streek, in the North, i. e. to pull out, or open, or lay smooth; In uno pari rotarum vocat. schozeas empt. ibidem, ut patet per prædictum papirum vii. sol. ii. den. et in vi. strakys ferreis iv. sol. ii. 253.

STRAND. Sax. ƿæpanse. Any shore or bank of a sea or river. An immunity from custom and all imposition paid for goods and vessels of such places, was granted by king Hen. II. to the church of Rochester; Concedo et confirmo in perpetuum cum soc-

ner et seke, strand and stream. Mon. Ang. tom. 3. p. 4. So the same prince granted to all tenants and traders within the honor of Wallingford, that—by water and by land, by wood and by strand, quæti sint de thelonio, pontagio, i. 157. Hence the street in the west suburbs of London, which lay next the shore, or bank of the Thames, is called The Strand. Whence a ship or vessel running on the shore, and being broke to pieces, is said to strand, and to be stranded. And G. Duglass mentions the strandis of the sea.

STRATA. Sax. ƿæpe; Eng. street, or highway. Hence, to strout and strut along, to make streight or straight, to stretch out, &c. Extendit se in latitudine juxta altam stratam versus cimiterium ecclesiæ parochialis de Berencester, i. 461.

STREPITUS Judicialis. The circumstances of noise and crowd, and other turbulent formalities, at a process or trial in a public court of justice; Possint eos et eorum successores per omnem censuram ecclesiasticam ad omnium et singulorum præmissorum observationem absque articulo seu libelli petitione et quocunque strepitu judiciali compellere, i. 490.

SUETTA, Secta. Suit or service done to a superior lord. From the Fr. suivre, to follow; Pro omnibus servitiis, curiæ sectis, snettis, releviis, &c. i. 369.

SUFFRAGIA orationum. The prayers and holy offices performed by the religious for their founders and benefactors. Bernard de S. Walery gave the site and advowson of the abbey of Godstow to king Hen. II.—Salvis tantummodo mihi et hæreditibus meis ejusdem ecclesiæ orationibus et elemosinæ suffragiis, i. 176. Isabel Gargat gave a croft to the canons of Burcester; Dicti vero canonici receperunt me et dominam matrem meam specialiter in orationibus suis et suffragiis domus sue imperpetuum, i. 265. Sir John de Molins was a special benefactor to the canons of St. Mary Overie, in Southwark; for which they made him partaker of all their prayers and suffrages, and covenanted to mention him in all their masses, vigils, &c. ii. 29.

γ But the truth is, the Saxon masculine nouns did commonly form their feminines in ƿæpe, or ƿæpe, or ƿæpe. Hence masculine, brewer; feminine, brewster; a baker, bakerster; whence the family of Baxter. So a singer, a songster, a spinner, a spinster, &c. Vide Hickesii Grammat. Saxon. p. 15.

GLOSSARY.

SULCUS aquæ. A small brook, or stream of water, which in Essex is called a doke.—In fine inferiore ipsius merce descendit quidam sulcus fluens inter medium de Stanford-more prædicta usque in Nether-Stanford, et ibi vocatur Bygenhull-broke, ii. 187. From the word brook comes possibly the fishing term of brokling, or brogling for eels. In Sussex, and some other parts, the clouds are said to brook up, when they gather and threaten rain. To brookle, or brukle, in the North, is to make wet and dirty.

SUMMA, Saugma, Sauma, a Gr. σάγμα; Fr. saume, somme. Properly, any load or burden of a horse. In old charters we frequently find sauma vini, and summa ligni, for a horse-load of wine, or wood. Mr. Somner believes that this sort of burden gave name to a sumpter-horse; Lat. equus saumarius; Fr. somiere. Summa frumenti, Sax. ream, and ream-byrden, was the quantity of eight bushels, or a quarter, still called a seam in Kent, and other south parts. The Knights Templars gave to the wife of Sir Wido de Meriton—duas summas bladi, i. 166. One seam of nuts was equivalent to two shillings in 23. Hen. II. i. 182. Maud de Chesney gave to the canons of Burcester—quinque summas frumenti ad hostias faciendas, i. 220. Hence a sum of money. The termination of sum, and some, implying a plenty and fulness, as troublesome, &c. The summer in building, or chief beam to support the roof. A term in falconry; a hawk is full summed when the plumes are full grown, &c.

SUMMONITOR. A summoner, or apparitor, who was to cite in a delinquent to appear at a certain time and place to answer a charge exhibited against him. Two persons were joined in this office, who, in citations from a superior court, were to be peers or equals of the party cited. At least, the barons were to be summoned by none under the degree of knights; hence Summonitores ordinarii, legales, boni.—Summone ibidem per bonos summonitores eundem Thomam quod sit coram nobis in crastino S. Johannis Baptistæ responsurus ad hoc quod ei proponetur, i. 246. Summonitus ad respondendum, legally summoned or cited to answer an action or complaint; Johannes filius Nigelli sen. summonitus fuit ad respondendum domino regi de placito quo uarranto clamat habere visum franciplegii, i. 441. Summonitores scaccarii, those officers, who assisted in collecting the king's revenues by citing the defaulters into the Court of Exchequer; De scutagio quod per summonitores scaccarii exigit, i. 281. Hence in the diocese of Canterbury the apparitors in each deanery are called the summers.

SWANEMOTUM. From Sax. ppan, a swain, as country-swain, boat-swain, and gemote, a court or convention. The swanemote was a court held twice a year by the forest officers, fifteen days before Midsummer, and three weeks before Michaelmas, for inquiry of the trespasses committed within the bounds of the forest. An inquisition de statu forestæ de Bernwode, 38. Edw. III.—Dicunt quod forestarii ut in jure domini regis dictæ forestæ habere debent una vice per annum ad swanemota sua cum tenta fuerint repasta sua in aliquibus manneriis, ii. 139. What Mr. Somner writes ppan, Sir Hen. Spelman makes to be ppang, a labourer, whom Chaucer calls a swinker, from ppmean, to labour and take pains; whence in Kent, a hard labourer is said to swink it away. From thence ppingan, to thrash, in the North, to swingle, with a flail there called a swingel; whence to swinge off, or take a swinging blow.

SWATHA. Sax. ppað, a swath, or in Kent, a sweath; in some parts a swarth, i. e. a straight row of cut grass, or corn, as it lies in the swath at first mowing of it. A swathe of meadow was a long ridge of ground, like a selion in arable land. William Burward sold his part of five swathes in a meadow called Bikemore, i. 545. Duæ swathes dicti prati jacent ut sequitur, i. 573. Duæ swathes apud Mathammes, i. 575. Hence, in the North, a swath banks is a swarth of new cut grass or hay: where a green swarth in a bottom among arable land is called a swang. Hence Sax. ppæðil, a swath, or swaddle, or swaddling-clothes. To swaddle, or bind up. A swad, or bundle of hay or straw. The swads or swods of pease, Sax. ppæps. The swearth, swarth, or sword of bacon. Green-sword, or the turf of grass ground. A swatch or switch, a small stick or rod; a swache in the North is a tally of wood, especially fixed to cloth sent to the dyer. To swaddle and swatchel, i. e. to beat or strike with a wand or rod that shall bend round the body, or thing so stricken.

GLOSSARY.

As prov. in Kent, I'll swaddle your sides, i. e. with a whip or wand I will strike, and make it bend and meet round your body. By metaphor, swad in the North is slender, i. e. close bound, as a swad-fellow, a mere swad. And by a like figure, swath, smooth and calm, as swath-weather.

SWORN-BROTHERS. Fratres Jurati. Persons who by mutual oath covenanted to share each the other's fortune; Statutum est quod ibi debent populi omnes et gentes universæ singulis annis, semel in anno scilicet, convenire, scilicet in capite kalendarum Maii, et se fide sacramento non fracto ibi in unum et simul confederare, et consolidare, sicut conjurati fratres. Leg. Edw. Conf. cap. 35. In any notable expedition to invade and conquer an enemy's country, it was the custom for the more eminent soldiers of fortune to engage themselves by reciprocal oaths to share the rewards of their service. So in the expedition of duke William, Endo and Pinco were sworn brothers, and copartners in the estate which the Conqueror allotted to them. So were Robert de Oily and Roger de Ivery; by virtue of which contract the said Robert gave one of his two honors in this county to his sworn bother Roger, from whom it was first called the manor of Ivery, as afterwards the honor of St. Walery, i. 76. Robertus de Oleis et Rogerus de Iverio fratres jurati, et per fidem et sacramentum confederati venerunt ad conquestum Angliæ, i. 78. No doubt this practice gave occasion to our prov. of sworn brother, and brethren in iniquity, because of their dividing plunder and spoil.

SYNODI. The ancient episcopal synods (which were held once a year about Easter) were composed of the bishop, as president; the dean cathedral, as representative of that collegiate body; the archdeacons, as at first only deputies or proctors of that inferior order of deacons; and the urban and rural deans, who represented all the parochial priests within their division, ii. 363.

SYNODALIA. Synodals or Synodies; a pecuniary rent, commonly two shillings, paid to the bishop at the time of his annual synod by every parochial priest. This burden was sometimes justly laid upon the appropriators: so at Merton, appropriated to the abbey of Eghesham, Solutionem decimæ cujuscunque currentis, ac synodaliū, et aliorum censuum ipsam ecclesiam pro tempore concernentium,—Religiosos et eorum successores supportare volumus, ii. 120.

SYNODALES testes. The urban and rural deans were at first so called from informing and attesting the disorders of clergy and people in the episcopal synod. But when they sunk in their authority, the synodical witnesses were a sort of impanelled jury, a priest and two or three laymen for every parish. And at last two for every diocese were annually chosen; till by degrees this office was devolved on the churchwardens, ii. 364. Juramentum synodale was the solemn oath taken by the said testes, as is now by churchwardens, to make their just presentments.

T.

T. R. E. Tempore regis Edwardi. It occurs frequently in the Domesday Survey, where the valuation of manors is recounted, what it was in the late reign, and what in the present. So—Manerium de Burcester T. R. E. valuit quindecim libras, modo sexdecim, i. 89.

TALLIA, talia. From Sax. tahan, or tælan, to account or estimate; or from the Fr. tailler, to cut. A tally, or piece of wood cut with indentures or notches in two corresponding parts, of which one was kept by the creditor, the other by the debtor. As now used by our brewers, &c. and was formerly the common way of keeping all accounts. Ut patet per talliam contra Willielmum Spinan collectorem redditus ejusdem anni, ii. 248. Receptis de redditu in Curtlington per talliam contra Willielmum Newman collectorem redditus ibidem, ii. 249. Hence to tell money, old Eng. a tolled sum. The tale of money. The tallier (talliator) of the Exchequer, whom we now call the teller.

TALLIARI de certo tallagio. To be assessed or taxed at such a rate or proportion, imposed by the king on his barons and knights, or by them on their inferior tenants.—33. Hen. III. rer illas xvi. libras ad quas homines qui fuerint G. de fridi de Crauncmh in Pydinton—nuper talliati fuerint, assignavit ponendas per visum Hugon-

nis Gargate; Et mandatum est vice com. Oxon. quod homines de prædicto manerio pro prædicto tallagio de cætero non distringat, i. 340. The inferior tenants sometimes made a composition with their lord for this tallage. As the tenants of Hugh de Plessets in Heddingdon; Quotiens dominus rex suos dominicos talliare contigerit, dabunt prædicto Hugoni et hæredibus suis quinque marcas, et dictus Hugo concessit pro se et hæredibus suis, quod iidem homines quieti sint de tallagio pro eisdem, i. 454. This tallage of the customary tenants was sometimes fixed and certain, and sometimes at the arbitrary pleasure of the lord; Extenta manerii de Ambrosden 28. Edw. I.—Sunt ibidem ix. cotterii, et reddunt per annum ix. sol. et debent talliari per annum de certo tallagio ad sex libras, ii. 412. In Burcester Kings-End; Quilibet custumarius domine debet talliari ad festum S. Michaelis pro voluntate domine priorissæ, i. 575. In illo manerio de Pedinton quilibet virgata terre dabit ad talagium domini contra natale Domini iis. ii. 137. Tenet quinque acras terre et duas acras prati de dominico pro dimidia marca per annum salvo tallagio domini ad festum natalis Domini, ii. 136. The lords in Ireland impose an arbitrary tax on their tenants, which they call a cutting, the literal meaning of the French tailage.

TAXA. The task, or labour of a workman. Triturator ad taxam, a tasker, or thrasher in the barn, who works by the great, or by the measure, not by the day; Et in solutis Johanni Leseby tritुरanti ad taxam xlv. quarteria frumenti ut patet per talliam hoc anno, capiendo pro quolibet quarterio iiii. den. ob. ii. 256.

TAXATIO Norwicensis. The valuation of ecclesiastical benefices made through every diocese in England, on occasion of the pope's granting to the king the tenth of all spirituals for three years. Which taxation was made by Walter, bishop of Norwich, delegated by the pope to this office in 38. Hen. III. and obtained till the 19th of Ed. I. when a new taxation, advancing the value, was made by the bishops of Lincoln and Winchester, at command of the king and permission of the pope, i. 351, 445.

TEMPORALIA. The lands, houses, tithes, and other fixed endowments of a bishopric or abbey, distinct from the spiritualities, which arose more immediately from the function and office, as synodals, pentecostals, &c. These temporalities, held by barony, were seized into the king's hands by the escheator at the death of every such prelate: and after the election and confirmation of a successor, there was a writ de restitutione temporalium, i. 471.

TEMPORALIA ecclesiæ parochialis. The manse, glebe, and tithe, as distinct from the voluntary oblations, and other contingent perquisites. Upon a judgment in the Exchequer against Ichel de Kerwent, rector of Bucknell, an. 26. Edw. I. his temporals were seized, and put into custody for two years, i. 471.

TENEMENTUM. Tenure, or holding.—Unam virgatam terræ in Meriton—habendam et tenendam—de tenemento domingrum templariorum, i. 178. Tenementa, were lands or houses or any yearly profits tenanted, or held by tenants.

TENTHS. First-fruits and tenths of all ecclesiastical benefices were paid to the see of Rome; and by pope Innocent IV. the tenths were first given to king Hen. III. an. 1253. for three years, which occasioned the Norwich taxation, an. 1254. which proved a great oppression to the clergy, and soon made more grievous. For when the pope had again granted the tenths to the king for three years, for a compensation of what they fell short of the due value, the king, in the 53rd year of his reign, an. 1269. made the clergy pay, within those three, the tenths of four years, i. 441.—An. 1288. 16. Ed. I. pope Nicholas IV. granted the tenths to the king for six years, toward his expedition to the holy land; and that they might be then collected to the full value, a new taxation, by the king's precept, was begun an. 1288. and finished an. 1291. 19, 20. Edw. I. by the bishops of Lincoln and Winchester, i. 445.

TERRA. In the form of inquisitions entered in the Domesday Register, this word terra, put simply, must signify arable land, as distinct from wood, meadow, and common pasture. So in Bercester; Ibi sunt 15. hidæ et dimidia—terra 22. carucatarum. De hac terra tres hidæ in dominio. So in Bucknel; Ibi sunt 7. hidæ. terra 10. carucatarum, &c. i. 88. I confess I do not build this on the authority of any author; but there seems to be no sense without this distinction, that the hides were a computation of the whole manor in gross: which was afterwards particularly described under the distinct heads of terra, or arable land; pratun, or meadow; silva, or wood land.

TERRA Normannorum. Such land in England as had been lately held by some noble Norman, who, by adhering to the French king, had forfeited his estate in this kingdom, which by this means becoming an escheat to the crown, was called Terra Normannorum, and restored, or otherwise disposed of at the king's pleasure. —8. Hen. III. rex vicecom. Oxon. salutem. Scias quod commisimus Thomæ Basset manerium de Kirtlington quæ est terra Normannorum, i. 276.

TESSELLATA pavimenta. The pavements in the tents of the Roman generals, made of curious small square marbles, bricks, or tiles, and called tessellæ, from the form of dies, i. 16. Such a tessellated pavement of porphyry marble was laid by king Edw. I. round the sepulchre of his father at Westminster, i. 17.

THANE. Sax. þegen, a military servant; from þenian, to serve; þening, any duty, charge, or office. Cýniger-þegen, the king's thane, or thane, was a Saxon lord, or nobleman. And after the conquest, the word was sometimes used to denote all persons of superior degree, i. 74.

THASSARE, tassare. To lay up hay or corn into a tass, toss, stack or mow; Lat. tassa, tassus, tassius; Sax. taŕ; Fr. tas. —Homines de Heddingdon qui carectas non habuerint venient cum furcis suis ad dictum feonum levandam et thassandum, i. 543. Qui carectas non habuerint adjuvabunt ad thassandum bladum. ib. —Pro victualibus emptis pro factoribus tassiorum prioris xiiid. ii. 214. Hence a tassel or tossel, to tass or toss, hay-toss; a mow of corn in a barn is called in Kent the toss. And by metaphor, the yard of a man is called his tass. Gawen Duglass calls a wood-stack or wood-pile, a tass of green stick. In old Eng. taas was any sort of heap. As Chaucer, To raise sake in the taas of bodics dead. And Lidgate Troil. l. iv. c. 30.

That after were found in the taas,

TITHE. Two parts of the tithe of a manor or parish were often given to a religious house: of which the reason was this. Tithe of England, in the time of Augustin the monk, was divided commonly into four parts: and in the reign of king Alfred reduced to three parts; of which a first part to the repair of churches, a second to the relief of the poor, and a third only to the maintenance of the parish priest. Hence the lords of manors, at their first building of churches, did often allot no more than that third part of tithes for an exhibition to the parish priest, and kept the other two parts in their own hands for the uses of the church and poor: till by degrees, they either gave in the two other parts to the parochial priest, or else, with the bishop's consent, assigned them to some religious house, i. 107. This was the meaning of giving two garbs, or sheaves, or sheaves, to the religious, while the third garb remained due to the parish priest, i. 110. So Brien Fitz-Count gave a third part of the tithe of his demesne in Hillingdon to the monastery of Evesham, i. 136. So Robert de Oily to the secular canons of St. George in the castle of Oxford; Duas partes decimæ de omni re quæ decimari solet de omnibus dominicis de Hokenorton, Swerefordia, &c. i. 142. In the parish of Comp-ton-Basset, com. Wilts. the persona or rector had—tertiam partem decimarum garbarum: and the prior and convent of Burcester had—duas partes decimarum garbarum, i. 288. By the laws of king Edgar, made about 670. if a thane, or lord, should have within his own fee a church with a burial place, i. e. a parish church, he must give the third part of his tithe to it. But if it had no privilege of burial, i. e. if it were only a chapel of ease depending on a mother church, then the lord was to maintain the priest out of his nine parts, ii. 280. Two parts of the tithe of the demesne of Heyford-Warine were given to the chapel of St. George's, and thence transferred to the abbey of Oseney, ii. 161. In the manor of Chesterton, the abbey of Gloucester had two parts of the tithe of the demesne land, which they firmed out to the abbot and convent of Oseney, who as appropriators had the third part, i. 314. This division of tithe was the occasion of disputes and quarrels, and therefore one part was often brought off, and united to the other; or at least one share rented out to those who had the other, that the whole tithe might be collected together. So the monks of Egnesham compounded with the canons of Burcester, to receive a yearly pension of twelve shillings in lieu of their two parts of tithe in Stratton, i. 201. Two parts of the tithe of Burcester belonged first to St. George's, and then to Oseney abbey, till in 28. Edw. I. the abbot and canons of Oseney resigned their right of two parts to the prior and canons of Burcester, who had before as appropriators a third part, for a rent or pension of sixty shillings yearly, i. 488. The arbitrary disposition of tithes by laymen, a conceit of Mr. Selden's, confuted, i. 144. Parochial tithes were sometimes given to the religious for admitting the donor's son into their house and order, i. 109. Tithes could not be lawfully detained or enjoyed by a layman; Salvis ecclesiæ nostræ de Missenden decimis ad capellam de Musewell spectantibus, et si qua sunt alia ad dictam capellam spectantia, quæ laico retinere non licet, i. 318. Tithes personal were always paid in country villages, as well as in populous towns and cities: and in appropriations, because hard to collect, they were generally allotted to the vicar.—So the prior and canons of St. Frideswide to the vicar of Oakle; Omnes decimas personales in dictis villis provenientes de questu eorum qui de mercatura sua vivunt, ii. 81. So the prior and convent of Burcester to the vicar of that church; Vicarius et successores decimas personales percipient et habebunt, prædialibus eorundem locorum nobis et successoribus nostris omnino reservatis, ii. 393.

TITHING-MEN. In the Saxon times, for the better conservation of peace, and the more easy administration of justice, every hundred was divided into ten districts or tithings, each tithing made up of ten friborgs, each friborg of ten families, and within every such tithing—statuerunt justitiarios super quosque decem friborgos, quos decanos possumus appellare, Anglice vero penhefod. i. e. caput de decem. Which tithing-men, or civil deans, were to examine and determine all lesser causes between villages and neighbours, but to refer all greater matters to the superior courts, which had a jurisdiction over the whole hundred, ii. 337.

TODDEZ. Perhaps from Sax. toðelan, to divide, or parcel out. A tod of wool is a parcel containing twenty-eight pounds, or two stone, by stat. 11. Car. I. cap. 32. But in these parts the wool-men buy in twenty-nine pounds to the tod, though they sell out but twenty-eight. Computant de decem libris xviii. sol. vi. den. receptis de xxiii. todde lanæ puræ venditæ cuidam mercatori Oxon. hoc anno, per le todde ix. sol. vi. den. ii. 250.

TOFTA, Toftum. A toft, the ground which has been the site of a late messuage, or the place where any mansion or building lately stood.—Ratum habemus et stabile donum quod fecit de uno tofto et crofto, i. 434.

TOLL. Lat. tolnetum, thelonium, a Gr. τελώνιον. In the Saxon charters thol was the liberty of buying and selling, or keeping a market in such a manor. In later times, it signified the customary dues or rent paid to the lord of a manor for his profits of the fair or market, called the tolling-pence. Mon. Ang. tom. ii. p. 286. Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, gave to the abbey of Tame, centum solidos de thelonio Bannebiræ, i. e. two hundred shillings yearly rent out of his toll at Banbury, i. 129. King Henry II. granted a privilege to the tenants and traders within the honor of Wallingford, ut quieti sint de thelonio, i. 157. Edmund, earl of Cornwall, granted to the rector and Bonhomines of Asherugge and their tenants, ut in omnibus burgis et villatis nostris, et etiam in singulis nundinis et mercatis nostris libere valeant emere et vendere omnes mercandisas absque ullo theloneto seu stallagio, i. 439. Hence the toll-booth, or toll-sey, or place where such custom was paid. This toll at public fairs and markets was paid at the sound of a bell, as we have now a market-bell, which possibly might give name to the tolling of a bell, and to the proverb of being tolled in, or drawn into a bargain. In Derbyshire they say, thole a while, i. e. stay a while.

TORCEYS, torchia. Fr. torché; Eng. a torch; a Lat. torquis; Fr. tort, a wreath; or torris, a fire-brand.—In octo libris cere

emptis Oxon. eodem die ad faciendum ii. torceys versus natale Domini ad aulam prioris iii. sol. ii. 253.

TORNEAMENTA. Tourneaments; military exercises of armed horsemen to improve their strength and activity in war. From the Fr. tourner, to turn about. They were invented in France by Geoffry de Pruilli, who was killed at Anjou, an. 1066. Justs and tourneaments are commonly joined in representing the celebration of these manly sports; but there was this difference between them; tourneaments implied the mutual engagement of several sides and parties; but justs were the single combats of any two horsemen, one against the other. The first tourneaments authorized in England were in 5. Rich. I. when one of the three solemn places appointed by the king was Bayard's Green, between Mixbury and Brackley, i. 213. Piers de Gaveston, in 2. Edw. II. proclaimed tourneaments to be kept nigh his castle at Wallingford, wherein he highly affronted the English nobility, i. 511. Solemn justs performed at Witney, com. Oxon. between Humphrey Bohun, earl of Hereford, on the one part, and Aymer Valence, earl of Pembroke, on the other, i. 554. King Edward III. to express his joy for the birth of a seventh son at Woodstock, appointed public justs and tourneaments in that town, to which the nobility resorted in great numbers, ii. 113<sup>a</sup>.

TOTHLAND. A certain measure of land, in the dimension whereof I can find no direction, and can make no safe conjecture; Cum una virgata terræ, et cum una tothlanda, et octo acris, quæ fuerunt datæ in dedicatione (ecclesiæ de Heyford ad pontem) Wulfwini episcopi Dorcestriæ, ii. 163.

TOUGH. The beam of a plough, or that part by which it is drawn along. From Sax. teon, to draw. Hence tough, that can be drawn out in length. To tow, or draw along a boat. Tow in spinning, or ductile flax, or hemp. Pro uno vomere et una cultura et dimidia tough cum uno ploughsho, ii. 213.

TRACTUS-UM. Traces by which horses draw a cart or waggon. Par tractuum, a pair of traces; Pro una cart-sadel, una cohero, cum uno pari tractuum emptis xivd. ii. 213. Hence Prov. He is out of his traces, i. e. He is out of his way of business. A trace or track, or way drawn or marked out, by which a follower may trace and track the foregoer. The Lat. traho was by the Saxons turned into drag; whence to drag, to draw, to drain; to drate in the North, to draw out one's words in speaking. Dree in the North, long and tedious, as a dree way. A dray, or cart. A dray-horse. A drudge. Old Eng. to dretche, i. e. to protract or spin out the time. A dretching, or delay.

TRANSLATARE, pro transferre. To remove, or transfer; Tunc translatavit se dicta domina usque ad Swaneton, et ibi obiit, i. 399.

TREMUTA, Treumia, Tremellum. The hooper or hopper in a mill, into which the corn is put to fall from thence to the grinding stones. Perhaps from the similitude to the tramela, or tramellum, or net, which we still retain in the word trammel, a net to catch larks. And possibly the Lat. tremellum, and tramallum, might be both of Saxon original, from trpa, or trpe, two; and mæl, a cross; alluding to the travers form of the holes in a net. Do libere molere in molendino meo, ita quod immediate post bladum existens in treumia, quod vulgariter dicitur ingranatum, eorum bladum moletur. Du Fresne, in voce Treumia.—Baldwin Wae to the priory of Deping; Sciendum tamen est quod prædicti monachi facient sectam molendini mei tam de blado suo quam hominum suorum; Ita quod ipsi habeant primam molituram post bladum quod invenerint in tremello. Mon. Ang. vol. i. p. 470. a. So Wido de Meriton in his charter to the Knights Templars; Concesserunt mihi fratres unam libertatem ad suum molendinum scilicet molendi segetem pro multura reddenda pro segete quæ est in tremuta, i. 167. Our hopper seems from the Sax. hop, a circle, or hoop; or hoppan, to hop, dance, or turn about, to hobble, &c. as is implied by Chaucer, The hopper waggeth to and fro. Hence a hoppet, in Lincolnshire, is a little hand-basket. A hop or hoop, in Yorkshire, is a measure containing a peck, or a quarter of a strike. A young child danced in the arms is by metaphor called a little hoppet. Any one, whose lameness lies in the hip, is called hopper-arsed.

Tilting breathed its last when king Ch. I. left London. The tilt-yard was where the guard house is now, opposite to Whitehall. In those daies all gentlemen of a reool. per an. kept one hors or more for men at arms. J. A. Gent. p. 2.

GLOSSARY.

TRINODA necessitas. A threefold necessary tax or imposition toward the repairing of bridges, the maintaining of castles or garrisons, and an expedition against invading enemies. In the grant and conveyance of lands, they were many times excepted from all other secular service; Excepta trinoda necessitate—Exceptis his tribus, expeditione, pontis et arcis constructione.

TUELLA, toacula, toalia, tobalia, Fr. toaille. A towel, or linen cloth to wipe the hands. Menagius derives it from the Lat. torale, quod toro vel mensæ adstruebatur. But it is as wise to conjecture that our towel might be from the Sax. top, i. e. tow, or course hemp; as well as a napkin from the Sax. hnoppe, the nap or lint of cloth. Inter ornamenta ecclesiæ—Zona cum duabus tuallis benedictis, ii. 285.

TURNUS vicecomitis. The sheriff's turn or court kept twice every year within a month after Easter, and a month after Michaelmas, as the court-leet of the county, at which all free tenants were obliged to do their suit and service, except those who compounded at a certain yearly sum, for the privilege of sending only one person to attend the sheriff, to represent and excuse the lord and tenants of that manor. Bardulfus de Cestreton debet viii. sol. de turno vicecomitis, et cum vicecomes tenet turnus suos in prædicto hundredo, idem Bardulfus mittet ibi unum de suis ad petendam libertatem suam, et habebit, nec ipse nec homines sui venient ibi, i. 450.

V.

VADIUM. A pledge or surety. Ponere per vadium, to take security or bail for the appearance of a delinquent in some courts of justice. Edwardus rex vicecom. Oxon. salutem. Præcipimus tibi sicut alias tibi præcepimus, quod ponas per vadium et salvos plegios Johannem de Burey, i. 447.

VALECTUS, Valettus, Vasletus, Vassalettus. A young vassal, at first in an honourable sense for the son of a nobleman, afterward for an armiger, or military attendant, and at last for an inferior servant. Whence a varlet, or vile fellow, a valet de chambre; and hence possibly a servant's vales, or money given to those valets; Et in blodeo pauno empto pro armigeris et valectis prioris, ii. 256. Et in stipendio Johannis Baldwin valecti cameræ prioris hoc anno xiii. sol. iv. den. ib.—Et in datis cuidam valetto forestæ portanti carnes ferinas priori in crastino ejusdem festi xii. den. ii. 259.

VANDALEN. A German word to wander; Sax. panðpian. Hence the people who came out of Scythia, and settled on the coast of the Baltic sea toward Germany, were called by the Romans Vandali, and by the Saxons Wandalens, and Wendelens, who being employed as auxiliary soldiers in this island, gave name to Wendleburg near Alchester, i. 18.

VANYS. Lat. vannus; Sax. pana; A vane or fane; a versatile ornament on the top of a house or tower, to shew the turning and setting of the wind; Cum duobus ventilogiis videlicet vanys de tyn emptis de fabro de Cherlton ponendis super utrumque finem prædicti dormitorii, v. sol. ii. den. ii. 255. Hence a fanne with which they ventilate, or winnow corn. The fan of a lady, to cool her face.

VASSALLUS. A diminutive from vassus, a military servant. The title was afterwards given to servile tenants, whose grant, when they made any grant or assignation of land held by them, was to be confirmed by their lord. Sir Richard d'Amory computing for the lands of the Knights Templars, escheated to the king 2. Ed. II. accounted forty shillings and ten-pence for the rent of vassals and cottagers, i. 510.

VASTUM. A waste, or common, lying open to the cattle of all tenants who have a right of commonage, which right was sometimes determined by a trial at law; Thomas de Fekenham debet regi quinque marcas et unum palefridum, sic quod inquisitione fiat utrum membrum illud de manerio de Bruhul, quod idem Thomas tenet, debeat participare de vasto manerii de Bruhul ratione communæ ejusdem manerii, in qua communa nihil habent, ut dicunt, i. 239. Vastum forestæ vel bosci, when part of a forest or wood had the trees and underwood destroyed, and lay in a manner waste and barren.—Sciatis quod de vastis nostris in foresta nostra de Bernwode, in com. Buck. dedimus, &c. i. 501. Si boscus domini de Pidenton abeat in vastum, tum acquietabunt dominum pro dictis housbote et heybote, ii. 138. To waste or destroy the vert of the forest was a trespass against the assise or laws of the forests.—Dicunt quod priorissa de Littlemore devastavit boscum suum de Shottore contra assisam forestæ, ii. 140.

VENATIO. Sometimes used for the exercise of hunting, and sometimes for venison. If any without licence hunted within the liberties of the king's forest, a severe penalty was imposed at the next swanemote: which fines or amercements were not allowed to the forester, but commonly reserved to the king. So when William Fitz-Nigel enjoyed several privileges as forester of Bernwode, it was—exceptis indictamentis de viridi et venatione, quæ domino regi omnino reservabantur, i. 99.

VENTILARE. To fan, or winnow corn. Ventilatrices, the women who were employed in this work; Et in ventilatricibus conductis in grosso ad ventilanda omnimoda grana trituratione infra prioratum hoc anno, ii. 256. Sax. vinð; Eng. wind; thence a windore. In Kent the swaths of grass when turned and a little dried are cast into wind-rows, to be farther exposed to the wind and sun. In some south parts, the borders of a field dug up and laid in rows, in order to have the dry mould carried on upon the land, to improve it, are called by this same name of wind-rows.

VESTURA, Vestitura. A vest, vesture, advesture. An allowance of some set portion of the products of the earth, as corn, grass, wood, &c. as part of a salary to some officer or servant, for their livery or vest. So foresters had a certain allowance of timber and underwood yearly out of the forest for this use; Annuatim percipiendum tantum de roboribus et brueriis quantum pro vestura indignerit.—Liberare faciatis eidem tanta robora et brueria quanta indigent usque ad xls. pro vestura sic restricta, ii. 318.

DE VI LAICA AMOVENDA. When the bishop of a diocese has certified into the court of Chancery, that the rector or vicar of any church within his jurisdiction is kept out of his benefice by any lay force or power; then may a writ be granted to the sheriff to remove all such violent force and resistance; which writ is therefore entitled, De vi laica amovenda.—Edwardus rex vicecom. Oxon. salutem.—Tibi præcipimus quod omnem vim laicam quæ se tenet in ecclesia de Bukenhull, quo minus idem episcopus officium suum spirituale ibidem exercere possit, sine dilatione amoveres ab eadem, i. 477.

VICARIA. At first no more than any curacy, or donative, till by ordination and fixed endowment it was made presentative, and called perpetual. Five marks were at first the common allotment to a perpetual vicar; Vicaria in capella de Hedindon consistit in omnibus obventionibus altaris cum minutis decimis totius parochie, exceptis decimis agnorum, et decimis casei, de curia domini provenientibus.—Et valet vicaria quinque marcas et amplius, tota autem ecclesia xx. marcas, ii. 158. An advance was afterwards made to ten marks, and sometimes to ten pounds. So in the ordination of Merton vicarage, an. 1357, 31. Edw. III. Reservata congrua porcione pro vicario perpetuo—quam porcionem in decem marcis numerate pecunie sterlingorum fore et consistere duntaxat decernimus, ii. 119. The vicarage of Churchill, com. Oxon. ordained an. 14. Edw. III. consisted—in decem libris argenti solvendis vicario ad duos anni terminos per priorem et canonicos de S. Frideswida, et de manso, &c. competenti et honesto: et in quinque acris terre arabilis in uno campo, et quinque in alio, ii. 149. Endowment of the vicarage of Chesterton, ii. 203; of Burcester, ii. 224. The same church had sometimes a rectory and vicarage separate and distinctly endowed. So at Chesterton, com. Oxon.—Willielmus archidiaconus London. ratione terre et heredis Roberti de Cesterton in manu sua existentium præsentat ad ecclesiam de Cesterton, salva vicaria Ranulphi de Besacii quam habet in eadem, i. 271. When a vicar was too poorly endowed, he complained to the diocesan, who had power to augment his portion out of the appropriated tithe. So the vicar of Elsteld, nigh Oxford, applying himself to Oliver, bishop of Lincoln, got an augmentation of three seams or quarters of corn from the prior and canons of St. Frideswide, who were the sordid appropriators, ii. 163. Some imperious appropriators, to prove themselves lords over the servile vicar, expressly covenanted for a heriot to be paid them at the death of every vicar; Vicarius de Cesterton post ejus decessum dabit heriettam rectori et conventui de Asherugge, ii. 203. And sometimes against all equity and conscience laid the repair of the chancel on the poor vicar, ibid. Yet the case of vicars was generally better in the days of popery, because their own diet, and suitable accommodation for their vicar and clerk, and the keeping of a horse, were commonly allowed them by the convent, and taken in specie at their court, or mansion house, in the parish, whenever the religious resided there for their health, their business, or their pleasure. So at Burcester, ii. 224. It was very happy for the interest of the church and clergy, that at the first endowment of vicarages the portion was assigned in improvable land and tithes, not in a stated sum of money, ii. 295. In the new valuation of church benefices, 26. Hen. VIII. vicarages were computed as if the greater tithes were included. So as the first-fruits and tenths fell as heavy on the vicar, as if he had been really rector of the same church, ii. 336.

VILLA Regia. A title given to those country villages where the kings of England had a royal seat, or palace, and held the manor in their own demesne. So Brill, com. Buck. was called villa regia, i. 72. So Hedingdon, com. Oxon. &c.

VILLATA. A small village opposed to burgus, a larger town; In omnibus burgis et villatis nostris, i. 439.

VILLANUS. A villain, or rather a villane. Some pretend it from the Fr. vilain; Lat. vilis, base and vile. But rather from villa, a country farm, (as rustici, coloni, &c.) where these men of low and servile condition had some small portion of cottages and lands allotted to them; for which they were depending on the lord, and bound to certain works and other corporal service. They were of two sorts; 1. Vil-lanes in gross, who as to their persons, their issue, and their stock, were a sort<sup>b</sup> of absolute slaves, the sole property of their lord, moveable and alienable at pleasure. 2. Villanes regardant or appendant to a manor, who were ascribed as members of such a fee, and as a pertenance of it, descended to the heir, or passed along to every new lord. For their service, they held some small portion of house and land in villanage. In Doomsday Inquisition these villanes were recounted as an emolument and appendage of every manor; so in Burcester twenty-eight villanes, in Bucknel six villanes, &c. i. 89. Their persons were conveyed along with their lands so held in villanage; Wido de Arcines gave to the abbey of Oseney his land in Mixbury, Sex virgatas terræ de villenagio, cum villanis et eorum sectis et servitiis, i. 299. William de Longspe confirmed to the priory of Burcester land in Wrechwike; Cum villanis et eorum sequelis et catallis, i. 305. So Robert de Amory to the abbey of Oseney two hides in Cherterton. So Hamo de Gattone conveyed his lands in Wrechwike; Cum omnibus villanis et eorum tenementis et sequelis, i. 384. Villanos cum villanagiis omnibus catallis et tota sequela ipsorum, i. 407. Una cum villanis, coterellis, eorum catallis, servitiis, sectis et sequelis, i. 439. In the charter of Gilbert Basset and Egeline his wife to their priory at Burcester, Terram nostram de Votisdun et de Westcote cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, scilicet dominium nostram cum vilnagio, i. 210. The villanes, over and above their operations, or customary labours, paid an annual rent in money. So in the extent of the manor of Ambrosden taken in 28. Edw. I.—Sunt ibidem triginta et septem villani, quorum quisque tenet unam virgatam terræ, et reddunt per an. ixl. vs. ii. 411. This tenure is now extinct, yet the footsteps of it still remain in those customary services which are now reserved from some tenants to the lord, as particularly<sup>c</sup> from the tenants of Mr. John Coker, lord of the manor of Burcester Kings-End.

<sup>b</sup> "In England we had many bond servants untill the time of your last civil warrs, and I think the laws of villenage are still in force, of which the latest are the strongest. And now since slaves were made free, which were of great use and service, there are grown up a rabble of rogues, cut-purses, and other like trades, slaves in nature, though not in law." Sir Walter Raleigh's Hist. part v. p. 326.

GLOSSARY.

VICINETUM, Visne, Visnage. Neighbourhood. All persons to be returned on a jury as legal men, were to be de eodem vicineth, formerly of the same hundred, as now only of the same county; Electi sunt duodecim homines legales de vicineto, i. 184. Per sacramentum proborum et legalium hominum de vicineto de Chesterton, i. 525.

VIRGATA terræ. A yard-land; Sax. gýpð-land, gýpð, a rod or yard; gýpðan, to gird; in the North, to gird. Hence a yard, a close, a backside; in the North, a garth. A garden, Fr. jardin. A garland. A garret. A garter. A girdle. A horse-girt, &c. A gird-land, or yard-land, was originally no more than a certain extent or compass of ground surrounded with such bounds and limits. And therefore the quantity was uncertain, according to the difference of place and custom. They reckoned in some parts forty, in others thirty, twenty, and at Wimbleton, in Surrey, but fifteen acres. Spelman. Gloss. Five virgates of land made the fourth part of a knight's fee in Otendone, com. Oxon. 3. K. Steph. i. 125. Two virgates, or yard-lands, in Chesterton, 24. Hen. III. contained fourscore and ten acres, i. 316.

VIRIDE, Vert, or green. Whatever grows in a forest, and bears boughs and leaves for the covering and shelter of the deer. Either over-vert, hautbois, high-wood, timber-trees; or nether-vert, soubois, under-wood. All which viridarius the veredar was to supervise and maintain, and to bring indictments at the swanemote against those who wasted or trespassed on the vert. The amercements for such offences were generally reserved to the king. So William Fitz-Nigel held the forestership of Bernwode; Exceptis indictamentis de viridi et venatione, quæ domino regi omnino reservabantur, i. 98. In all inquisitions taken of the state of forests, the viridar was one of the jury; Inquisitis captis—de foresta de Bernwode—domini Walteri Upton, Johannis Graundon viridarii, i. 295.

VISUS Forestariorum. View of the foresters. When the liberty of houstote, heybote, fire-wood, or any the like privilege, was granted within the bounds of a forest, it was not to be taken but—ad visum forestariorum, upon view and approbation of the foresters, i. 223. Thomas de

S. Walery granted to the nuns of Stodley qualibet septimana anam carectam ligni mortui in bosco suo de Horton per visum forestarii sui ejusdem nemoris, i. 236. The profits of this view were farmed or rented from the king; Certus visus valet per annum ii. sol. et reddit domino regi pro prædicta hida et certo visu x. sol. i. 443.

VISUS custodis manerii. The inspection or care taken by the steward or bailiff of a manor, for the doing right and justice to the lord; Rex illas sexdecim libras et dimidiam marcæ ad quas homines de Pydinton nuper talliati fuerant, assignavit ponendas per visum Hugonis Gargate custodis prædicti manerii in prædicto manerio instaurandum, i. 340.

VISUS Franciplegii. Vide Franciplegium.

VIVARIUM. Any place for the nurture and confinement of living creatures, as a park, a warren, a fishpond, &c.—Illud tenementum cum vivario, et aliis pertinentiis, i. 316. Et in datis prioris servientibus purgantibus vivarium versus molendinum ante idem festum iv. den. ii. 259.

W.

WADDEMOLE, now called woadmel, and in Oxfordshire woddenell, a coarse sort of stuff used for the covering of the collars of cart-horses. Mr. Ray, in his Collection of East and South Country Words, describes it to be a hairy coarse stuff, made of Island wool, and brought thence by our seamen to Norfolk, Suffolk, &c. Perhaps from the Sax. weod, grass, hay, weed, and mele, any hollow continent, as if a collar stuffed with straw or hay. 'Or possibly from the Island. wadu, a rope, or any wod of coarse hemp, and mel, to beat or malt; Et in quinque virgatis de wadde-mole emptis pro coleris equinis hoc anno ii. sol. i. den. ii. 253.

WAKE, Vigil, Eve. Feast of the dedication of churches. The original and continued observation historically delivered, ii. 300.

WAPENTACHIUM. A wapentake. A portion or division of a county in the North, of the same extent as a hundred in other parts. The laws of Edward Conf.

GLOSSARY.

cap. 33. derive it from the Sax. þapnu; weapons, and þaccæpe, to confirm, or þac, a touch, because in their solemn meetings they clattered their arms as a token of agreement. But Jo. Brompton gives this allusion; Wapentake Anglice idem est quod arma capere, eo quod in primo adventu novi domini solebant tenentibus pro homagio reddere arma sua. X. Script. col. 957. To which custom Ranulph of Chester refers the word in his Hist. l. i. cap. 5. This derivation, as most agreeable, is confirmed by Mr. Somner, who, both in his Glossary, and in his Saxon Dictionary, deduces the word from Sax. þapen, arms, or weapons; and þæcan, or rather betæcan, to deliver up; from whence, says Mr. Somner, to betake, or commit; and tacke, in the North, for a firm, or any tenement let out for rent; Cum molendinis, firmis, wapentachiis, et hundredis affirmatis, i. 506. Cum villis et hamlettis, terris, tenementis, hundredis, et wapentagiis, i. 559.

WARANTUM. Right and title to justify and defend a possession. Spelman and Somner deduce it from the Sax. þepian, to defend and to beware. But Du Fresne (possibly with less reason) chooses to derive it from the Lat. creantare, to verify or secure; from whence, in his opinion, the Fr. granter, and garantir, &c. Placitum de quo waranto, an action brought by the king to cite the defendant to prove his right of possession; Johannes filius Nigelli sen. summonitus fuit ad respondendum domino regi de placito quo waranto clamat habere visum franciplegii, i. 442. Thence a warrant, or writ to authorize the apprehension of a debtor, or delinquent. To warrant any matter, to defend and justify the truth of it.

WARANTIA. A defence and legal assertion of right and title. Vocare ad warantiam, to desire a court of justice to cite or warn in a party to warrant or defend a title, which as superior lord of the fee he is bound to maintain. So John de Peyto being sued for the manor of Pidington, which he held under Sir John de Sutton and Isabel his wife,—per Richardum de Sheldon attornatum suum vocat et venit inde ad warantiam Johannem Sutton de Duddele, chevalier, et Isabellam uxorem ejus, ut habeat eos hic in octabis S. Michaelis per auxilium curie, ii. 112.

WARDA. Sax. weapd, guard, ward, or custody. Before the stat. of 12. Car. II. cap. 24. which dissolved the court of wards, the heirs of all the king's tenants, who held in capite, or by military service, during their nonage, or minority, were in the ward, or custody of the king, or others by him appointed. The king disposed and committed these wards, as a compensation for debts and services,—Faciemus eidem Radulpho et hæredibus suis competens escambium in wardis et eschaetis ad valentiam prædicti manerii, i. 286.

WARDE-PENNY, war-penny, war-scot, warth. A customary due paid to the sheriff and other officers for maintaining watch and ward, payable at the feast of St. Martin. In the beginning of Edw. I. Sir Bardulph de Chesterton, held the manor of Chesterton; Et debet sectam ad hundredum de Chadlington—et debet quinque denarios de warde-pennie ad festum St. Martini, i. 450.

WARECTARE. From carectum, a plough. To plough up land in order to let it lie fallow for the better improvement; which ground, in Kent, we call summer-land. Mense Aprili warectandi erit tempus idoneum et amœnum, cum terra fregerit post carrucam. Fleta, l. 2. cap. 33. sect. 4. Homines de Hedingdon uno die warectabunt terram domini, prout decet, ad unum diem cum carucis suis, i. 453. Thence warectum, a fallow field; which Sir Edward Coke poorly fancies to be warectum, quasi vere novo victum vel subactum. Campus warectabilis, campus ad warectam, terra warectata, ad warectandum, tempus warectationis.—Walterus prior Berncestrie per fratrem Thomam de Meriton fieri fecit quoddam Inhoc in campo warectabili utriusque Ernicote, i. 410. Sir Roger de Amory gave to the nuns of Godestow,—viginti quinque acras in Blechesdon ad seminandum, et totidem ad warectandum. Mon. Ang. tom. i. p. 425. In manerio de Pydinton quelibet acra valet sex denariis tam warectata, quam seminata, ii. 136. In communi pastura, sicut in bosco et in campis ad warectam possunt sustentari xvi. vacce et unus taurus cum boviculis, ibid. Dominus Lestraunge habet duas separales pasturas in hoc campo, et sunt separales usque ad finem sancti Jacobi apostoli omni anno, excepto anno quo campus prædictus

jacet warectatus, ii. 193. Communam in campis de Burncester, tam post blada vineta, quam tempore warectationis omni anno, ii. 198.

WARRENA. A warren, from Sax. pepan, to guard or keep. Libera warrena, free warren, was a liberty granted by the king to the lord of a manor, that within such an extent he should keep and preserve, and take to his own use, fish, fowl, and other game, which no other person should hunt or destroy without leave of the lord, i. 350.

WAYNSCOTS. Deal boards, to wainscot a wall. German wandschotten, from old Teuton. wand, a wall, and schotten, to cover or defend; Et in sex estregbords videlicet waynscots emptis apud Sterisbrugge ii. sol. iii. den. ii. 254.

WEYF, wayf, wavium. From Sax. pæg, a way; a Lat. via. For the Latin v, consonant, was by the Romans themselves pronounced as our w; vinum, winum; vallum, wallum, &c. which was the reason why the Saxons changed the letter v into w, as wine, wall, way, &c. To which the Britains prefixed a g; as vectis, wight, gwydh; venta, went, gwent. So wavium, waif, gwaif.—Recognitum est militibus et liberis hominibus—quod ad nos spectat le gwaif, i. 275. Waif was felons' goods, or things feloniously stolen, left by the thief, and forfeited to the king, or to the lord, who enjoys the right by a grant from the crown; Emma Cooke domum Johannis Attewode in Overwynchendon fregit, et xix. marcas—felonice furata fuit—que seiscite fuerunt ibidem tanquam wayf in manum prioris, ut de antiqua consuetudine fieri consuevit, ii. 151.

WITHEYS. Any low place where willows grow. From wið, a willow-tree; wiðe, a with, or with—Tres acrae apud le whitheys, i. 567. Dimidia roda jacet ad witheys juxta pratum prioris, i. 574.

Y

YCONOMI Ecclesiae. Pro oiconomi. Churchwardens. Qui ibidem computum yconomorum dictae ecclesiae de Oukle,—Et ipsos onerent sive liberent, et novos yconomos eligant seu deputent, ii. 312.
